

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased by 50% (Mental Health Foundation 1999). The prevalence of mental health problems has increased in all age groups, but the increase has been most marked in the young (Mental Health Foundation 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the mental health needs of young people (Mental Health Foundation 1999). CRIMINAL LAW.

A DIGEST
OF THE
(CRIMES AND PUNISHMENTS).

SIR JAMES FITZJAMES STEPHEN, K.C.S.I., D.C.L.
ONE OF THE JUDGES OF THE HIGH COURT, QUEEN'S BENCH DIVISION.

THIRD EDITION.

PREFACE TO THE THIRD EDITION.

AFTER the publication of the first edition of this work I obtained the permission of Earl Cairns, then Lord Chancellor, to draw a Criminal Code which was based upon it. The Code was drawn and introduced into Parliament in the session of 1878 by the late Lord Justice Holker, then Attorney-General. It included both the definitions of indictable offences and a system of criminal procedure.

A commission consisting of Lord Blackburn, Mr. Justice Barry, Lord Justice Lush, and myself, was appointed to report upon the Draft Code of 1878. The report was issued in 1879, containing by way of appendix the Draft Code as revised by the Commissioners. This was introduced into Parliament in 1879, but was not carried mainly for want of time.

In 1882 the part of the Code which related to Criminal Procedure was mentioned in the Queen's Speech as a Government measure, but it was postponed to business of greater urgency.

A History of the Criminal Law by me has just been published by Messrs. Macmillan and Co., which contains the history of all the more important definitions of crimes, and of every step in the procedure for their punishment, and of every Court by which the law is put in force. A Digest of the Law relating to Criminal Procedure by myself and my eldest son has also been published by Messrs. Macmillan. The three books taken together will be found to give first a complete account of the history of the whole subject, next a systematic statement of existing law relating to it, and lastly a criticism upon every part of it.

The principal alterations made in the present edition consist in the omission of certain matter which I have transferred to the History of the Criminal Law, and in the addition of references to the Draft Code of 1879, and also to the History of the Criminal Law. I have also given the effect of the few cases on the substantive Criminal Law which have been decided, and of such statutes as have been passed since 1877. I have omitted an Introduction discussing the subject of Codification, as its possibility can no longer be reasonably doubted. Some remarks on the subject will however be found in Chapter XXXIV. Vol. III. p. 347—67 of my History.

J. F. STEPHEN.

A DIGEST OF THE CRIMINAL LAW.

PRELIMINARY.

EXPLANATION OF TERMS.

CHAP. I.—PUNISHMENTS.

CHAP. II.—CLASSIFICATION OF CRIMES AND GENERAL PROVISIONS AS TO THEIR PUNISHMENT.

CHAP. III.—GENERAL EXCEPTIONS.

CHAP. IV.—PARTIES TO THE COMMIS-SION OF CRIMES—PRINCIPAL AND ACCESSORY.

CHAP. V.—DEGREES IN THE COMMIS-SION OF CRIME—INCITEMENT—CON-SPIRACY—ATTEMPTS.

EXPLANATION OF TERMS.

MAXIMUM PUNISHMENT.

WHENEVER it is stated that any offender is liable, on conviction of any offence, to a specified term of penal servitude as a maximum punishment, the meaning (unless any qualification is specified) is that he may be sentenced to that or to any shorter term of penal servitude not being less than five years, or, instead of such term of penal servitude, to imprisonment for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour.

If the maximum punishment specified is a term of imprisonment with hard labour or a fine, the meaning (unless any qualification is specified) is that the offender may be sentenced to that or to any shorter term of imprisonment, with or without hard labour, or to any smaller fine.

If the maximum punishment specified is a term of hard labour (as distinguished from imprisonment with hard labour) the meaning is that the offender must be sentenced to imprisonment with hard labour, but may be sentenced for any term not exceeding the term specified.

SOLITARY CONFINEMENT AND WHIPPING.

The letter S at the end of a reference to a statute means that an offender against the enactment referred to may be sentenced to solitary confinement. The letter W that such offender may, if a male under sixteen years of age, be sentenced to whipping.

PENAL SERVITUDE AND TRANSPORTATION.

In cases in which the punishment appointed for an offence by statute is transportation, penal servitude has been uniformly substituted. In cases in which the minimum amount of penal servitude is three years, five years has been uniformly substituted, in order to give the effect of 16 & 17 Vict. c. 99 ; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3 ; and 27 & 28 Vict. c. 47, s. 2 ; which substituted penal servitude for transportation, and a minimum term of five for a minimum term of three years penal servitude.

MINIMUM PUNISHMENTS.

It is enacted by 9 & 10 Vict. c. 24, s. 1, that "in all cases where the Court is now (June, 1846) by law empowered or required to award a sentence of transportation exceeding seven years, it shall be lawful for such Court at its discretion to award a sentence of transportation for a term of years not less than seven years, or to award such sentence of imprisonment for any period not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, as shall to the Court in its discretion appear just under all the circumstances."

The effect of this enactment is given when necessary by substituting the expression "shall be liable to a maximum punishment of — years penal servitude," for the expression "shall be liable to be transported for — years."

To avoid constant repetition of the same references, the Acts mentioned under this and the last heading are not referred to in the notes giving the authorities for the various articles hereinafter contained.

ALTERATIONS IN LANGUAGE OF STATUTES.

The future and the past future are uniformly altered to the present tense. Where "shall" is used as an imperative "must" is substituted. Where the language of a statute appeared needlessly verbose for common purposes, the leading word or an equivalent is preserved in the text, and the words omitted are inserted in a foot note for reference if necessary.

The language of the statutes is in most cases rearranged for the sake of clearness; but the words "redrawn," "condensed," or others of the same sort, indicate the cases in which the greatest alterations have been made.

DRAFT CODE.

The expression "Draft Code" means the Draft Code appended to the Report of the Criminal Code Commission published in 1879, and marked C. 2345.

CHAPTER I.

OF PUNISHMENTS.

ARTICLE 1.

PUNISHMENTS.

THE following punishments are inflicted by the law of England for the crimes hereinafter defined:—Death, penal servitude, imprisonment, detention in a reformatory school, subjection to police supervision, whipping, fines, putting under recognizance.

ARTICLE 2.

PUNISHMENT OF DEATH.

² The punishment of death is inflicted by hanging the offender by the neck till he is dead.

ARTICLE 3.

PUNISHMENT OF PENAL SERVITUDE.

² As to treatment of prisoners under sentence of death in prison, see 28 & 29 Vict. c. 126, Sch. 1. 61. As to the history of the punishment of death and benefit of clergy, see 1 Hist. Cr. Law, 457-80.

³ 16 & 17 Vict. c. 99; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3; 27 & 28 Vict. c. 47; and see 5 Geo. 4, c. 84. The subject of the nature of the punishment of penal servitude is discussed at length in R. v. Mount, L. R. 6 P. C. 283. See, too, 1 Hist. Cr. Law, 480-483.

ARTICLE 4.

PUNISHMENTS OF IMPRISONMENT.

¹ The punishment of imprisonment consists in the detention of the offender in prison, and in his subjection to the discipline appointed for prisoners during the period expressed in the sentence.

Imprisonment is of three kinds:

- (i.) Imprisonment with hard labour.
- (ii.) Imprisonment without hard labour.
- (iii.) Imprisonment as a misdemeanor of the first division.

Imprisonment of the first and second kinds may, in the cases hereinafter specified, be accompanied or not with solitary confinement.

ARTICLE 5.

IMPRISONMENT TO BE SEPARATE.

² All prisoners sentenced to imprisonment with or without hard labour must be prevented from holding any communication with each other, either by every prisoner being kept in a separate cell by day and by night, except when he is at chapel or taking exercise, or by every prisoner being confined to his cell and being subjected to such superintendence during the day as will, consistently with the provisions of the Prisons Act, 1865, prevent his communication with any other prisoner.

ARTICLE 6.

HARD LABOUR.

³ Hard labour is of two classes, consisting—

- (1.) Of work at the tread-wheel, shot-drill, crank, capstan,

¹ See 28 & 29 Vict. c. 126. As to the history of the punishment of imprisonment, see 1 Hist. Cr. Law, 483-7.

² 28 & 29 Vict. c. 126, s. 17. This has practically superseded sentences of solitary confinement.

³ 28 & 29 Vict. c. 126, s. 19.

stone-breaking, or such other like description of hard bodily labour as may be appointed by the justices in sessions assembled with the approval of the Secretary of State.

(2.) Of such other description of bodily labour as may be appointed by ¹the justices in sessions assembled with the approval of the Secretary of State.

² Every male prisoner of sixteen years of age and upwards sentenced to hard labour must, during the whole of his sentence, be kept at hard labour of the first class for such number of hours, not more than ten or less than six (exclusive of meals), as may be prescribed by the visiting justices, subject to the following provisions:—

(1.) In cases in which the sentence is for more than three months the visiting justices may, after the expiration of the first three months of the sentence, substitute hard labour of the second for hard labour of the first class.

(2.) If the surgeon certifies that any prisoner is unfit to be kept at either class of hard labour during the whole or any part of the prescribed hours, he shall not be kept to such labour during such time.

(3.) If the sentence is for a period not exceeding fourteen days, prisoners may, in pursuance of rules made by the justices in sessions, be kept in separate confinement at hard labour of the second class during the whole period of their sentences.

² Ibid. Sch. I. 34 (redrawn).

³ Ibid. Sch. I. 35.

EMPLOYMENT OF PRISONERS. NOT SENTENCED TO HARD LABOUR.

¹ Provision must be made by the visiting justices for the employment of all prisoners sentenced to imprisonment without hard labour. The visiting justices must make rules as to the nature and amount of such employment; but no prisoner not sentenced to hard labour can be punished for neglect of work, excepting by such alteration in the scale of diet as may be established by the rules of the prison in the case of neglect of work by such prisoners.

ARTICLE 8.

SOLITARY CONFINEMENT.

² In cases in which a Court or judge is authorized to direct that an offender shall be kept in solitary confinement, such solitary confinement may not be for any longer period than one month at a time, or more than three months in the space of one year.

ARTICLE 9.

IMPRISONMENT AS A MISDEMEANANT OF THE FIRST DIVISION.

³ Imprisonment as a misdemeanant of the first division is inflicted by confining the offender within the prison. Such a misdemeanant is not to be deemed to be a criminal prisoner.

He is permitted to maintain himself, and to procure or receive, at proper hours, food, wine, malt liquor, clothing, bedding or other necessities; but subject to examination and to such rules as may be approved by the visiting justices.

² 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 90, s. 5.

He may be permitted to work and follow his trade or profession, provided such employment does not interfere with the regulations of the prison.

ARTICLE 10.

DETENTION IN A REFORMATORY.

¹ The punishment of detention in a reformatory school is inflicted by detaining the offender in such a school, and subjecting him to the discipline thereof, in the manner provided by the statutes relating to reformatory schools.

ARTICLE 11.

SUBJECTION TO POLICE SUPERVISION.

² The punishment of subjection to police supervision consists in the subjection of every person so punished to the following obligations when at large:—

(a.) He must notify the place of his residence, and every change of his residence, within the same³ police district, to the³ chief officer of police of the district in which his residence is situate. ⁴ He must comply with this requirement by personally presenting himself and declaring his place of residence to the constable, or person who at the time when such notification is made is in charge of the police station or office of which notice has been given to such holder or person as the place for receiving such notification, or if no such notice has been given in charge of the chief office of such chief officer of police.

(b.) Whenever he changes his place of residence from one police district to another, he must notify such change of residence to the chief officer of police of the police district which he is leaving, and to the chief officer of police of the police district into which he goes to reside. He must make the notifications required to be made in (a.) and (b.) within forty-eight hours after he comes into the place where they are required to be made.

(c.) Once in each month he must—if a male—report himself at such time, and personally, or by letter, as may be prescribed by the chief officer of police of the district, either to such chief officer himself, or to such person as he may direct.

(d.) If he fails to do any one of these things within the proper time he is liable to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for any period not exceeding one year.

ARTICLE 12.

PUNISHMENT OF WHIPPING.

(a.) ¹ When no special provisions are made as to the punishment of whipping the number of strokes and the instrument to be used are left to the discretion of the person by whom the whipping is inflicted.

(b.) ² When the punishment of whipping is awarded by order of one or more justices, in exercise of their power of summary conviction, the order awarding such punishment must specify the number of strokes to be inflicted, and the instrument to be used in the infliction of them. In the case of an offender whose age does not exceed fourteen years, the number of strokes inflicted must not exceed twelve, and the instrument used must be a birch rod. No such offender may be whipped more than once for the same offence.

(c.) ³ When the punishment of whipping is awarded by order of a Court for an indictable offence, under the Larceny Act, 1861, the Malicious Injuries to Property Act, 1861, or the Offences against the Person Act, 1861, the Court may sentence the offender to be once privately whipped, and the number of strokes and the instrument with which they are to be inflicted must be specified by the Court in the sentence.

(d.) ¹ When the punishment of whipping is awarded under the Act for the further security of her Majesty's subjects from personal violence (1863), the Court may direct that the offender—if a male—in addition to the other punishment awarded to him, be once, twice, or thrice privately whipped, subject to the following provisions:—

(i.) In the case of an offender whose age does not exceed sixteen years, the number of strokes at each such whipping must not exceed twenty-five, and the instrument used must be a birch rod.

(ii.) In the case of any other male offender, the number of strokes must not exceed fifty at each such whipping.

(iii.) In each case the Court in its sentence must specify the number of strokes to be inflicted and the instrument to be used.

(iv.) Such whipping must in no case take place after the expiration of six months from the passing of the sentence.

(v.) Every such whipping to be inflicted on a person sentenced to penal servitude must be inflicted on him before he is removed to a convict prison, with a view to undergoing the sentence of penal servitude.

ARTICLE 13.

FINE.

² The punishment of fining consists in ordering the offender to pay to her Majesty a sum of money expressed in the sentence. When no particular sum is limited as the maximum amount of a fine, the fine imposed must not be excessive.

ARTICLE 14.PUTTING UNDER RECOGNIZANCES.

The punishment of putting under recognizances consists in ordering the offender to promise to pay to her Majesty a sum of money expressed in the recognizance if he breaks the condition thereof, and to find other persons to make a similar promise on his behalf and as his sureties. In cases in which the Court or magistrate is authorized to require such securities, they may direct the offender to be imprisoned till he enters into the recognizance and finds the sureties.

CHAPTER II.

¹ CLASSIFICATION OF CRIMES AND GENERAL PROVISIONS AS TO THEIR PUNISHMENT.

ARTICLE 15.

TREASON, FELONY, AND MISDEMEANOR.

EVERY crime is either treason, felony, or misdemeanor. Every crime which amounts to treason or felony is so denominated in the definitions of crimes hereinafter contained. All crimes not so denominated are misdemeanors.

ARTICLE 16.

CONSEQUENCES OF A CONVICTION OF TREASON OR FELONY.

The consequences of a conviction of treason or felony are as follows:—

(a.) ² Every person convicted of treason or felony may be condemned to the payment of the whole or any part of the costs and expenses incurred in and about his prosecution and conviction.

(b.) ³ Immediately upon the conviction of any person for felony, the Court before which he is convicted may award any sum of money not exceeding £100, by way of satisfaction or compensation for any loss of property suffered by any person through or by means of such felony, upon the application of such person. Such sum is to be deemed to be a judgment debt due to the person entitled to receive the same from the person so convicted.

² 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, s. 3. The section contains various subsidiary provisions as to costs, which do not bear on the punishment of the offence. See 1 Hist. Cr. Law, 487-9.

³ 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, s. 4.

(c.) ¹ Every person sentenced to death, to penal servitude, or to any term of imprisonment with hard labour, or exceeding twelve months :

(i.) Becomes incapable of holding any military or naval office, or any civil office under the Crown, or other public employment, or any ecclesiastical benefice, or of being elected, or sitting, or voting as a member of either House of Parliament, or of exercising any right of suffrage or other parliamentary or municipal franchise whatever in England, Wales, or Ireland.

Such incapacity continues until such person has suffered the punishment to which he has been sentenced, or such other punishment as by competent authority may be substituted for the same, or until he receives a free pardon from her Majesty.

(ii.) If any such person holds, at the time of his conviction, any military or naval office, or any civil office under the Crown, or other public employment, or any ecclesiastical benefice, or any place, office, or emolument in any university, college, or other corporation, or is entitled to any pension or superannuation allowance, payable by the public or out of any public fund ; such office, benefice, employment, or place, forthwith becomes vacant, and such pension or superannuation allowance, or emolument, forthwith determines and ceases to be payable, unless such person receives a free pardon from her Majesty within two months after such conviction, or ² before the filling up of such office, benefice, employment, or place, if given at a later period.

(d.) ³ Every person sentenced to death, or to penal servitude, or against whom sentence of death is recorded, is disabled from suing any person, from alienating or charging any property, and from making any contract.

(e.) ⁴ The custody and management of the property of any such person may be committed to an administrator, or interim curator, appointed in the manner and invested with the powers described in the statute, 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23.

(f.) ¹ Any person subject to the provisions of clauses (d.) or (e.) ceases to be affected by them when he dies, or is made bankrupt, or has suffered any punishment to which sentence of death has been commuted, or has undergone the full term of penal servitude to which he was sentenced, or such other punishment as may have been substituted for it by lawful authority, or receives her Majesty's pardon.

ARTICLE 17.

RECORDING SENTENCE OF DEATH.

² When any person is convicted of any felony, except murder, punishable with death, the Court may, if it thinks fit, instead of pronouncing judgment of death on such offender, order the same to be entered of record, and a record of every judgment so entered has the same effect as if the judgment had been duly pronounced and the offender relieved by the Court.

ARTICLE 18.

PUNISHMENT FOR FELONY IF NO EXPRESS PUNISHMENT PROVIDED —FELONIES UNDER THE CONSOLIDATION ACTS.

³ Every person convicted of any felony for which no punishment is specially provided by the law in force for the time being, is liable upon conviction thereof to be sentenced to penal servitude for any period not exceeding seven years, or to be imprisoned with or without hard labour and solitary confinement for any term not exceeding two years, and if a male, to be once, twice, or thrice publicly or privately whipped, in addition to such imprisonment.

² 4 Geo. 4, c. 48, ss. 1, 2 (very much abridged). By 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 30, the same power was given to the Court in cases of murder (R. v. Hogg, 2 Mo. & R. 380), but this Act was repealed by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 95. As to the history of the subject see 1 Hist. Cr. Law, 472.

³ 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, ss. 8, 9, modified by 1 Vict. c. 90, s. 5; 9 & 10 Vict. c. 24, s. 1; 16 & 17 Vict. c. 99; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3.

ARTICLE 19.

PREVIOUS CONVICTIONS.

(a.) ² If any person is convicted of any felony, not punishable with death on the 1st July, 1827, committed after a previous conviction for felony, he is liable, on such subsequent conviction, to be sentenced to penal servitude for life, or for any term not less than seven years, or to be imprisoned with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement, for any term not exceeding four years, and if a male, to be once, twice, or thrice publicly or privately whipped in addition to such imprisonment.

² 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 11. By this Act a person convicted of larceny, after a previous conviction, was liable to transportation for life, &c. By 16 & 17 Vict. c. 99, s. 12, it was enacted that no person shall be liable to be transported by reason only of a previous conviction for larceny, but every such person may be sentenced to not more than ten or less than four years penal servitude. This enactment was repealed by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 95, after having been to some extent superseded by 20 & 21 Vict. c. 3, s. 2, which abolished transportation. By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 7, it was enacted that a person convicted of simple larceny after a previous conviction for felony should be liable to a maximum punishment of ten years penal servitude (S. W.). Probably this was meant to be a substitute for 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 11, so far as that section applies to convictions for simple larceny, but they are not in terms inconsistent. Theoretically, therefore, I suppose, a person might on a second conviction for larceny be sentenced to penal servitude for life, or imprisonment with hard labour for four years, and to be thrice publicly whipped. The question of the legality of such a sentence is not likely to occur in practice; see Article 321, note. By 27 & 28 Vict. c. 47, s. 2, a person sentenced to penal servitude, after a previous conviction for felony, could not be sentenced to less than seven years. But this was repealed by 42 & 43 Vict. c. 54, s. 1. Practically, therefore, the net result of all this legislation is as stated in the text. The "simple" larceny of the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, obviously means larceny not subjected to any special punishment by reason of any of the aggravating circumstances provided for in that Act. Hale uses the expression "simple" larceny in contradistinction to larceny with violence, which is robbery: 1 Hale, P. C. 503.

Provided that a person convicted of simple larceny after a previous conviction for felony, cannot be sentenced to a longer term of penal servitude than ten years.

(b.) ¹ When any person is convicted of any felony, or of any of the misdemeanors mentioned in the note hereto,² and a previous conviction of any felony, or any such misdemeanor is proved against him, the Court having cognizance of the indictment may, in addition to any other punishment which it may award to him, direct that he is to be subject to the supervision of the police for a period of seven years, or such less period as the Court may direct, commencing immediately after the expiration of the sentence passed on him for the last of such crimes.

ARTICLE 20.

SPECIAL OFFENCES IN THE CASE OF PERSONS TWICE CONVICTED.

³ Every person convicted on indictment of any felony or any such misdemeanor as is mentioned in the note hereto,⁴ and having had a previous conviction of any such offence proved against him, is liable to a maximum punishment of a year's imprisonment and hard labour, if at any time within seven years immediately after the expiration of the sentence passed upon him for the last of such offences,

(a.) on his being charged by a constable with getting his livelihood by dishonest means, and being brought before a Court of summary jurisdiction, it appears to such Court that there are reasonable grounds for believing that he is getting his livelihood by dishonest means; or if,

¹ 34 & 35 Vict. c. 112, s. 8, and s. 20, which defines the word "crime" employed in s. 8.

² Viz., 1. Uttering false or counterfeit coin. 2. Possessing counterfeit gold or silver coin. 3. Obtaining goods or money by false pretences. 4. Conspiracy to defraud. 5. Being found by night armed with intent to break into a dwelling-house. 6. Being found by night, without lawful excuse, with housebreaking implements. 7. Being found by night with face blackened, &c., with intent to commit felony. 8. Being found by night in any dwelling-house or building with intent to commit felony.

⁴ See Note 2, supra.

(b.) on being charged with any offence punishable on indictment or summary conviction, and on being required by a Court of summary jurisdiction to give his name and address, he refuses to do so, or gives a false name or false address ; or if

(c.) he is found in any place, whether public or private, under such circumstances as to satisfy the Court before whom he is brought that he was about to commit or to aid in the commission of any offence punishable on indictment or summary conviction, or was waiting for an opportunity to commit or aid in the commission of any offence punishable on indictment or summary conviction ; or if

(d.) he is found in or upon any dwelling-house, or any building, yard, or premises, being parcel of or attached to such dwelling-house, or in or upon any shop, warehouse, counting-house, or other place of business, or in any garden, orchard, pleasure-ground, or nursery ground, or in any building, or erection in any garden, orchard, pleasure-ground, or nursery-ground, without being able to account to the satisfaction of the Court before whom he is brought for his being found on such premises.

ARTICLE 21.

PUNISHMENT OF PERSONS UNDER SIXTEEN YEARS OF AGE.

¹ Whenever any offender who, in the judgment of the Court, justices, or magistrate before whom he is charged, is under the age of sixteen years is convicted, on indictment or in a summary manner, of an offence punishable with penal servitude or imprisonment, and is sentenced to be imprisoned for the term of ten days or a longer term, the Court, justices, or magistrate may also sentence him to be sent at the expiration of his period of imprisonment to a certified reformatory school, and to be there detained for a period of not less than two years and not more than five years.

A youthful offender under ten is not to be so directed to be sent to a reformatory school unless he has been previously charged with some crime or offence punishable with penal servitude or imprisonment, or is sentenced by a judge of assize or court of general quarter or quarter sessions.

ARTICLE 22.

PUNISHMENT OF MISDEMEANORS.

² Whenever any person convicted of misdemeanor is sentenced to imprisonment without hard labour, the Court or judge before whom such person has been tried may order, if such Court or judge thinks fit, that such person shall be treated as a misdemeanant of the first division.

³ Any person convicted of any indictable misdemeanor punishable under any one of the Criminal Law Consolidation Acts, 1861, may, in addition to or in lieu of the punishment by such Act provided, be fined and required to enter into his own recognizances, and to find sureties (both or either) for keeping the peace and being of good behaviour, but no person may be imprisoned for more than one year for not finding such sureties.

ARTICLE 23.

CUMULATIVE PUNISHMENTS.

⁴ Wherever sentence is passed for felony on a person already imprisoned under sentence for another crime, the Court may award imprisonment for the subsequent offence

⁴ 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 10. When felonies as a rule were capital, there could be no cumulative sentences in regard of them, whether they were charged in different indictments or in different counts of the same indictment. If they were to commence at the expiration of the imprisonment to which such person was previously sentenced. When such a person is already under sentence either of imprisonment or transportation, the Court, if empowered to pass sentence of penal servitude, may award such sentence for the subsequent offence, to commence at the expiration of the imprisonment or penal servitude to which such person was previously sentenced, although the aggregate term of imprisonment or penal servitude respectively may exceed the term for which either of those punishments could be otherwise awarded.

charged in separate indictments, the prisoner having been convicted and sentenced on one, might plead "autrefois attain" to any subsequent charge. There was no use in passing two sentences of death upon him (see Chitty's Criminal Law, 463). If two felonies were charged in one indictment, the prosecutor was put to his election—as indeed he still is. When death ceased to be the punishment for felonies as such (7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 7) it was necessary to make provision for the punishment of persons already under sentence. Hence the provision in the text. Cumulative punishment in cases of misdemeanor depends on the common law principles.

¹ Opinion of the judges in Wilkes's Case, 19 St. Tr. 1132-3, and see R. v. Castro, L. R. 5 Q. B. D. 490. In the case of Renwick Williams (1 Leach, 529, A.D. 1790) cumulative sentences, amounting in all to six years' imprisonments, were passed upon three indictments for similar offences.

CHAPTER III.

ARTICLE 24.

DEFINITIONS SUBJECT TO EXCEPTIONS.

EVERY definition of any crime hereinafter contained is subject to the following general exceptions, except in the cases in which the contrary is expressed:—

ARTICLE 25.

CHILDREN UNDER SEVEN.

² No act done by any person under seven years of age is a crime.

ARTICLE 26.

CHILDREN BETWEEN SEVEN AND FOURTEEN.

³ No act done by any person over seven and under fourteen years of age is a crime, unless it be shewn affirmatively that such person had sufficient capacity to know that the act was wrong.

ARTICLE 27.

INSANITY.

⁴ No act is a crime if the person who does it is at the time when it is done prevented [⁵either by defective mental power or] by any disease affecting his mind

(a.) from knowing the nature and quality of his act; or,

¹ See 2 Hist. Cr. Law, chs. xviii., xix. pp. 94-186. See Draft Code, Pt. III. ss. 19-70.

³ R. v. Owen, 4 C. & P. 236; and see cases collected 1 Russ. Cr. 7-10; Draft Code, s. 20.

⁴ The whole subject is discussed at full length in 2 Hist. Cr. Law, ch. xix. pp. 124-196. Cf. Draft Code, s. 22.

(b.) from knowing that the act is 'wrong; [²or,

(c.) from controlling his own conduct, unless the absence of the power of control has been produced by his own default.]

But an act may be a crime although the mind of a person who does it is affected by disease, if such disease does not in fact produce upon his mind one or other of the effects above mentioned in reference to that act.

Illustrations.

(1) A kills B under an insane delusion that he is breaking a jar. A's act is not a crime.

(2.) A kills B knowing that he is killing B, and knowing that it is wrong to kill B; but his mind is so imbecile that he is unable to form such an estimate of the nature and consequences of his act as a person of ordinary intelligence would form. A's act is not a crime if the words within the first set of brackets are law. If they are not it is.

(3.) A kills B knowing that he is killing B, and knowing that it is illegal to kill B; but under an insane delusion that the salvation of the human race will be obtained by his execution for the murder of B, and that God has commanded him (A) to produce that result by those means. A's act is a crime if the word "wrong" has the second of the two meanings ascribed to it in the note. It is not a crime if the word "wrong" has the first of those two meanings.

(4.) A suddenly stabs B under the influence of an impulse caused by disease, and of such a nature that nothing short of the mechanical restraint of A's hand would have prevented the stab. A's act is a crime if (c.) is not law. It is not a crime if (c.) is law.

(5.) A suddenly stabs B under the influence of an impulse caused by disease, and of such a nature that a strong motive, as, for instance, the fear of his own immediate death, would have prevented the act. A's act is a crime whether (c.) is or is not law.

(6.) A permits his mind to dwell upon and desire B's death; under the influence of mental disease this desire becomes uncontrollable, and A kills B. A's act is a crime whether (c.) is or is not law.

(7.) A, a patient in a lunatic asylum, who is under a delusion that his finger is made of glass, poisons one of his attendants out of revenge for his treatment, and it is proved that the delusion had no connection whatever with the act. A's act is a crime.

2. Illegal. The practical effect of these differences is shown in Illustrations (4), (5), and (6).

² The parts of the article bracketed are doubtful.

ARTICLE 28.

PRESUMPTION OF SANITY.

¹ Every person is presumed to be sane, and to be responsible for his acts. The burden of proving that he is irresponsible is upon the accused person; but the jury may have regard to his appearance and behaviour in court.

ARTICLE 29.

DRUNKENNESS.

² Voluntary drunkenness is not regarded as a disease affecting the mind within the meaning of Article 27; but involuntary drunkenness, and diseases caused by voluntary drunkenness, fall, so far as they affect the mind, within that Article.

If the existence of a specific intention is essential to the commission of a crime, the fact that an offender was drunk when he did the act which, if coupled with that intention, would constitute such crime, should be taken into account by the jury in deciding whether he had that intention.

Illustrations.

(1.) ³ A, in a fit of voluntary drunkenness, shoots B dead, not knowing what he does. A's act is a crime.

(2.) ³ A, under the influence of a drug fraudulently administered to him, shoots B dead, not knowing what he does. A's act is not a crime.

(3.) ³ A, in a fit of delirium tremens caused by voluntary drunkenness, kills B, mistaking him for a wild animal, attacking A. A's act is not a crime.

(4.) ³ A is indicted for inflicting on B an injury dangerous to life with intent to murder B. The fact that A was drunk when he inflicted the injury ought to be taken into account by the jury in deciding whether A intended to murder B or not.

ARTICLE 30.

MARRIED WOMEN.

¹ If a married woman commits a theft or receives stolen goods knowing them to be stolen in the presence of her husband she is presumed to have acted under his coercion, and such coercion excuses her act; but this presumption may be rebutted if the circumstances of the case shew that in point of fact she was not coerced.

It is uncertain how far this principle applies to felonies in general.

It does not apply to high treason or murder.

It probably does not apply to robbery.

It applies to uttering counterfeit coin.

It seems to apply to misdemeanors generally.

COMPULSION.

² An act which if done willingly would make a person a principal in the second degree or an aider and abettor in a crime, may be innocent if the crime is committed by a number of offenders, and if the act is done only because during the whole of the time in which it is being done, the person who does it is compelled to do it by threats on the part of the ³ offenders instantly to kill him or do him grievous bodily

ARTICLE 32.

NECESSITY.

An act which would otherwise be a crime may be excused if the person accused can shew that it was done only in order to avoid consequences which could not otherwise be avoided, and which, if they had followed, would have inflicted upon him or upon others whom he was bound to protect inevitable and irreparable evil, that no more was done than was reasonably necessary for that purpose, and that the evil inflicted by it was not disproportionate to the evil avoided.

Illustrations.

(1.) ³ A, the Governor of Madras, acts towards his council in an arbitrary and illegal manner. The council depose and put him under arrest, and assume the powers of government themselves. This is not an offence if the acts done by the council were the only means by which irreparable mischief to the establishment at Madras could be avoided.

² R. v. Crutchley, 5 C. & P. 133. The report says nothing as to the nature of the force. Probably it was by threats of personal violence. It is singular that the law upon this subject should be so very meagre. The subject is treated at some length in 1 Hale, cc. vii., viii., and ix., pp. 43-52, but in a very unsatisfactory way. It would seem that in all common cases the fact that a crime is done unwillingly and in order to avoid injury, ought to affect rather the punishment than the guilt.

(2.) ¹ A and B, swimming in the sea after a shipwreck, gets hold of a plank not large enough to support both ; A pushes off B, who is drowned. This is not a crime.

ARTICLE 33.

IGNORANCE OF LAW.

² The fact that an offender is ignorant of the law is in no case an excuse for his offence, but it may be relevant to the question whether an act which would be a crime if accompanied by a certain intention or other state of mind, and not otherwise, was in fact accompanied by that intention or state of mind or not.

³ In interpreting a statute which makes unlawful a continuous act which till the statute passed was not unlawful, it is to be presumed that the legislature intended to allow a reasonable time for the discontinuance of the act so made unlawful, and the ignorance of the agent that the statute had been passed, is a fact relevant to the question whether his discontinuance of it was within such reasonable time or not.

Illustrations.

(1.) ⁴ A, a foreigner unacquainted with the law of England, kills B in a duel in England. A's act is murder although he may have supposed it to be lawful.

keeper, under the authority of an Act of Parliament (5 Anne, c. 14, s. 4), of the existence of which A is ignorant. A forcibly takes the wires from B, and is tried for robbery. His ignorance of the Act is relevant to the question whether he took the wires under a claim of right.

(3.) ¹ A is in command of a ship on a voyage, which during its continuance is rendered unlawful by the passing of the kidnapping Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 19), but A was not aware that the Act had been passed till a considerable time afterwards, and he continued his voyage in ignorance of the Act. The fact of A's ignorance is relevant to the question whether the particular voyage in which A was engaged was one to which the Act was intended by the legislature to apply.

ARTICLE 34.

IGNORANCE OF FACT.

An alleged offender is in general deemed to have acted under that state of facts which he in good faith and on reasonable grounds believed to exist when he did the act alleged to be an offence, provided that, when an offence is so defined by statute that the act of the offender is not a crime unless some independent fact co-exists with it, the Court must decide whether it was the intention of the legislature that the person doing the forbidden act should do it at his peril, or that his ignorance as to the existence of the independent fact, or his mistaken belief in good faith and on reasonable grounds that it did not exist, should excuse him, provided also that voluntary or negligent ignorance of any such fact is no excuse for any such offence, provided also that in cases of the infliction of bodily harm or restraint for the purpose of arresting or retaking a person honestly and reasonably but erroneously supposed to be liable to be arrested or retaken, the person inflicting such harm or restraint is not justified by such belief unless the state of facts in the existence of which he erroneously believed would, if it had really existed, have made it his legal duty to act as he did, or would have been such as to make his conduct an act of defence of his person or habitation.

Illustrations.

(1.) ¹ A, under an insane delusion, kills B. If the delusion is such that its truth would justify him in doing so, his act is not a crime. The delusion would also be evidence that A did not know he was doing wrong even if its truth would not justify the act.

(2.) ² A, making a thrust with a sword at a place where, upon reasonable grounds, he supposes a burglar to be, kills a person who is not a burglar. A is in the same situation as if he had killed a burglar.

(3.) ³ A abducts B, a girl under fifteen years of age, from her father's house, believing in good faith and on reasonable grounds that B is eighteen years of age. A commits the offence of abduction, although if B had been eighteen years of age she would not have been within the statute.

(4.) ⁴ A, in the last illustration, abducts B, in ignorance of her age, and without making any inquiry about it. A commits the offence of abduction.

(5.) ⁵ A received into her house, not being a registered lunatic asylum, several persons to be medically treated, being persons who were in fact lunatics though A honestly believed on reasonable grounds that they were

⁴ R. v. Prince, Ibid. See judgment of Brett, J., p. 169, and see p. 174. It has been doubted whether a person commits bigamy who contracts a second marriage under a bona fide belief that the first husband or wife is dead. In R. v. Turner, 9 Cox, C. C. 145, Martin, B., directed a jury that if a woman had an honest belief that her husband was dead she was not guilty of bigamy, and this ruling was followed by Cleasby, B., in R. v. Horton, 11 Cox, C. C. 670. In R. v. Gibbons, 12 Cox, C. C. 237, Brett, J., after consulting Willes, J., held (says the report) "that a bona fide belief that the husband was dead was no defence, unless the seven years had passed." In that case, however, the "bona fide belief" appears to have arisen solely from the fact that the woman had not heard of her husband for upwards of six years. It was thus a gratuitous belief, founded on ignorance. It seems to me that if the belief was founded on positive evidence the case would be otherwise. Suppose, e.g., a woman saw her husband fall overboard in the middle of the Atlantic, and saw a boat go out to search for him, and return without him; suppose that she took out administration to his estate, heard nothing of him for five years, and then married again, would she be guilty of bigamy if by some strange chance he had escaped? Surely not. I am informed that this view was taken by Denman, J., and Amphlett, J.A., in a case of R. v. Moore, tried at Lincoln Spring Assizes, 1877. I think the proviso in 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 57 (Art. 257), ought clearly to be read not as excluding the general common law principle stated in this Article, but as supplementing and completing it, by providing that a second marriage, after seven years' ignorance as to the life of the first husband or wife, shall not be criminal, although the party so marrying has no positive reason to believe, and perhaps does not believe, that the absent person is dead.

(6.) ¹ A, a constable, honestly and on reasonable grounds believing B to have committed murder and not being able otherwise to arrest him shoots at him and kills him. A is justified. If A had been a private person his act would have been manslaughter at least.

(7.) ² B, pretending by way of a practical joke to be a robber, presents an empty pistol at A and demands his money. A, believing that B really is a robber, kills B. A is justified.

CHAPTER IV.

PARTIES TO THE COMMISSION OF CRIMES—PRINCIPAL AND ACCESSORY.

ARTICLE 35.

PRINCIPALS IN FIRST DEGREE.

² WHOEVER actually commits, or takes part in the actual commission of a crime, is a principal in the first degree, whether he is on the spot when the crime is committed or not; and if a crime is committed partly in one place and partly in another, every one who commits any part of it at any place is a principal in the first degree.

Illustrations.

(1.) ³ A lays poison for B, which B takes in A's absence. A is a principal in the first degree.

(2.) ⁴ A steals goods from a ship, and lays them in a place at some distance, whence B, by previous concert, carries them away for sale. A and B are both principals in the first degree.

ARTICLE 36.

INNOCENT AGENT.

Whoever commits a crime by an innocent agent is a principal in the first degree.

Illustrations.

(1.) ⁵ A tells B, a child under seven, to bring him money belonging to C. B does so. A is a principal in the first degree.

¹ 2 Hist. Cr. Law, ch. xxii. pp. 221-241; Draft Code, ss. 71-74.

(2.) ¹ A, knowing a note to be forged, asks B, who does not know it to be forged, to get it changed for him. B does so, and gives A the money. A is a principal in the first degree.

(3.) ² B, in the last illustration, knows that the note is forged. A is an accessory before the fact.

ARTICLE 37.

PRINCIPALS IN THE SECOND DEGREE.

³ Whoever aids or abets the actual commission of a crime, either at the place where it is committed, or elsewhere, is a principal in the second degree in that crime.

⁴ Mere presence on the occasion when a crime is committed does not make a person a principal in the second degree, even if he neither makes any effort to prevent the offence or to cause the offender to be apprehended, but such presence may be evidence for the consideration of the jury of an active participation in the offence.

When the existence of a particular intent forms part of the definition of an offence, a person charged with aiding or abetting the commission of the offence much be shewn to have known of the existence of the intent on the part of the person so aided.

Illustrations.

(1.) ⁵ A, B, C, and D go out with a common design to rob. A commits the robbery; B stands by ready to help; C is stationed some way off to give the alarm if any one comes. A is a principal in the first degree, B, C, and D are principals in the second degree.

(2.) ⁶ B is indicted for inflicting on C an injury dangerous to life with intent to murder. A is indicted for aiding and abetting B. A must be shewn to have known that it was B's intent to murder C, and it is not enough to shew that A helped B in what he did.

³ See cases in 1 Russ. Cr. 49-50. R. v. Kelly, R. & R. 421, perhaps marks the limit between a principal in the second degree and an accessory. In that case B stole horses and brought them to A, who was waiting half a mile off; A and B then rode away on them. It was held that A was an accessory before the fact. The distinction is now of no importance.

COMMON PURPOSE.

¹ When several persons take part in the execution of a common criminal purpose, each is a principal in the second degree, in respect of every crime committed by any one of them in the execution of that purpose.

If any of the offenders commits a crime foreign to the common criminal purpose, the others are neither principals in the second degree, nor accessories unless they actually instigate or assist in its commission.

Illustrations.

(1.) ² A constable and his assistants go to arrest A at a house in which are many persons. B, C, D, and others come from the house, drive the constable and his assistants off, and one of the assistants is killed, either by B, C, D, or one of their party. Each of the party is equally responsible for the blow, whether he actually struck it or not.

(2.) ³ Three soldiers go to rob an orchard. Two get into a fruit tree. The third stands at the door with a drawn sword, and stabs the owner, who tries to arrest him. The men in the tree are neither principals nor accessories, unless all three came with a common resolution to overcome all opposition.

(3.) ⁴ Smugglers fight with revenue officers. In the fight a smuggler fires a gun which kills another smuggler. The gun was not fired at any of the revenue officers. The man who fired the gun is responsible for the act, but not his companions.

(4.) ⁵ Two parties of persons fight in the street about the removal of goods to avoid a distress. One of the persons engaged kills a looker-on, totally unconcerned in the affray. The other persons present are not responsible for his crime.

ARTICLE 39.

ACCESSORIES BEFORE THE FACT.

² An accessory before the fact is one who ³ directly or indirectly counsels, procures, or commands any person to commit any felony or piracy ⁴ which is committed in consequence of such counselling, procuring, or commandment.

Every one who would have been an accessory before the fact if the crime committed, procured, or commanded had been a felony, is a principal if that crime is misdemeanor.

Knowledge that a person intends to commit a crime, and conduct connected with and influenced by such knowledge, is not enough to make the person who possesses such knowledge, or so conducts himself, an accessory before the fact to any such crime, unless he does something to encourage its commission actively.

Illustrations.

(1.) ⁵ A supplies B with corrosive sublimate, knowing that B means to use it to procure her own abortion, but being unwilling that she should take the poison, and giving it to her because she threatened to kill herself if he did not. B does so use it and dies. Even if B is guilty of murdering herself, A is not an accessory before the fact to such murder.

(2.) ⁶ B and C agree to fight a prize fight for a sum of money ; A, knowing of their intention, acts as stakeholder. B and C fight, and C is killed. A is not present at the fight and has no concern with it except being stakeholder. Even if in such a case there can be an accessory before the fact, A is not accessory before the fact to the manslaughter of C.

WHERE CRIME SUGGESTED IS COMMITTED IN A DIFFERENT WAY.

¹ When a person instigates another to commit a crime, and the person so instigated commits the crime which he was instigated to commit, but in a different way from that in which he was instigated to commit it, the instigator is an accessory before the fact to the crime.

ARTICLE 41.

WHERE CRIME COMMITTED IS PROBABLE CONSEQUENCE OF CRIME SUGGESTED.

² If a person instigates another to commit a crime, and the person so instigated commits a crime different from the one which he was instigated to commit, but likely to be caused by such instigation, the instigator is an accessory before the fact.

(1.) ³ A describes C to B, and instigates B to murder C. B murders D, whom he believes to be C, because D corresponds with A's description of C. A is accessory before the fact to the murder of D.

(2.) ⁴ A instigates B to rob C, B does so, C resists and B kills C. A is accessory before the fact to the murder of C.

(3.) ⁴ A advises B to murder C (B's wife) by poison. B gives C a poisoned apple, which C gives to D (B's child). B permits D to eat the apple, which it does, and dies of it. A is not accessory to the murder of D.

WHERE INSTIGATION IS COUNTERMANDED.

¹ If an accessory before the fact countermands the execution of the crime before it is executed, he ceases to be an accessory before the fact, if the principal had notice of the countermand before the execution of the crime, but not otherwise.

INSTIGATION TO COMMIT A CRIME DIFFERENT FROM THE ONE COMMITTED.

PUNISHMENT OF ACCESSORIES AFTER THE FACT IN GENERAL AND UNDER THE CONSOLIDATION ACTS.

³ Every accessory after the fact to any felony is guilty of a substantive felony for which he may be convicted, whether the principal felon has or has not been previously convicted, or is or is not amenable to justice, and for which he may be indicted either together with the principal felon or alone (except where it is otherwise specially enacted).

DEFINITION OF ATTEMPTS.

⁴ An attempt to commit a crime is an act done with intent to commit that crime, and forming part of a series of acts which would constitute its actual commission if it were not interrupted.

The point at which such a series of acts begins cannot be defined; but depends upon the circumstances of each particular case.

ATTEMPT—MISDEMEANOR.

Every attempt to commit an offence, whether treason, felony, or misdemeanor,² is a misdemeanor, unless it is otherwise specially provided for.

² It is difficult to put a case of an attempt to commit treason, as an overt act done with intent to commit treason would generally be treason: see the next Chapter. In the case of treasons defined in Arts. 58 and 59 there might be an attempt. See many cases collected in 1 Russ. Cr. 190, and 2 Hist. Cr. Law, 221-7.

HIGH TREASON, TREASONABLE FELONIES, AND ASSAULTS ON THE QUEEN.

HIGH TREASON BY IMAGINING THE QUEEN'S DEATH.

¹ EVERY one commits high treason who forms and displays by any overt act, or by publishing any printing or writing, an intention to kill or destroy the Queen, or to do her any bodily harm tending to death or destruction, maim or wounding, imprisonment or restraint.

ARTICLE 52.

WHAT AMOUNTS TO IMAGINING THE QUEEN'S DEATH.

the Queen to death who forms and displays by any overt act an intention

(a.) to depose the Queen from the exercise of her royal authority in any part of her dominions ; or

(b.) to levy war against the Queen either in the first or in the second of the senses assigned to that expression in Article 53 ; or

(c.) to instigate any foreigner with force to invade this realm or any other of the Queen's dominions ; or (d.) who conspires to levy war against the Queen in the first or second, but not in the third, of the senses assigned to that expression in Article 53.

ARTICLE 53.

HIGH TREASON BY LEVYING WAR.

¹ Every one commits high treason who levies war against the Queen in any of her dominions.

The expression "to levy war" means—

(a.) Attacking in the manner usual in war the Queen herself or her military forces, acting as such by her orders, in the execution of their duty ;

(b.) Attempting by an insurrection of whatever nature by force or constraint to compel the Queen to change her measures or counsels, or to intimidate or overawe both Houses or either House of Parliament ;

(c.) Attempting by an insurrection of whatever kind to effect any general public object.

But the expression "to levy war against the Queen" does not include any insurrection against any private person for the purpose of inflicting upon him any private wrong, even if such insurrection is conducted in a warlike manner.

ARTICLE 54.

HIGH TREASON BY ADHERING TO THE QUEEN'S ENEMIES.

¹ Every one commits high treason who, either in the realm or without it, actively assists a public enemy at war with the Queen. Rebels may be public enemies within the meaning of this Article.

ARTICLE 55.

ADHERENCE TO A DE FACTO KING NOT TREASON.

² No person who attends upon the king and sovereign lord of this land for the time being, in his person, and does him true and faithful service of allegiance in the same, or is in other places by his commandment in his wars within this land or without, is for any such act guilty of treason [even if the king de facto should not be king de jure].

ARTICLE 56.

KILLING THE KING'S WIFE OR SON.

³ Every one commits high treason who forms and displays by any overt act an intention . . .

(a.) To kill the wife of a king regnant; or,

(b.) To kill that son of a king or queen regnant who is for the time being heir-apparent to the king or queen.

ARTICLE 57.

WHEN WORDS ARE TREASON.

⁴ The speaking of words expressive of the intentions above mentioned is not an overt act within the meaning of Articles 51, 52, and 56.

¹ 25 Edw. 3, st. 5, c. 2, as explained by Hale, 1 P. C. 159-70. An officer betraying his post is a traitor at common law, though such offences are usually dealt with under martial law; see 1 Hale. 168. I suppose a deserter in the field who joins the enemy commits high treason as well as a military offence. Draft Code, s. 75.

² 11 Hen. 7, c. 1; and see 6th Rep. C. L. C. p. 23.

³ 25 Edw. 3, st. 15, c. 2, as explained in 1 Hale, P. C. 124-129. Draft Code, s. 75.

The writing of such words is such an overt act.

The speaking or writing of words accompanied by or explanatory of conduct connected with the execution of such intentions is such an act.

The speaking of words of advice, consultation, or command, or otherwise connected with the execution of such intentions, is such an act.

ARTICLE 58.

VIOLETING THE KING'S WIFE, ETC.

the wife of a king regnant; or that daughter of the king or queen regnant who at the time is his or her eldest daughter, if she never has been married, and (perhaps) if she is a widow, and (probably) if her father or mother is alive; or the wife of that son of a king or queen regnant who for the time being is the heir-apparent of such king or queen.

ARTICLE 59.

KILLING THE CHANCELLOR, ETC.

¹ 25 Edw. 3. st. 5, c. 2, as explained by Hale. Draft Code, s. 75.

² It may be permissible to suggest (as mere matter of curiosity) a doubt whether this would now apply to all the judges of the Supreme Court or only to those who are not members of the Chancery Division (25 Edw. 3, st. 5, c. 2). It is enacted by 13 Eliz. c. 2, that every one commits high treason who uses, or puts in use, in any place within this realm, or in any of the Queen's dominions, any bull, writing, instrument of absolution or reconciliation obtained from the Bishop of Rome to those who will be contented to forsake the due obedience to the Queen and to yield and subject themselves to the authority of the Bishop of Rome, or who willingly receives absolution or reconciliation under any such instrument. This enactment is printed in the Revised Statutes, but by 9 & 10 Vict. c. 59, it is repealed so far only as the same imposes the penalties of punishments therein mentioned. Whether the effect of this is to make the using of such bulls a treason which cannot be punished, I do not know, nor does it much matter. As the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 59, further provides that the repeal of the penalty is not to make the forbidden acts lawful, it is impossible to be quite sure that doing them would not be a statutory misdemeanor. As to which see 6th Rep. C. L. C. pp. 35-41. I know not why 13 Eliz. c. 2, was not repealed simply.

or the treasurer, or the king's justices of the one bench or the other, justices in eyre or justice of assize, and all other justices assigned to hear and determine being in their places doing their offices.

ARTICLE 60.

PUNISHMENT FOR TREASON.

¹ Every one who is convicted of high treason must be sentenced to be hanged by the neck until he is dead; but her Majesty may (if the offender is a man) direct, by a warrant signed by one of her principal Secretaries of State, that instead thereof such offender's head shall be severed from his body whilst alive.

ARTICLE 61.

ALL PRINCIPALS IN TREASON.

² Every person who in the case of felony would be an accessory before or after the fact is in the case of high treason a principal traitor, ³ but a person who knowingly comforts or receives a traitor so far partakes of the nature of an accessory that he cannot be tried till the principal is convicted.

ARTICLE 62.

TREASONABLE FELONIES.

⁴ Every one is guilty of felony, and is liable upon conviction thereof to penal servitude for life as a maximum punishment, who ¹ forms any of the intentions hereinafter mentioned, and expresses such intention either by any overt act or by publishing any printing or writing; ² that is to say,

(a.) An intention to depose the Queen, her heirs or successors, from the style, honour, and royal name of the Imperial Crown of the United Kingdom or of any other of her Majesty's dominions or countries; or

(b.) An intention to levy war against her Majesty, her heirs or successors, within any part of the United Kingdom in order by force or constraint to compel her to change her measures or counsels, or in order to put any force or constraint upon, or in order to intimidate or overawe, both houses or either house of Parliament; or

(c.) An intention to move or stir any foreigner with force to invade the United Kingdom or any other her Majesty's dominions or countries under the obeisance of her Majesty, her heirs and successors.

³ A conspiracy to effect any of the said intentions is an overt act within the meaning of this Article.

INCITING TO MUTINY.

⁴ Every one commits felony, and is liable upon conviction thereof to penal servitude for life as a maximum punishment, the maximum alternative term of imprisonment being three years, who maliciously and advisedly endeavours

(a.) to seduce any person serving in her Majesty's forces by sea or land from his duty and allegiance to her Majesty; or act of mutiny, or to make or endeavour to make any mutinous assembly, or to commit any traitorous or mutinous practice whatever.

(b.) to incite or stir up any such person to commit any

ARTICLE 64.

ASSAULTS ON THE QUEEN.

¹ Every one who does any of the acts hereinafter specified is guilty of a high misdemeanor, and is liable upon conviction thereof to be sentenced to seven years penal servitude, or to imprisonment with or without hard labour for any period not exceeding three years, and during the period of such imprisonment to be publicly or privately whipped as often (not exceeding thrice) and in such manner as the Court directs; that is to say,

(a.) Whoever wilfully and with intent to injure the person of the Queen or to alarm Her Majesty, or to break the public peace, or so as to endanger the public peace,—

(i.) Points, aims, or presents at or near the person of the Queen any ²firearm, loaded or not, or any other kind of arm; or

(ii.) Discharges at or near the person of the Queen any loaded arms; or

(iii.) Discharges or causes to be discharged any explosive material near the person of the Queen; or

(iv.) Strikes, or strikes at, the person of the Queen in ³any manner whatever; or

(v.) Throws anything at or upon the person of the Queen; or

(vi.) Attempts to do any of the things specified in (ii.) (iii.), (iv.), or (v.):—

(b.) Whoever produces or has near the person of the Queen

³ "With any offensive weapon or in any other."

any¹ arm or destructive or dangerous thing with intent to use the same to injure the person of the Queen or to alarm Her Majesty.

ARTICLE 65.

CONTEMPTS AGAINST THE QUEEN.

² Every one commits a misdemeanor who is guilty of any contempt against the person of her Majesty, or her royal dignity, by means of any contumelious, insulting, or disparaging words, acts, or gestures.

ARTICLE 66.

SOLEMNISING OR ASSISTING AT MARRIAGE OF A MEMBER OF THE ROYAL FAMILY.

³ Every person commits a misdemeanor who knowingly or wilfully presumes to solemnize, or to assist, or to be present at the celebration of any marriage of any descendant of the body of King George the Second, male or female (other than the issue of princesses married into foreign families), or at his or her making any matrimonial contract without the consent specified in 12 Geo. 3, c. 11.

Every person committing such a misdemeanor is put out of the Queen's protection. His lands, tenements, goods, and chattels are forfeited to the Queen, and he is to be imprisoned for life (perhaps, at the Queen's pleasure).

¹ "Any gun, pistol, or any other description of firearms, or of other arms whatsoever."

AFFRAYS, UNLAWFUL ASSEMBLIES, ROUTS, RIOTS, TUMULTUOUS PETITIONING AND UNLAWFUL DRILLING.

ARTICLE 67.

SENDING CHALLENGES AND PROVOKING TO FIGHT.

EVERY one commits a misdemeanor who

- (a.) ¹ Challenges any other person to fight a duel ; or,
- (b.) ² Endeavours by words, or by writings, to provoke any other person to challenge the offender or to commit a breach of the peace.

ARTICLE 68.

GOING ARMED SO AS TO CAUSE FEAR.

Every unlawful assembly is a misdemeanor.

(a.) ¹ Sixteen persons meet for the purpose of going out to commit the offence of being by night, unlawfully, upon land, armed in pursuit of game. This is an unlawful assembly.

(b.) ² A, B, and C meet for the purpose of concerting an indictable fraud. This, though a conspiracy, is not an unlawful assembly.

(c.) ³ A, B, and C having met for a lawful purpose, quarrel and fight. This (though an affray) is not an unlawful assembly.

(d.) ⁴ A large number of persons hold a meeting to consider a petition to parliament lawful in itself; but they assemble in such numbers, with such a show of force and organization, and when assembled make use of such language as to lead persons of ordinary firmness and courage in the neighbourhood to apprehend a breach of the peace. This is an unlawful assembly.

PERSONS ASSEMBLED IN ORDER TO SMUGGLE.

² Every one commits a misdemeanor, and is liable to a fine of not more than £500, and not less than £100, who ventilating, or draining any mine, or any staith, building, or erection used in conducting the business of any mine, or any bridge, waggon-way, or trunk for conveying minerals from any mine.

² 39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, ss. 188, 9. These sections are obscure in some points. I believe them to mean what is stated in the text. The first part of the article gives the effect of s. 188 with only a slight change in the order of the words. The second part is what I suppose to be the meaning of s. 189. That section begins by providing that every one who procures or hires any person to assemble for the purposes specified in the 3rd paragraph of the Article in the text, is to be imprisoned for the term mentioned. It then proceeds to enact that if any person "engaged in the commission of any of the above offences" is armed, or disguised, &c., he is to be imprisoned for a term not exceeding three years. "The above offences" can hardly mean the offences mentioned in the earlier part of the section, as a man hiring another to run goods would hardly be likely to be armed or disguised, nor would it make matters worse if he were. I suppose, therefore, the "above offences" are the offences specified in s. 188, though the words may probably refer also to numerous revenue offences created by s. 186. This, however, raises new difficulties. Upon this view the latter part of s. 189 enacts that a person is to be imprisoned if, forming one of an assembly of three people for smuggling purposes, he is, (1) armed, (2) disguised, (3) armed and in possession of smuggled goods within five miles of the coast, &c., (4) disguised and in possession of smuggled goods, &c. It is impossible for any one to commit (3) or (4) unless he has already committed either (1) or (2). Why, then, should any special punishment be provided for him? It is like enacting that every man who steals a sheep shall be liable to penal servitude, and then enacting separately that if he steals it on a road or in a field he shall be liable to the same punishment. I rather think the intention must have been to provide for the case of a person found alone in possession of smuggled goods near the coast, and armed or disguised, and that by a slip in the drafting some such words as "or if any person whatever" were left out before the words "so armed or disguised." A comparison of this provision with s. 250 of the repealed Act strengthens this conjecture. In with any two other persons assembles for,¹ or having so assembled, does unship, land, run, carry, convey, or conceal any spirits, tobacco, or prohibited, restricted, or uncustomed goods.

If any person engaged in any of the said offences is armed with firearms or other offensive weapons, or, whether so armed or not, is disguised in any way, or being so armed or disguised is found within five miles of the sea coast or of any tidal river with any goods liable to forfeiture under the 39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, or any other Act relating to the Customs, he must be imprisoned with or without hard labour for a term not exceeding three years.

Every one must be imprisoned for a term not exceeding twelve months who procures, or hires, or deposes, or authorizes any other person to procure or hire any person or persons to assemble for the purpose of being concerned in the landing or unshipping, or carrying, conveying, or concealing any goods which are prohibited to be imported, or the duties for which have not been paid or secured.

ARTICLE 77.

THREE PERSONS ARMED IN PURSUIT OF GAME BY NIGHT.

² Every one commits a misdemeanor, and is liable, upon conviction thereof, to a maximum punishment of fourteen that enactment an assembly of five persons for the purposes mentioned formed one offence, and an assembly of two persons formed another. There must be some mistake in the drafting, as there is no nominative case to the verb "shall be imprisoned."

⁴ 1 Russ. Cr. 421-434; 1 Hawk. P. C. 495-512. There are many statutes in force on the subject, viz. 5 Ric. 2, st. 1, c. 7 (8 in common editions); 15 Ric. 2, c. 2; 8 Hen. 6, c. 9; 31 Eliz. c. 11; 21 Ja. 1, c. 15. These statutes give no definition of the offence, but provide a mode of procedure for giving possession to the party forcibly dispossessed. It is curious to compare these provisions with the Indian Code of Criminal Procedure, Act X., of 1872, c. 40. See on forcible entry, Low v. Telford, L. R. 1 App. Cas. 414. Draft Code, s. 95.

any lands or tenements in a violent manner, whether such violence consists in actual force applied to any other person or in threats, or in breaking open any house, or in collecting together an unusual number of persons for the purpose of making such entry.

It is immaterial whether the person making such an entry had or had not a right to enter, provided that a person who enters upon land or tenements of his own, but which are in the custody of his servant or bailiff, does not commit the offence of forcible entry.

Every one commits the misdemeanor called a forcible detainer who, having wrongfully entered upon any lands or tenements, detains such lands and tenements in a manner which would render an entry upon them for the purpose of taking possession forcible.

POLITICAL MEETINGS IN WESTMINSTER.

¹ Every meeting is an unlawful assembly which consists of more than fifty persons, and is held in any street, square, or open place in the city or liberties of Westminster, or county of Middlesex, within a mile from the gate of Westminster Hall, and out of the parish of St. Paul's, Covent Garden, for the purpose, or on the pretext, of considering or preparing any petition or address to the Queen, or to both Houses or either House of Parliament, for alteration of matters in Church or State, on any day on which either House of Parliament meets, sits, or is summoned or adjourned, or prorogued to meet or sit, or on which the ² High Court of Justice, or any division or judge thereof, sits at Westminster Hall: Provided that this does not extend to any meeting held for the election of members of parliament, or to persons attending upon the business of either House of Parliament, or the said Court, or any of its divisions or judges.

¹ 57 Geo. 3, c. 19, s. 23.

² "His Majesty's Courts of Chancery, King's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer, or any of them, or any judge of any of them," &c. These words will be made inoperative by the removal of the Courts to the Royal Courts of Justice.

Every person who convenes or calls together, or gives any notice for convening or calling together any such meeting commits a misdemeanor.

ARTICLE 81.

PROCURING SIGNATURES TO PETITION WITHOUT AUTHORITY AND TUMULTUOUS PETITIONING.

¹ Every one commits a misdemeanor, and is liable, upon conviction thereof, to a penalty not exceeding the sum of £100 in money, and three months imprisonment,

(a.) who solicits, labours, or procures the getting of hands or other consent of more than twenty persons to any petition or address to the Queen, or to either House or both Houses of Parliament, for alteration of matters established by law in Church or State, unless the matter of the petition or address has been first consented to and ordered by three or more justices of the county where the matter arises, or by the major part of the grand jury at the assizes or quarter sessions, or in London by the lord mayor, aldermen, and commons, in common council assembled.

(b.) who repairs to the Queen or either House of Parliament upon pretence of presenting any petition or address accompanied by more than ten persons at any one time.

ARTICLE 82.

UNLAWFUL DRILLING.

² All assemblies are unlawful which are held in order that the persons assembled may train or drill themselves, or be trained or drilled to the use of arms, or for the purpose of practising military movements or evolutions without lawful authority.

Every person commits felony, and is liable upon conviction thereof to a ³ maximum punishment of seven years penal servitude, who

Every person commits a misdemeanor, and is liable upon conviction thereof to a maximum punishment of two years imprisonment and fine, who attends or is present at any such assembly for the purpose of being, or who at any such assembly is, trained or drilled to the use of arms, or the practice of military exercise, movements, or evolutions.

CHAPTER VIII.

OFFENCES AGAINST INTERNAL TRANQUILLITY BY UNLAWFUL ENGAGEMENTS AND COMBINATIONS AND CONFEDERACIES.

ARTICLE 83.

UNLAWFUL OATHS. OATHS TO COMMIT MURDER OR TREASON.

¹ EVERY one is guilty of felony, and liable to penal servitude for life, as a maximum punishment, the maximum alternative term of imprisonment being in case (a.) three years, who

(a.) Administers, or causes to be administered, or aids or assists at the administering of any oath, engagement, or obligation in the nature of an oath, purporting, or intending to bind the person taking the same to commit treason or murder, or any felony which on the 12th of July, 1812, was punishable with death; or (b.) Takes any such oath or engagement, not being compelled thereto.

ARTICLE 84.

OTHER UNLAWFUL OATHS.

² 37 Geo. 3, c. 123, ss. 1, 5 (redrawn). The punishment is transportation for any term not exceeding seven years, and no alternative term of imprisonment is given. The 9 & 10 Vict. c. 24, s. 1, applies only to cases in which a sentence of more than seven years transportation may be given. It does not therefore apply to this case. By the penal servitude statutes, penal servitude is substituted for transportation, and five years is now the minimum term for which penal servitude can be inflicted. The result would, I suppose, be as stated in the text. Draft Code, s. 100.

administering or taking of any oath, or engagement or obligation in the nature of an oath, purporting or intending to bind the person taking the same—

- (i.) To engage in any mutinous or seditious purpose ;
- (ii.) To disturb the public peace ;
- (iii.) To be of any association, society, or confederacy formed for any such purpose ;
- (iv.) To obey the orders or commands of any committee or body of men not lawfully constituted, or of any leader or commander, or other person not having authority by law for that purpose ;
- (v.) Not to inform or give evidence against any associate, confederate, or other person ;

ARTICLE 85.

COMPULSION, HOW FAR A DEFENCE.

² No person who takes any oath or engagement referred to in Article 83 or Article 84, under compulsion, shall be justified or excused thereby, unless within fourteen days after the taking thereof in the case of oaths referred to in Article 83, or within four days after the taking thereof in the case of oaths referred to in Article 84, if not prevented by actual force or sickness, and then within four days after the cessation of the hindrance produced by such force or sickness, he declares the same, and the whole of what he knows touching the same, and the persons by whom, and in whose presence, and when and where such oath or engagement was administered or taken, by information on oath before one of Her Majesty's justices of the peace, or one of Her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, or Her Majesty's Privy Council; or if he is in actual service in Her Majesty's forces by sea or land, either by such information on oath as aforesaid, or by information to his commanding officer.

ARTICLE 86.

UNLAWFUL CLUBS AND SOCIETIES.

¹ Every club or society is an unlawful combination and confederacy :

(a.) If its members according to its rules, or according to any provision or agreement for that purpose, are required, or permitted to, or do take any unlawful oath or undertaking as defined in Articles 83 and 84, or any oath not required or authorized by law ; or

(b.) Take or in any manner bind themselves by any such oath or agreement on becoming or in consequence of being members of any such society ; or

(c.) ² Take, subscribe, or assent to any test or declaration not required or authorized by law or allowed in the manner mentioned in the note hereto, whether by words, signs, or otherwise, either in order to become or in consequence of being a member of such society or club ; or

² The form of the test must be approved and subscribed by two or more justices of the peace of the county, and registered with the clerk of the peace. Such approbation is valid only till the next general session for the county, unless on application made by the parties concerned it is then confirmed by the majority of the justices present. Sect 3.

(d.) If the names of the members, or any of them, are kept secret from the society at large; or

(e.) ¹ If there is any committee or select body so chosen or appointed that the members constituting the same are not known by the society at large to be members of such committee or select body; or

(f.) If there is any president, secretary, delegate, or other officer so chosen or appointed that his election or appointment to such office is not known to the society at large; or

(g.) If the names of all the members, and of all committees or select bodies of members, and of all presidents, treasurers, secretaries, delegates, and other officers, are not entered in a book or books to be kept for that purpose, and to be open to the inspection of all the members of such society; or

(h.) If the society is composed of different divisions or branches, or of different parts acting in any manner separately or distinct from each other, or of which any part has any separate or distinct president, secretary, treasurer, delegate, or other officer elected or appointed by or for such part, or to act as an officer for such part; or

(i.) If the society elects, appoints, nominates, or employs any committee, delegate, representative, or missionary to meet or communicate with any other society or club, or with any committee, delegate, representative, or missionary of any other society or club, or to induce or persuade any person to become a member thereof; or

(j.) ² If the society professes for its object the confiscation and division of land, and the extinction of the funded property of the kingdom.

² In the 57 Geo. 3, c. 19, reference is made by name to the Spenceans, or Spencean Philanthropists, analogous to the reference in 39 Geo. 3, c. 79, to the United Englishmen, &c.

ARTICLE 87.

QUAKERS AND RELIGIOUS AND CHARITABLE SOCIETIES EXCEPTED.

¹ The provisions of Article 86 do not extend to any meeting or society of Quakers, or to any meeting or society formed or assembled for purposes of a religious or charitable nature only, and in which no other matter or business is treated of or discussed, or to any lodge of Freemasons, two members of which certify on oath in the manner prescribed in 39 Geo. 3, c. 79, s. 6.

ARTICLE 88.

PUNISHMENT OF MEMBERS.

² Every member of any such society, and every person who acts as a member thereof, or directly or indirectly maintains correspondence or intercourse with any such society, or with any division, branch, committee, or other select body, president, treasurer, secretary, delegate, or other officer or member thereof as such, or aids, abets, or supports any such society by contribution of money or otherwise, is liable, upon summary conviction, to be imprisoned for not more than three months, or less than one month, or to be fined not more than £20, and not less than £6 6s. 8d., and in default of payment to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding three months, or if convicted on indictment, to a maximum punishment of seven years penal servitude, or two years imprisonment without hard labour.

ARTICLE 89.

PERMITTING MEETINGS OF UNLAWFUL CLUBS.

³ Whoever knowingly permits any meeting of any club or society, or any division, committee, or branch of a club or society declared by Article 86 to be unlawful, to be held in any house or place belonging to him or in his occupation, is liable to a penalty of £5 for the first offence, and for every subsequent offence is deemed to be guilty of an unlawful combination and confederacy, and is liable to the penalties specified in Article 88.

ARTICLE 90.

JESUITS AND MONKS.

¹ Every Jesuit, and every member of any other religious order, community, or society of the Church of Rome bound by monastic or religious vows who comes into this realm, commits a misdemeanor, and is liable upon conviction thereof to be banished from the United Kingdom for the term of his natural life,

² provided that the Secretary of State, being a Protestant, may grant a licence to any such person to come into the United Kingdom and to remain there for a period not exceeding six months; and any Secretary of State may revoke such licence before the expiration of the time mentioned therein. If the licensee does not depart from the United Kingdom within twenty days after the time mentioned in the licence, or after notice of revocation thereof, he commits a misdemeanor, and is liable to be banished from the United Kingdom for life.

³ Every such person commits a misdemeanor who, within any part of the United Kingdom, admits any person to become a regular ecclesiastic, or brother or member of any such religious order, community, or society, or aids or consents thereto, or administers or causes to be administered, or aids or assists in administering, any vow or engagement purporting or intended to bind the persons taking the same to the rules, ordinances, or ceremonies of such religious order, community, or society.

² Every person ordered to be banished who is found at large in the United Kingdom after three months from such order is liable to penal servitude for life as a maximum punishment.

ARTICLE 91.

SEDITIONOUS WORDS AND LIBELS.

⁴ Every one commits a misdemeanor who with a seditious intention speaks any words or publishes anything capable of being a libel. If the matter published consists of words spoken, the offence is called the speaking of seditious words. If the matter so published is contained in anything capable of being a libel, the offence is called the publication of a seditious libel.

The word "publish" in this article is used in the same sense as in Article 270, and the word "libel" in the second of the two senses specified in Article 267.

ARTICLE 92.

SEDITIONOUS CONSPIRACY.

other person or persons to do any act for the furtherance of any seditious intention common to both or all of them. Such an offence is called a seditious conspiracy.

ARTICLE 93.

SEDITIONOUS INTENTION DEFINED.

¹ A seditious intention is an intention to bring into hatred or contempt, or to excite disaffection against the person of, Her Majesty, her heirs or successors, or the government and constitution of the United Kingdom, as by law established, or either House of Parliament, or the administration of justice, or to excite Her Majesty's subjects to attempt, otherwise than by lawful means, the alteration of any matter in Church or State by law established, ² or to incite any person to commit any crime in disturbance of the peace, or to raise discontent or disaffection amongst Her Majesty's subjects, or to promote feelings of ill-will and hostility between different classes of such subjects.

³ An intention to shew that Her Majesty has been misled or mistaken in her measures, or to point out errors or defects in the government or constitution as by law established, with a view to their reformation, or to excite Her Majesty's subjects to attempt by lawful means the alteration of any matter in Church or State by law established, or to point out, in order to their removal, matters which are producing, or have a tendency to produce, feelings of hatred and ill-will between classes of Her Majesty's subjects, is not a seditious intention.

² These words were not in the earlier editions of this work. I do not think they enlarge the sense, but they make it more explicit. They were intended to meet such cases as those of Most and Mertens, tried in 1881 and 1882 for publishing articles in the Freiheit applauding the assassination of the Emperor of Russia and that of Lord Frederick Cavendish and Mr. Burke at Dublin. See too the case of R. v. Collins, 9 C. & P. 456, and judgment of Littledale, J., 460.

ARTICLE 94.

PRESUMPTION AS TO INTENTION.

¹ In determining whether the intention with which any words were spoken, any document was published, or any agreement was made, was or was not seditious, every person must be deemed to intend the consequences which would naturally follow from his conduct at the time and under the circumstances in which he so conducted himself.

ARTICLE 95.

SPREADING FALSE NEWS.

² Every one commits a misdemeanor who cites or publishes any false news or tales whereby discord or occasion of discord or slander may grow between the Queen and her people or the great men of the realm (³ or which may produce other mischiefs).

CHAPTER IX.

OFFENCES AGAINST EXTERNAL PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY.

OFFENCES AGAINST FOREIGN NATIONS.

ARTICLE 96.

VIOLATION OF AMBASSADORS' PRIVILEGES.

¹EVERY one is guilty of a misdemeanor who, by force or personal restraint, violates any privilege conferred upon the diplomatic representatives of foreign countries by the law of nations, as collected by Her Majesty's Courts from the practice of different nations, and the authority of writers thereon.

ARTICLE 97.

ARREST OF AMBASSADOR.

²Every one commits a misdemeanor who sets forth or prosecutes or executes any writ or process whereby is arrested or imprisoned the person of any ambassador or other public minister of any foreign prince or state, authorized and received as such by Her Majesty, or any domestic servant of any such ambassador or minister, registered as such in the office of a principal secretary of state, or in the office of the sheriff of London and Middlesex.

ARTICLE 98.

PUNISHMENT.

²Every person who commits the offence defined in Article 97 is liable to such pains, penalties, and corporal punishment as the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Chief Justice of England, and the Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, or any two of them, shall judge fit to be imposed and inflicted.

LIBELS ON FOREIGN POWERS.

¹Every one is guilty of a misdemeanor who publishes any libel tending to degrade, revile, or expose to hatred and contempt any foreign prince or potentate, ambassador or other foreign dignitary, with intent to disturb peace and friendship between the United Kingdom and the country to which any such person belongs.

The word "publish" is used here in the same sense as in Article 270, and the word "libel" in the second of the two senses specified in Article 267.

(SUBMITTED.) Nothing is an offence against this Article which is a fair criticism on a matter of public interest as defined in Article 274.

ARTICLE 100.

INTERFERENCE IN FOREIGN HOSTILITIES.

²Every person commits a misdemeanor, and is liable upon conviction thereof to fine and imprisonment with or without hard labour, or either of such punishments, at the discretion of the Court, who does any of the following acts ³without the licence of Her Majesty under her sign manual, or signified by Order in Council, or by proclamation, that is to say—

(c.) ² Who, being a British subject, quits or goes on board any ship with a view of quitting Her Majesty's dominions, with intent to accept any commission or engagement in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with a friendly state, or, whether a British subject or not, within her Majesty's dominions, induces any other person to quit or to go on board any ship with a view of quitting Her Majesty's dominions with the like intent ; or (ii.) If he gives such security, and takes and permits to be taken such other measures, if any, as the Secretary of State may prescribe for ensuring that such ship shall not be despatched, delivered, or removed without the licence of Her Majesty until the termination of such war as aforesaid.

ARTICLE 101.

SHIPS, ETC., REFERRED TO IN ARTICLE 100 TO BE FORFEITED.

¹ All ships and their equipments used in or forming part of any such expedition as is mentioned in Article 100 (a.), or in respect of which is committed any of the offences defined in or Article 100 (a.), and all arms and munitions of war used in forming part of any such expedition as is mentioned in Article 100 (a.), are forfeited to Her Majesty.

The expression "illegally enlisted persons" in Article 100 (a.) means—

(i.) Any person who, being a British subject, within or without the dominions of Her Majesty, has, without the licence of Her Majesty, accepted or agreed to accept any commission or engagement in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with any friendly state;

(ii.) Any person, being a British subject, who, without the licence of Her Majesty, is about to quit Her Majesty's dominions with intent to accept any commission or engagement in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with a friendly state;

(iii.) Any person who has been induced to embark under a misrepresentation or false representation of the service in which such person is to be engaged, with the intent or in order that such person may accept or agree to accept any commission or engagement in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with a friendly state;

Every ship referred to in Article 100 (d.) is to be detained until the trial and conviction or acquittal of the master or owner, and until all penalties inflicted on the master or owner have been paid, or the master or owner has given security for the payment of such penalties to the satisfaction of two justices of the peace, or other magistrate or magistrates having the authority of two justices of the peace; and

All illegally enlisted persons must, immediately on the discovery of the offence, be taken on shore, and must not be allowed to return to the ship.

INCREASING FORCE OF SHIPS FOR FOREIGN BELLIGERENTS, AND PROCURING ENLISTMENT BY MISREPRESENTATION.

Every person is guilty of a misdemeanor, and is liable upon conviction thereof to the punishment specified in the last Article, who

(b.) ² Who induces any other person to quit Her Majesty's dominions, or to embark on any ship within Her Majesty's dominions, under a misrepresentation or false representation of the service in which such person is to be engaged, with the intent or in order that such person may accept or agree to accept any commission or engagement in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with a friendly state.

ARTICLE 103.

PRESUMPTION OF KNOWLEDGE OF PURPOSE FOR WHICH SHIP IS BUILT.

CHAPTER X.

OFFENCES AGAINST PERSONS ON THE HIGH SEAS—PIRACY—SLAVE-TRADING.

ARTICLE 104.

Taking a ship on the high seas or within the jurisdiction of the Lord High Admiral from the possession or control of those who are lawfully entitled to it, and carrying away the ship itself, or any of its goods, tackle, apparel, or furniture, under circumstances which would have amounted to robbery if the act had been done within the body of an English county.

Whoever commits piracy by the law of nations is liable (it seems) to the same punishment as if the act constituting piracy had been committed within the body of an English county.

¹ The definition is founded on one given by Sir Charles Hedges, in R. v. Dawson, 13 St. Tr. 454, and recognised by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in A. G. of Hong Kong v. Kwok-a-sing, L. R. 5 P. C. 179, 199; see, too, 7th Rep. C. L. C. p. 70. As to the punishment, the text gives what I suppose is the result of 28 Hen. 8, c. 15, ss. 2 & 3; 39 Geo. 3, c. 37, s. 1; 1 Geo. 4, c. 90, s. 1; 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 12. The doubt expressed at the end of the Article is founded on the absence of any express authority for the affirmative of the proposition, and on the absurdity of the negative. If a Queen's ship were to fall in with an armed vessel belonging to no state, and obviously cruising for piratical purposes, would the commanding officer hesitate to seize that vessel because it had not actually taken a prize? It seems equally difficult to suppose that the vessel would be permitted to escape, or that it could lawfully be arrested if the crew were not pirates. The language of several of the statutes given in Articles 108, 109, and 110, seems to imply that a pirate is the name of a known class of persons, like a soldier or sailor, and that a man may be a pirate though he has never actually robbed, as he may be a soldier though he has not actually fought. By 13 & 14 Vict. c. 26 the Admiralty Courts are empowered when any of Her Majesty's ships attack or are engaged with any persons alleged to be pirates afloat or ashore, to "take cognizance of and determine whether the persons or any of them so attacked or engaged were pirates." The object of the Act was to determine the amount of certain rewards to be paid to the captors; no definition of pirates is given. See 2 Hist. Cr. Law, pp. 27-8, and Draft Code, s. 105.

It is doubtful whether persons cruising in armed vessels, with intent to commit piracies, are pirates or not.

PIRACY WITH VIOLENCE.

¹ Every one commits felony and must upon conviction thereof be sentenced to ² death who, with intent to commit or at the time of or immediately before or immediately after committing the crime of piracy in respect of any ship or vessel, assaults with intent to murder any person on board of or belonging to such ship or vessel, or stabs, cuts, or wounds any such person, or unlawfully does any act by which the life of such person may be endangered.

ARTICLE 106.

COMMITTING ACTS OF HOSTILITY UNDER FOREIGN COMMISSION.

³ Every one is deemed to be a pirate who, being a natural-born subject of Her Majesty, or denizen of this kingdom, commits any piracy, robbery, or act of hostility against others Her Majesty's subjects on the sea under colour of any commission from any foreign prince or state, or pretence of authority from any person whatever.

ARTICLE 108.

BOARDING SHIPS AND THROWING CARGO OVERBOARD.

¹ Every one is deemed to be a pirate who, belonging to any ship or vessel whatever, upon meeting any merchant ship or vessel on the high seas, or in any port, haven, or creek, forcibly boards and enters into such ship or vessel, and though he does not seize or carry off such ship or vessel, throws overboard or destroys any part of the goods or merchandises belonging to such ship or vessel.

ARTICLE 109.

MASTERS AND SEAMEN FAVOURING PIRATES.

² Every one is deemed to be a pirate who, being the commander or master of any ship, or a seaman or mariner in any place where the admiral has jurisdiction, betrays his trust, and turns pirate, enemy, or rebel, and piratically and feloniously runs away with his ship, or any barge, boat, ordnance, ammunition, goods, or merchandise ; or

Yields them up voluntarily to any pirate ; or Brings any seducing message from any pirate, enemy, or rebel ; or

Consults, combines, or confederates with or attempts to corrupt any commander, master, officer, or mariner to yield up or run away with any ship, goods, or merchandise, or turn pirate or go over to pirates ; or Confines his master, or makes or endeavours to make a revolt in the ship [¹ even if the object of such revolt is to redress real grievances].

ARTICLE 110.

TRADING WITH PIRATES AND CONSPIRING WITH THEM.

² Every one is deemed to be a pirate who in any wise trades with any pirate by truck, barter, exchange, or in any other manner, or furnishes any pirate, felon, or robber upon the seas with any ammunition, provision, or stores of any kind; or

Fits out any ship or vessel knowingly and with a design to trade with, or supply, or correspond with any pirate, felon, or robber on the seas; or

In any way consults, combines, confederates, or corresponds with any pirate, felon, or robber on the seas knowing him to be guilty of any such piracy, felony, or robbery.

ARTICLE 111.

PUNISHMENT FOR STATUTORY PIRACIES.

³ Every one who commits any of the offences defined in Articles 106–110, both inclusive, is liable upon conviction of such act to penal servitude for life as a maximum punishment, the maximum period of imprisonment being three years.

ARTICLE 113.

SLAVE-TRADING DEFINED.

¹ Each of the following acts and every contract to do any one of them is an act of slave-trading :—

(a.) To deal or trade in, purchase, sell, barter, or transfer slaves or persons intended to be dealt with as slaves.

(b.) To carry away or remove slaves or other persons as or in order to their being dealt with as slaves.

(c.) To import or bring into any place whatsoever slaves or other persons as or in order to their being dealt with as slaves.

(d.) To ship, tranship, embark, receive, detain, or confine on board any ² vessel slaves or other persons—

For the purpose of their being carried away or removed as or in order to their being dealt with as slaves ; or

For the purpose of their being imported into any place whatever as or in order to their being dealt with as slaves.

(e.) To fit out, man, navigate, equip, dispatch, use, employ, let, or take to freight, or on hire, any ² vessel, in order to do any act of slave-trading before mentioned.

(f.) To lend or advance, or become security for the loan or advance of money, goods or effects, employed or to be employed in any act of slave-trading before mentioned.

(g.) To become guarantee or security for agents employed, or to be employed in any act of slave-trading before mentioned.

² “ Ship, vessel, or boat.”

(h.) To engage in any other manner in any act of slave-trading before mentioned, directly or indirectly, as a partner, agent, or otherwise.

(i.) To ship, tranship, lade, receive, or put on board of any ¹ vessel money, goods, or effects, to be employed in any act of slave-trading before mentioned.

(j.) To take the charge or command, or to navigate, or enter and embark on board any ¹ vessel in ² any capacity, knowing that such ¹ vessel is employed in any act of slave-trading before mentioned, or is intended to be so employed upon the voyage or upon the occasion in which the embarkation takes place.

(k.) To insure slaves or property employed or intended to be employed in slave-trading.

ARTICLE 114.

PIRATICAL SLAVE-TRADING.

³ Every subject of Her Majesty, and every person resident or being in any of Her Majesty's dominions ⁴ commits piracy, felony, and robbery, and is liable, upon conviction thereof, to penal servitude for life as a maximum punishment, who upon the high seas, or in any place where the admiral has jurisdiction, knowingly and wilfully does or assists in doing any of the following things, that is to say:—

For the purpose of his being imported or brought as a slave into any ¹place whatsoever; or

For the purpose of his being sold, transferred, used, or dealt with as a slave.

PUNISHMENT OF SLAVE-TRADING.

²Every one [³owing allegiance to Her Majesty] commits felony, and is liable upon conviction thereof to be kept in penal servitude for a maximum term of fourteen years, or to be imprisoned with hard labour for a maximum term of five years who [³in any part of the world] does any of the acts of slave-trading specified in Article 113, clauses (a.), (b.), (c.), (d.), (e.); or Knowingly and wilfully does any of the acts of slave-trading specified in Article 113, clauses (f.), (g.), (h.), (i.), or (k.).

SERVING ON A SLAVE-SHIP, FELONY.

⁴Every one commits the same offence, and is liable to the same punishment as is specified in the last Article, who takes charge or command, or navigates, or embarks on board any vessel as captain, master, mate, surgeon, or supercargo, or contracts to do so, knowing that such vessel is actually employed, or is on that voyage or occasion intended to be employed in any act of slave-trading.

ARTICLE 117.

SERVING ON A SLAVE-SHIP, MISDEMEANOR.

¹ Every one commits a misdemeanor, and is liable upon conviction, to a maximum punishment of two years imprisonment, who with the knowledge mentioned in the last Article, does any of the things mentioned in that Article, as petty officer, seaman, marine, or servant, or in any other capacity not specifically mentioned therein.

ARTICLE 117A.

KIDNAPPING PACIFIC ISLANDERS.

² Every one commits felony and is liable upon conviction thereof to the highest punishment other than capital punishment, or to any less punishment awarded to any felony by the law of the colony in which he is tried, who

(i.) Decoys a native of any of the islands in the Pacific Ocean, not being in Her Majesty's dominions nor within the jurisdiction of any civilised power, for the purpose of importing or removing such native into any island or place other than that in which he was at the time of the commission of such offence; or carries away, confines, or detains any such native for the purpose aforesaid without his consent, proof of which consent lies on the party accused:

² 35 & 36 Vict. c. 19, ss. 9 and 10, and see preamble, for a definition of Pacific Islanders. Sect. 9 provides that offenders may be tried and punished for such felony in any supreme Court of Justice in any of the "Australian colonies," i.e. (see s. 2) New South Wales, New Zealand, Queensland, South Australia, Tasmania, Victoria, and Western Australia. To these Fiji was added by 38 & 39 Vict. c. 51, which also empowered Her Majesty to erect a court at Fiji for the trial of offences committed in the Pacific Ocean, or the islands thereof. The Acts do not seem to contemplate the trial in England of such offences. There are however no words to exclude the jurisdiction of the English Courts, though the provisions as to punishment depend upon the laws of the colonies. It may be that if such an offence were tried in England, 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, ss. 8 and 9, would apply (see Article 18, supra). See as to this subject, 2 Hist. Cr. Law, p. 58-9.

for the purpose aforesaid, or native of any of the aforesaid islands, on board any vessel either on the high seas or elsewhere without the consent of such native, proof of which consent lies on the party accused :

(iii.) Contracts for the shipping, embarking, receiving, detaining, or confining on board any vessel for the purpose aforesaid any such native without his consent, proof of which consent lies on the party accused :

(iv.) Fits out, mans, navigates, equips, uses, employs, lets or takes on freight or hire any vessel, or commands or serves or is on board any such vessel with intent to commit, or that any one on board such vessel should commit, any of the offences above enumerated :

(v.) Ships, lades, receives, or puts on board, or contracts for the shipping, lading, receiving, or putting on board of any vessel money, goods, or other articles with the intent that they should be employed, or knowing that they will be employed, in the commission of any of the offences above enumerated.

Any person who aids, abets, counsels, or procures the commission of any of the said offences, is liable to be tried and punished as a principal offender.

CHAPTER XI.

ABUSES OF AUTHORITY, OPPRESSION, EXTORTION, FRAUD, NEGLECT OF DUTY, REFUSAL TO ACT.

ARTICLE 118.

"PUBLIC OFFICER" DEFINED.

¹ The expression "public officer," in this chapter, means a person invested with authority to execute any public duty, and legally bound to do so, but does not include any member of either House of Parliament as such, or any ecclesiastical, naval, or military officer acting in the discharge of duties for the due discharge of which he can be made accountable only by an ecclesiastical, naval, or military court.

ARTICLE 119.

EXTORTION AND OPPRESSION BY PUBLIC OFFICERS.

² Every public officer commits a misdemeanor who, in the exercise, or under colour of exercising the duties of his office, does any illegal act, or abuses any discretionary power with which he is invested by law from an improper motive, the existence of which motive may be inferred either from the nature of the act, or from the circumstances of the case. But an illegal exercise of authority caused by a mistake as to the law, made in good faith, is not a misdemeanor within this Article.

¹If the illegal act consists in taking under colour of office from any person any money or valuable thing which is not due from him at the time when it is taken, the offence is called "extortion."

If it consists in inflicting upon any person any bodily harm, imprisonment, or other injury, not being extortion, the offence is called "oppression."

¹ 4th Article of impeachment against Scroggs, C.J., 8 St. Tr. 199.

² This was the gist of the Cheyte Singh charge in the impeachment of Warren Hastings. It is remarkable that neither in Debre'tt's History of the Trial, nor in Mr. Mill's History of India, nor in Lord Macaulay's elaborate Essay on Warren Hastings, nor in Marshman's History of India, are the charges against Hastings distinctly stated. It seems to a lawyer natural to give at least an abstract of the indictment in order to render an account of a trial intelligible, but historians are apt to take a different view. Lord Macaulay in particular is so much interested in Burke's rhetoric that he omits to say what it was all about. In Mr. Massey's History of George III., vol. iii. p. 337, Burke's summary of the ten charges which he opened is given, but Mr. Massey observes that only one of the ten was distinct and substantive." The transactions with Cheyte Singh are described in Mill's British India, iv. 321, &c., in Lord Macaulay's Essays, p. 620 (ed. of 1850), and in Marshman's History, i. 424.

ARTICLE 120.

ILLEGALLY IMPRISONING SUBJECTS BEYOND THE SEAS.

⁵ Every one commits a misdemeanor who knowingly frames, contrives, writes, seals, or countersigns any warrant for the commitment, detainer, or transportation of any subject of this realm resident in England, Wales, or Berwick, as a prisoner in or to Scotland, Ireland, Jersey, Guernsey, or any other place beyond the sea, with or without the Queen's dominions, or who so commits, detains, imprisons, or transports any person.

Whoever commits any such misdemeanor is put out of the Queen's protection. His lands, tenements, goods, and chattels are forfeited to the Queen, and he is to be imprisoned for life (or perhaps at the Queen's pleasure).

FRAUDS AND BREACHES OF TRUST BY OFFICERS.

NEGLECT OF OFFICIAL DUTY.

ARTICLE 123.

REFUSAL TO SERVE AN OFFICE.

⁴ Every one commits a misdemeanor who unlawfully refuses or omits to take upon himself and serve any public office which he is by law required to accept if duly appointed; but this article does not extend to cases in which any other penalty is imposed by law for such refusal or neglect, or to any case in which by law or by custom any person is permitted to make any composition in place of serving any office.

³ R. v. James, 2 Den. 1. The conviction in this case was quashed on the narrow ground that the parties did not sufficiently tender themselves for marriage. The objection that the offence was only an ecclesiastical one was taken, but no judgment was delivered on it. A refusal to bury would probably stand on the same footing. By 1 Edw. 6, c. 1, it is enacted that a minister "shall not without lawful cause deny" (the Sacrament) "to any person that will devoutly and humbly desire it." An indictment for such a denial would be incongruous and indecent, but it is difficult to find any definite legal ground for saying that it would not lie. (See Jenkins v. Cook, L. R. 1 P. D. 80).

CHAPTER XII.

DISOBEDIENCE TO LAWFUL ORDERS.

ARTICLE 124.

DISOBEDIENCE TO A STATUTE.

¹ EVERY one commits a misdemeanor who wilfully disobeys any statute of the realm by doing any act which it forbids, or by omitting to do any act which it requires to be done, and which concerns the public or any part of the public, unless it appears from the statute that it was the intention of the Legislature to provide some other penalty for such disobedience.

ARTICLE 125.

DISOBEDIENCE TO LAWFUL ORDERS OF COURT, &c.

² Every one commits a misdemeanor who disobeys any order, warrant, or command duly made, issued, or given by any court, officer, or person acting in any public capacity and duly authorized in that behalf, unless any other penalty or mode of proceeding is expressly prescribed in respect of such disobedience.

(1.) ³ A refuses to assist a constable in the execution of his duty when lawfully called upon by the constable to do so. A commits a misdemeanor.

⁴ R. v. Ferrall, 2 Den. 51. In this case Pollock, C.B., asked how it would be if the man could not pay? and whether a refusal to pay a fine is indictable. The answer would seem to be that it is. Imprisonment on such an indictment would only be a roundabout way of doing what is commonly done in cases of fine, viz., inflicting an alternative term of imprisonment. Whether a man is sentenced to be fined £100 and to be imprisoned in default of payment, or to be imprisoned because he has not obeyed the order of the Court to pay a fine of £100, is rather a matter of form than anything else.

CHAPTER XIII.

BRIBERY AND CORRUPTION—SALE OF OFFICES.

ARTICLE 126.

JUDICIAL CORRUPTION.

¹ EVERY one who gives or offers to any person holding any judicial office, and every person holding any judicial office who accepts any bribe, commits a misdemeanor.

Every gift or payment made in respect of or in relation to any business having been, being, or about to be transacted before any such person in his office is a bribe, whether it is given in order to influence the judicial officer in something to be done, or to reward him for something already done, and whether the thing done or to be done is itself proper or improper.

ARTICLE 127.

CORRUPTION OF OTHER PUBLIC OFFICERS.

² EVERY one commits a misdemeanor who by any means endeavours to force, persuade, or induce any public officer not being a judicial officer to do or omit to do any act which the offender knows to be a violation of such officer's official duty.

EMBRACERY.

³ EVERY one commits the misdemeanor called embracery

¹ 3 Inst. 144-8; 1 Hawk. P. C. 414-15; 5th Rep. C. L. C. p. 20-1. See, too, Spedding's Life of Bacon, vii. 209-78. The crime is so rare that the definition is very imperfect and more or less conjectural. See 3 Hist. Cr. Law, 250-5; Draft Code, s. 111.

³ 1 Hawk. P. C. 466; 1 Russ. Cr. 264. It is provided by the Jury Act of 1825, 6 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 61, that "notwithstanding anything therein contained every person who shall be guilty of the offence of embracery, and every juror who shall be guilty or who by any means whatever except the production of evidence and argument in open court attempts to influence or instruct any jurymen, or to incline him to be more favourable to the one side than to the other in any judicial proceeding whether any verdict is given or not, and whether such verdict, if given, is true or false.

ARTICLE 129.

DEFINITION OF BRIBERY OF VOTERS.

¹ Every one is guilty of bribery

(a.) Who directly or indirectly by himself or by any other person on his behalf,

² In order to induce any voter to vote or refrain from voting at any election;

³ or corruptly on account of such voter's having voted or refrained from voting at any election;

⁴ or in order to induce any person to procure or endeavour to procure the return of any person at any election, or the vote of any voter at any election,

(i.) ⁵ Gives, lends, or agrees to give or lend, or offers or promises, or promises to procure or to endeavour to procure any money or valuable consideration to or for ⁶ any person whatever :

(ii.) ⁷ Gives or procures, or agrees to give or procure, or offers or promises, or promises to procure or to endeavour to procure any office, place, or employment to or for any person whatever ; or corruptly consent thereto," shall be liable to be proceeded against, and punished as before the Act. I do not know what was the reason for this section. See Draft Code, s. 129.

(b.) ⁸ Who in consequence of any such gift, loan, offer,

⁸ Sect. 2 (4).

promise, procurement, or engagement, procures or engages, promises or endeavours to procure the return of any person in any election or the vote of any voter at any election; or

(c.) ¹ Who advances or pays or causes to be paid any money to, or to the use of any other person, with the intent that such money or any part thereof shall be expended in bribery at any election, or who knowingly pays or causes to be paid any money to any person in discharge or repayment of any money wholly or in part expended in bribery at any election; or

(d.) ² Who being a voter before or during any election directly or indirectly by himself or by any other person on his behalf receives, agrees, or contracts for any money, gift, loan, or valuable consideration, office, place, or employment for himself or for any other person for voting or agreeing to vote, or for refraining or agreeing to refrain from voting at any election; or

(e.) ³ Who after any election directly or indirectly by himself or by any other person on his behalf receives any money or valuable consideration on account of any person having voted or refrained from voting, or having induced any other person to vote or to refrain from voting.

Nothing in clauses (a.), (b.), or (c.) extends to any money paid or agreed to be paid for or on account of any legal expenses bona fide incurred at, or concerning any election.

ARTICLE 130.

DEFINITION OF UNDUE INFLUENCE.

⁴ Every one commits the offence of undue influence

(a.) Who directly or indirectly by himself or by any other person on his behalf makes use of or threatens to make use of any force, violence, or restraint, or inflicts or threatens the infliction by himself or by or through any other person of any injury, damage, harm, or loss, or in any other manner

practises intimidation upon or against any person in order to induce or compel him to vote or refrain from voting, or on account of his having voted or refrained from voting at any election; or (b.) Who by abduction, duress, or any fraudulent device or contrivance impedes, prevents, or otherwise interferes with the free exercise of the franchise of any voter, or thereby compels, induces, or prevails upon any voter either to give or to refrain from giving his vote at any election.

ARTICLE 131.

PUNISHMENT OF BRIBERY AT CERTAIN ELECTIONS.

¹ Every person is guilty of a misdemeanor who commits bribery or undue influence at or in respect of any election of any member to serve in Parliament, or any election to the office of mayor, alderman, councillor, auditor, assessor of a borough or ward of a borough subject to the provisions of the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76.

ARTICLE 132.

DEFINITION OF OFFICE.

The word "office" in Articles 133 and 134 includes

² Every office in the gift of the Crown or of any officer appointed by the Crown, and all commissions, civil, naval and military, and all places or employments in any public department or office whatever in any part of her Majesty's dominions whatever, and all deputations to any such office and every participation in the profits of any such office or deputation.

ARTICLE 133.

SELLING OFFICES.

³ Every one commits a misdemeanor who does any of the following things in respect of any office, or any appointment

¹ 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, ss. 2, 3, 5; 35 & 36 Vict. c. 60, ss. 2, 3. Offenders are also liable to be sued for penalties by informers.

³ 49 Geo. 3, c. 126, s. 3, greatly condensed.

to or resignation of any office, or any consent to any such appointment or resignation, that is to say, every one who directly or indirectly

(a.) Sells the same, or receives any reward or profit from the sale thereof, or agrees to do so :

(b.) Purchases, or gives any reward or profit for the purchase thereof, or agrees or promises to do so.

¹ Whoever commits either of these misdemeanors upon its commission forfeits to the Queen any right which he may have in the office, and is disabled to hold it for life, and it is not lawful for the Queen to dispense him from such disability.

ARTICLE 134.

MAKING INTEREST FOR OFFICES FOR REWARD.

² Every one commits a misdemeanor who does any of the following things directly or indirectly :

(a.) Receives or agrees to receive any reward or profit for any interest, request, or negotiation about any office, or under pretence of using any such interest, making any such request or being concerned in any such negotiation :

(b.) Gives or procures to be given any profit or reward, or makes or procures to be made any agreement for the giving of any profit or reward for any such request or negotiation as aforesaid :

(c.) Solicits, recommends, or negotiates in any manner as to any appointment to or resignation of any office in expectation of any reward or profit :

(d.) ³ Keeps any office or place for transacting or negotiating any business relating to vacancies in or the sale or purchase of or appointment to or resignation of offices.

It was, however, extended to offices in the Customs as well as to many others, by 49 Geo. 3, c. 126. I do not quite understand the result of this. The present Customs Act, 39 & 40 Vict. c. 36, throws no light on the subject.

CHAPTER XIV.

MISLEADING JUSTICE—PERJURY—FALSE SWEARING—SUBORNATION.

ARTICLE 135.

* PERJURY DEFINED.

² In this definition, the word "oath" includes every affirmation which any class of persons are by law permitted to make in place of an oath.

⁴ The fact that a person takes an oath in any particular form is a binding admission that he regards it as binding on his conscience.

⁵ The expression "judicial proceeding," means a proceeding

* See 3 Hist. Cr. Law, pp. 240-50.

¹ 3rd Inst. 167; 1 Hawk. P. C. 429-435; 3 Russ. Cr. 1, &c., and see note, 5th Report, C. L. C. 23. Draft Code, s. 119.

² Many statutes to this effect have been passed. See in particular 32 & 33 Vict. c. 68, s. 4; 33 & 34 Vict. c. 49; and see statutes as to particular religious bodies collected in 3 Russ. Cr. 26-9.

which takes place in or under the authority of any Court of justice, or which relates in any way to the administration of justice, or which legally ascertains any right or liability.

² The word "fact" includes the fact that the witness holds any opinion or belief.

³ The word "material" means of such a nature as to affect in any way, directly or indirectly, the probability of anything to be determined by the proceeding, or the credit of any witness, and a fact may be material although evidence of its existence was improperly admitted.

Illustrations.

(1.) A swears that certain goods are of a certain value.

⁴ A is entirely ignorant upon the subject. A is guilty of perjury whether the goods are of that value or not.

The goods are not of that value, and A knows it. A has committed perjury.

⁵ The goods are of that value, but A believes that they are not. A has committed perjury.

The goods are not of that value, but A believes that they are. A has not committed perjury.

(3.) ⁷ An inquiry before a sheriff as to the amount of damages is a judicial proceeding.

(4.) ⁸ An inquiry before a justice of the peace as to making a man find sureties for the peace is a judicial proceeding.

(5.) ⁹ A swears that he thinks that certain words are in his handwriting. The jury find that he did not think so. A commits perjury.

(7.) ² A falsely swears that he has examined a paper, alleged to be a copy, with an original will, in order to make the copy admissible. The paper is not put in evidence, and it would not have been admissible if it had been tendered. A commits perjury on a material fact.

ARTICLE 136.

SUBORNATION OF PERJURY.

³ Subornation of perjury is procuring a person to commit a perjury, which he actually commits in consequence of such procurement.

ARTICLE 137.

PUNISHMENT OF PERJURY AND SUBORNATION.

⁴ Perjury and subornation of perjury are misdemeanors, and every one who commits either is liable, upon conviction, to any term of penal servitude, or imprisonment with or without hard labour, not exceeding seven years.

ARTICLE 138.

FALSE SWEARING.

² Philpott's Case, 2 Den. C. C. 309.

³ If the perjury is not committed, the crime is incitement: see Article 47. See also 1 Hawk. P. C. 435, c. 87, s. 10. Draft Code, s. 119.

⁴ The punishment at common law was whipping, imprisonment, fine, and pillory. By 2 Geo. 2, c. 25, s. 2, seven years transportation or imprisonment with hard labour was added. By 3 Geo. 4, c. 114, hard labour was again authorized, I know not why. By 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 23, the pillory was abolished. Whipping is obsolete. Fines fall under Article 22. Thus the text represents the result. Cf. Draft Code, ss. 120, 1.

- (3.) ³ A swears a false affidavit under the Bills of Sale Act (17 & 18 Vict. c. 36). A commits a misdemeanor.

ARTICLE 139.

FORGING INSTRUMENTS OF EVIDENCE AND TENDERING THEM IN PROOF.

Every one commits felony and is liable, upon conviction thereof, to a maximum punishment of seven years penal servitude, or to a maximum of three, and a minimum of one year's hard labour, who does any of the following things (that is to say),

(a.) ⁴ Forges the seal, stamp, or signature of any such certificate, official, or public document, or document or proceeding of any corporation or joint stock or other company as is mentioned or referred to in the preamble to 8 & 9 Vict. c. 113, or of any document referred to in 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, or any certified copy of any document, bye-law, entry in any register, or other book or other proceeding in the first mentioned Act referred to.

(b.) Tenders in evidence any such document knowing the same to be false and counterfeit.

(c.) Forges the signature of any judge of the Supreme Court attached or appended to any decree, order, certificate, or other judicial or official document.

(d.) Prints any copy of any private Act or of the journals of either House of Parliament, falsely purporting to have been printed by the printers to the Crown, or to either House of Parliament.

(e.) Tenders in evidence any such copy, knowing it not to have been printed by the person by whom it purports to have been printed.

ARTICLE 140.

OFFICERS GIVING FALSE CERTIFICATES.

¹ Every one commits a misdemeanor, and is liable, upon conviction thereof, to a maximum punishment of eighteen months imprisonment, who

Being an officer, required or authorized, by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, to furnish any certified copy under that Act, wilfully certifies any document as being a true copy or extract, knowing that the same is not a true copy or extract.

ARTICLE 141.

MAINTENANCE.

² Maintenance is the act of assisting the plaintiff in any legal proceeding in which the person giving the assistance has no valuable interest, or in which he acts from any improper motive.

Champerty is maintenance in which the motive of the maintainer is an agreement that if the proceeding in which the maintenance takes place succeeds, the subject-matter of the suit shall be divided between the plaintiff and the maintainer.

Buying or selling a pretended title is buying or selling lands, of which the title is known to be in dispute, below the value which they would have if the title was not in dispute, and to the intent that the buyer may carry on the suit in place of the seller.

The old Statute of Conspirators, 33 Edw. 1, and many other ancient statutes (3 Edw. 1, c. 18; 13 Edw. 1, c. 49; 1 Edw. 3, st. 2, c. 14; 20 Edw. 3, c. 4; 1 Ric. 2, c. 4; 7 Ric. 2, c. 15; 32 Hen. 8, c. 9; 4 Edw. 3, c. 11) refer to these offences, but do not throw much light on their nature.

A common barrator is one who habitually moves, excites, or maintains suits or quarrels, either at law or otherwise.

Whoever commits maintenance, or champerty, or buys or sells a pretended title, or is a common barrator, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

¹ Every person who practices as a solicitor or agent in any suit or action, after having been convicted of forgery, perjury, or common barratry, is liable to seven years penal servitude as a maximum punishment, upon an order to be made by the judge or judges of the Court in which the suit or action was brought, who must upon complaint or information examine the matter in a summary way in open court.

² Every one who sues any person in the name of a fictitious plaintiff, or in the name of a real person, but without his authority, commits a misdemeanor, and must, upon conviction thereof, be imprisoned for six months.

ARTICLE 142.

CONSPIRACY TO DEFEAT JUSTICE—DISSUADING WITNESSES FROM TESTIFYING.

Every one commits a misdemeanor who

(a.) ³ Conspires with any other person to accuse any person falsely of any crime, or to do anything to obstruct, prevent, pervert, or defeat the course of justice; or

(b.) ⁴ In order to obstruct the due course of justice, dissuades, hinders, or prevents any person lawfully bound to appear and give evidence as a witness from so appearing and giving evidence, or endeavours to do so; or

(c.) ⁵ Obstructs or in any way interferes with, or knowingly prevents the execution of any legal process, civil or criminal.

CHAPTER XV.

ESCAPE—RESCUE—PRISON-BREACH—MISPRISIONS—COMPOUNDING OFFENCES.

ARTICLE 143.

VOLUNTARY PERMISSION BY OFFICERS OF ESCAPES BY PRISONERS.

¹ EVERY one who knowingly, and with an intent to save him from trial or execution, permits any person in his lawful custody to regain his liberty, otherwise than in due course of law, commits the offence of voluntary escape; and

Is guilty of high treason if the escaped prisoner was in his custody for and was guilty of high treason;

Becomes an accessory after the fact to the felony of which the escaped prisoner was guilty, if he was in his custody for and was guilty of felony; and

Is guilty of a misdemeanor if the escaped prisoner was in his custody for and was guilty of a misdemeanor.

ARTICLE 144.

NEGLIGENT PERMISSION BY OFFICERS OF ESCAPES BY PRISONERS.

² Every one is guilty of the misdemeanor called negligent escape who, by the neglect of any duty, or by ignorance of the law, permits a person in his lawful custody to regain his liberty otherwise than in due course of law.

The person escaping is deemed to have regained his liberty as soon as he gets out of sight of the person from whom he escapes, and not before.

ARTICLE 145.

RESCUE DEFINED.

³ Rescue is the act of forcibly freeing a person from custody

against the will of those who have him in custody. If the person rescued is in the custody of a private person, the offender must have notice of the fact that the person rescued is in such custody.

ARTICLE 146.

QUALITY OF OFFENCE OF RESCUE.

¹Every one commits high treason, felony, or misdemeanor who rescues a prisoner imprisoned on a charge of, or under sentence for, high treason, felony, or misdemeanor respectively. ²Any offender convicted of such a misdemeanor is liable to be sentenced to hard labour.

ARTICLE 147.

FELONIOUS RESCUES.

³Whoever feloniously rescues any prisoner is liable to a maximum punishment of seven years penal servitude, or to imprisonment with hard labour for a maximum period of three years.

ARTICLE 148.

RESCUING MURDERERS.

⁴Every one commits felony and is liable, upon conviction thereof, to penal servitude for life, as a maximum punishment, who by force sets at liberty, rescues, or attempts to rescue, or set at liberty any person out of prison, committed for or found guilty of murder, or rescues or attempts to rescue any person convicted of murder, going to execution or during execution.

ARTICLE 149.

ASSISTING ESCAPE OF PRISONERS OF WAR.

thereof, to penal servitude for life, or for fourteen years, or for seven years, or to be imprisoned with or without hard labour for a maximum period of two years, who

(a.) ¹Assists any alien enemy of Her Majesty, being a prisoner of war in Her Majesty's dominions, whether such prisoner is confined as a prisoner of war in any prison or other place of confinement, or is suffered to be at large on his parole in Her Majesty's dominions or in any part thereof, to escape from such prison or place of confinement, or from Her Majesty's dominions, if at large on his ²parole; or

(b.) ³Who (owing allegiance to Her Majesty) after any such prisoner as aforesaid has quitted the coast of any part of Her Majesty's dominions in such his escape, knowingly and wilfully upon the high seas aids or assists such prisoner in his escape towards any other dominions or place.

ARTICLE 150.

RESCUING REVENUE PRISONERS.

⁴Every one commits a misdemeanor and is liable upon conviction thereof to a fine of one hundred pounds who rescues any person apprehended for any offence punishable by fine or imprisonment under the Customs Acts, or prevents, or attempts to prevent, his apprehension or aids, abets, or assists in committing any such offence.

ARTICLE 151.

HELPING TO ESCAPE FROM PRISON.

or attempting to escape from any ¹ prison, or who, with intent to facilitate the escape of any prisoner, conveys or causes to be conveyed into any prison, any mask, dress, or other disguise, or any letter, or any other article or thing.

ARTICLE 152.

ESCAPE BY PERSONS IN CUSTODY.

² Every one commits a misdemeanor, ³ and is liable upon conviction thereof, to be sentenced to hard labour, who, being lawfully in custody for any criminal offence, escapes from that custody.

ARTICLE 153.

BREAKING PRISON.

⁴ Every one commits felony who, being lawfully detained on a charge of, or under sentence for, treason or felony, breaks out of the place in which he is so detained, against the will of the person by whom he is detained.

If the offender is detained under a charge of misdemeanor the offence of breaking out of the place of confinement is a misdemeanor, ⁵ and is liable on conviction to be sentenced to hard labour.

The expression "breaks out" means an actual breaking of the place in which the party is confined, whether intentional or not.

ARTICLE 154.

ESCAPING FROM CERTAIN PRISONS.

At any time during the term of his imprisonment breaks prison ; or

Who, while being conveyed to such prison, escapes from any person having the lawful custody of him ; or

Who (being ordered to be confined in Parkhurst prison) escapes from the place of his confinement, or from any lands belonging to the prison.

Every such offender may for his first offence be punished by an addition to the term of his imprisonment, not exceeding three years in the case of prisoners confined in Millbank or Pentonville prisons, and two years in the case of prisoners under sentence of imprisonment in Parkhurst prison. Offenders under sentence of penal servitude in Parkhurst prison are liable to be punished in the same manner as other persons under sentence of penal servitude escaping from their place of confinement.

If any offender punished by such addition as aforesaid to his term of imprisonment is afterwards convicted of a second escape or breach of prison he is guilty of felony.

Every person confined in any of the said prisons is liable to be punished by an addition not exceeding twelve months to the term of his imprisonment who attempts to break prison (or in the case of Parkhurst Prison to escape from the place of his confinement), or forcibly breaks out of his cell, or makes any breach therein with intent to ² escape therefrom.

ARTICLE 155.

TRANSPORTS OR PERSONS SENTENCED TO PENAL SERVITUDE
BEING AT LARGE.

(a.) Who having been sentenced or ordered to be transported, or kept in penal servitude, or having agreed to transport himself on certain conditions, either for life or for any number of years, is afterwards at large within any part of her Majesty's dominions, without some lawful cause, before the expiration of the term for which he was ordered to be transported or kept in penal servitude, or agreed to transport himself;

UNDEFINED MISDEMEANORS.

ARTICLE 160.

ACTS INVOLVING PUBLIC MISCHIEF.

held to be misdemeanors, although such first mentioned acts were not forbidden by any express law, and although no precedent exactly applied to them.

This has been done especially in the case of agreements between more persons than one to carry out purposes which the judges regarded as injurious to the public, in which case such acts have been held to amount to the offence of conspiracy, or when they have been done by a public officer in relation to his official duty, or when they tended in any way to pervert the administration of justice, or to disturb the public peace, or when the proceeding has been by parliamentary impeachment.

CHAPTER XVII.

ARTICLE 161.

BLASPHEMY DEFINED—ALTERNATIVE DEFINITIONS.

² EVERY publication is said to be blasphemous which contains Matter relating to God, Jesus Christ, the Bible, or the Book of Common Prayer, intended to wound the feelings of mankind, or to excite contempt and hatred against the church by law established, or to promote immorality.

Publications intended in good faith to propagate opinions on religious subjects, which the person who publishes them regards as (a.) A denial of the truth of Christianity in general, or of the existence of God, whether the terms of such publication are decent or otherwise.

(b.) Any contemptuous reviling or ludicrous matter relating to God, Jesus Christ, or the Bible, or the formularies of the Church of England as by law established, whatever may be the occasion of the publication thereof, true, are not blasphemous (within the meaning of this definition) merely because their publication is likely to wound the feelings of those who believe such opinions to be false, or because their general adoption might tend by lawful means to alterations in the constitution of the church by law established.

and whether the matter published is, or is not, intended in good faith as an argument against any doctrine or opinion, unless the publication is made under circumstances constituting a lawful excuse.

Every one who publishes any blasphemous document is guilty of the misdemeanor of publishing a blasphemous libel.

Every one who speaks blasphemous words is guilty of the misdemeanor of blasphemy.

HERESIES.

¹ Every person who is guilty of atheism, blasphemy, heresy, schism, or any other damnable doctrine or opinion (² not punishable at common law), may, upon conviction thereof before a competent ecclesiastical Court, be directed to recant the same and to do penance therefor, and to be excommunicated and imprisoned for such term, not exceeding six months, as the Court pronouncing the sentence of excommunication may direct.

who having been educated in, or at any time having made profession of, the Christian religion within this realm, by writing, printing, teaching, or advised speaking, denies the Christian religion to be true, or the holy scriptures of the Old and New Testament to be of Divine authority.

For the first offence the offender must be adjudged incapable and disabled in law, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, to have or enjoy any office or employment, ecclesiastical, civil or military, or any part in them, or any profit or advantage appertaining to them, and if at the time of his conviction the person convicted enjoys or possesses any office, place, or employment, such office, place, or employment becomes ¹ void.

Upon a second conviction for all or any of the said crimes the offender is from thenceforth disabled to sue, prosecute, plead, or use any action or information in any Court of law or equity, or to be guardian of any child, or executor or administrator of any person, or capable of any legacy or deed of gift, or to bear any office, civil or military, or benefice ecclesiastical, for ever within this realm, and must also suffer imprisonment for the space of three years from the time of such conviction.

Provided that any person convicted of any of the aforesaid crimes for the first time shall be discharged from all penalties and disabilities incurred by such conviction, upon his acknowledgment or renunciation of such offence or erroneous opinions in the same court where he was convicted within four months after his conviction.

But I have not thought it worth while to encumber the book with the

ARTICLE 165.

DEPRAVING THE BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER.

¹ Every one commits a misdemeanor and is liable upon conviction thereof to the punishments hereinafter mentioned, who does any of the following things; that is to say,

(a.) Who in any interlude, play, song, rhymes, or other open words, declares or speaks anything in derogation, depraving, or despising of the Book of Common Prayer, or of anything therein contained, or any part thereof; or

(b.) Who by open fact, deed, or open threatenings, compels, causes, or otherwise procures or maintains any parson, vicar, or other minister, in any cathedral or parish church or chapel, or in any other place, to sing or say any common or open prayer, or to minister any sacrament otherwise or in any other manner or form than is mentioned in the said book;

(c.) Who by any of the said means unlawfully interrupts and lets any parson, vicar, or other minister in any cathedral or parish church or chapel, in singing or saying common or open prayer, or ministering the sacraments, or any of them, in the manner mentioned in the said book.

For the first offence the offender must be fined one hundred marks, and in default of payment within six weeks after his conviction, must be imprisoned for six months.

statutes of præmunire, which, with hardly an exception, are only historical monuments of bygone political and religious conflicts, imposing penalties on acts which it is barely conceivable that any one should do in the present state of society. The subject is treated fully in the 7th Report of the Criminal Law Commissioners, pp. 37-45. The offences are appealing to Rome from any of the Queen's Courts (24 Hen. 8, c. 12); asserting that Parliament has a legislative authority without the Crown (3 Car. 2, c. 1); and some others.

¹ 1 Eliz. c. 2, s. 3, applied to the present Book of Common Prayer by 14 Car. 2, c. 4, s. 20.

For the second offence the offender must be fined four hundred marks, and in default of payment as aforesaid must be imprisoned for twelve months.

For the third offence the offender must forfeit to the Queen all his goods and chattels and be imprisoned for life.

ARTICLE 166.

CLERGYMEN REFUSING TO USE THE BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER.

¹ Every one commits a misdemeanor and is liable upon conviction thereof to the punishments hereinafter mentioned, who, being a parson, vicar, or other minister whatsoever, that ought or should sing or say common prayer according to the Book of Common Prayer,

(a.) Refuses to use the said common prayer, or to minister the sacrament, in such cathedral or parish church, or other place, as he should use or minister the same;

(b.) Uses, wilfully and obstinately standing in the same, any other rite, ceremony, order, or form of mass, openly or privily, or matins, evensong, administration of the sacrament, or other ² open prayer than is mentioned and set forth in the said book;

(c.) Preaches, declares, or speaks anything in derogation or depraving of the said book, or anything therein contained, or of any part thereof.

For the first offence the offender must forfeit to the Queen one year's profit of such of his benefices as Her Majesty appoints, and be imprisoned for six months, whether he has any benefice or not.

For the second offence the offender must be deprived ipso facto of all his spiritual promotions, and be imprisoned for a year, and if he has no promotion he must be imprisoned for life.

¹ 2 & 3 Edw. 6, c. 1; 14 Car. 2, c. 4, s. 20, and see 1 Eliz. c. 2, s. 2, which slightly varies the penalty on one point.

² By "open prayer is meant that prayer which is for others to come unto or hear, either in common churches, or private chapels, or oratories, commonly called the Service of the Church."

For the third offence the offender must be imprisoned for life.

ARTICLE 167.

DISTURBING PUBLIC WORSHIP.

(a.) ¹ Every one commits a misdemeanor and is liable, upon conviction thereof, to a fine of forty pounds, who wilfully and maliciously or contemptuously disquiets or disturbs any meeting, assembly, or congregation of persons ² lawfully assembled for religious worship, or in any way disturbs, molests, or misuses any preacher, teacher, or person officiating at such meeting, assembly, or congregation, or any person or persons there assembled.

(b.) ³ Every one commits a misdemeanor and is liable upon conviction thereof, before two justices of the peace, to a fine not exceeding five pounds, or, if the justices think fit, to imprisonment for any time not exceeding two months, who is guilty of riotous, violent, or indecent behaviour in any cathedral church, parish or district church or chapel of the Church of England or in any chapel of any religious denomination, or ⁴ in England in any place of religious worship, duly certified under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 81, whether during the celebration of divine service or at any other time, or in any churchyard or burial ground; or who molests, lets, disturbs, vexes, or troubles, or by any other unlawful means disquiets or misuses any preacher duly authorized to preach therein, or any clergyman in holy orders ministering or celebrating any sacrament or any divine service, rite, or office in any cathedral, church, or chapel, or in any churchyard or burial ground.

OFFENCES AGAINST MORALITY.

ARTICLE 168.

SODOMY.

¹ EVERY one commits the felony called sodomy, and is liable upon conviction thereof to penal servitude for life, as a maximum, and to penal servitude for ten years as a minimum punishment, who

(a.) Carnally knows any animal; or,

(b.) Being a male, carnally knows any man or any woman (per anum).

Any person above the age of fourteen years who permits himself or herself to be so carnally known as aforesaid is a principal in the first degree in the said felony.

or any other deadly sin (not punishable at common law), is liable upon conviction thereof in an ecclesiastical Court to be directed to do penance, and to be excommunicated, and to be imprisoned for such term not exceeding six months as the Court pronouncing the sentence of excommunication may direct.

ARTICLE 171.

PUBLIC INDECENCIES.

¹ Every one commits a misdemeanor who does any grossly indecent act in any open and public place in the presence of more persons than ² one; but it is uncertain whether such conduct in a public place amounts to a misdemeanor if it is done when no one is present, or in the presence of one person only.

³ A place is public within the meaning of this Article if it is so situated that what passes there can be seen by any considerable number of persons if they happen to look.

The following are instances of public places :

⁷ The inside of a booth on Epsom racecourse, which the public were invited to enter.

¹ Every one commits a misdemeanor who without justification,

(a.) Publicly sells, or exposes for public sale or to public view, any obscene book, print, picture, or other indecent exhibition; ² or any publication recommending sexual immorality, even if the recommendation is made in good faith and for what the publisher considers to be the public good.

(b.) Publicly exhibits any disgusting object.

Any person convicted of the offence defined in clause (a.) may be sentenced to hard labour.

(SUBMITTED.)—A person is justified in exhibiting disgusting objects, or publishing obscene books, papers, writings, prints, pictures, drawings, or other representations, if their exhibition or publication is for the public good, as being necessary or advantageous to religion or morality, to the administration of justice, the pursuit of science, literature, or art, or other objects of general interest; but the justification ceases if the publication is made in such a manner, to such an extent, or under such circumstances, as to exceed what the public good requires in regard to the particular matter published.

(2.)¹ A, a bookseller, publishes the work of a casuist, which contains amongst other things obscene matter. The work is published in Latin, and appears from the circumstances of its publication to be intended for bonâ fide students of casuistry only. A has not committed a misdemeanor.

B extracts the obscene matter from the work so published, translates it into English, and sells it as a pamphlet about the streets for the purpose of throwing odium upon casuists. B has committed a misdemeanor.

ARTICLE 173.

DEFILING GIRLS UNDER AGE.

¹ The second paragraph of this illustration is based upon R. v. Hicklin, L. R. 3 Q. B. 360; and see Steele v. Brannan, L. R. 7 C. P. 261. The first part is merely my suggestion as to what ought to be held to be the law if the question should arise, but the point cannot be called clear. Keating, J., referred, in passing to the question in Steele v. Brannan, L. R. 7 C. P. 269, 270, but expressed no opinion upon it. I confine this article to obscenity because I have found no authority for the proposition that the publication of a work immoral in the wider sense of the word is an offence. A man might with perfect decency of expression, and in complete good faith, maintain doctrines as to marriage, the relation of the sexes, the obligation of truthfulness, the nature and limits of the rights of property, &c., which would be regarded as highly immoral by most people, and yet (I think) commit no crime. Obscenity and immorality in this wide sense are entirely distinct from each other. The language used in reference to some of the cases might throw doubt on this, but I do not think any instance can be given of the punishment of a decent and bonâ fide expression of opinions commonly regarded as immoral. I leave this note unaltered, but since it was written the case cited above of R. v. Bradlaugh may be considered to have gone some way towards establishing a different principle, and to have invested juries to a certain extent with the powers of ex post facto censors of the press so far as such publications on the relation of the sexes are concerned. I think that juries ought to exercise such a power with the greatest caution, when a man writes in good faith on a subject of great interest and open to much difference of opinion, and when no indecency of language is used, except such as is necessary to make the matter treated of intelligible.

ARTICLE 174.

CONSPIRACY TO DEFILE.

¹ Every one commits the misdemeanor of conspiracy who agrees with any other person to induce any woman to commit adultery or fornication, or to take any woman from the lawful custody of her parents, in order to marry her to any person without their consent :

(SUBMITTED.) Provided, that an agreement between a man and a woman to commit fornication or adultery, or that the woman shall leave the lawful custody of her parents without their consent, in order to marry the man, is not a conspiracy.

ARTICLE 175.

PREVENTING THE BURIAL OF DEAD BODIES AND DISINTERRING THEM.

² Every one commits a misdemeanor who prevents the burial of any dead body, or who, without authority, disinters a dead body, even from laudable motives ; or who, having the means, neglects to bury a dead body which he is legally bound to bury, provided that no one is legally bound to incur a debt for such a purpose ; or

³ who buries or otherwise disposes of any dead body on which an inquest ought to be taken, without giving notice to a coroner, or who, being under a legal duty to do so, fails to give notice to a coroner that a body on which an inquest ought to be held is lying unburied, before such body has putrified.

¹ R. v. Lord Grey, 3 St. Tr. 519 ; 1 East, P. C. 460 ; R. v. Mears, 2 Den. 79 ; R. v. Delaval, 3 Burr. 434. Draft Code, s. 149.

² R. v. Vann, 2 Den. 325. A man is bound to bury his child's body, and, I suppose, his wife's. In R. v. Vann Lord Campbell said, "A man is bound, if he has the means, to give his child Christian burial." This can hardly be a duty in the case of persons who are not Christians, but probably "Christian" means only decent. It appears from R. v. Stewart, 12 A. & E. 773, 779, that the person under whose roof another person dies is under a legal duty to carry the corpse, decently covered, to the place of burial if there is no one else who is bound to bury it. This is a misdemeanor.

(3.) ³ A, a gaoler, refuses to deliver up for burial the dead body of a prisoner who had died in gaol to the executors, on the ground that the deceased person owed him money. This is a misdemeanor.

COMMON NUISANCES—DISORDERLY HOUSES.

ARTICLE 176.

COMMON NUISANCE.

¹ A common nuisance is an act not warranted by law or an omission to discharge a legal duty, which act or omission obstructs or causes inconvenience or damage to the public in the exercise of rights common to all Her Majesty's subjects. It is immaterial whether the act complained of is convenient to a larger number of the public than it inconveniences, but the fact that the act complained of facilitates the lawful exercise of their rights by part of the public may shew that it is not a nuisance to any of the public.

Illustrations.

This is a public nuisance, because a small portion of space which the public had a legal right to use is obstructed.

(2.) ³ A tramway laid down on a high road in such a manner as to obstruct to some extent the use of the road by common carriages is a public nuisance, although it may be convenient to a large majority of those who use the road.

⁴ R. v. Russel, 6 B. & C. 566. I think this is the effect of the case, which deserves careful study. It is referred to in R. v. Train, but I doubt whether it is not misunderstood there. Lord Tenterden differed in it from Bayley and Holroyd, JJ. Of the eight counsel engaged seven became judges. R. v. Betts, 13 Q. B. 1022, refers to it in a manner which seems to me inadequate. In A. G. v. Terry (L. R. 9 Ch. App. 425) Jessel, M.R., disapproved of R. v. Russel, though ships therein for a reasonable time to take in cargoes of coal. A erects staiths and spouts at which ships moored for the purpose can take in coal, but which prevent ships not lying at them from sailing over part of the waterway where they would otherwise be able to sail. The fact that the arrangement is on the whole convenient with regard to the public use of the river may be considered by the jury in deciding whether the staiths are a nuisance or not.

(4.) The non-repair of a public highway is a public nuisance.

(5.)¹ A railway company makes a railway within five yards of an ancient public highway in such a manner that the locomotives frighten the horses of persons using the highway as a carriage road. The railway is made and the locomotives used under Acts of Parliament, which do not require the railroad company to screen the line from the road. This is not a public nuisance because the act done is warranted by law.

PUNISHMENT FOR KEEPING DISORDERLY HOUSES.

³ Every one who keeps a disorderly house commits a common nuisance, and is liable upon conviction thereof to be sentenced to hard labour.

he approved of the doctrine which I understand to be laid down in it. The turning point of the case, as I understand it, is that the ships anchored under the spouts had a right to anchor there for a reasonable time to receive cargo, and that the spouts being recognized by statute could not be regarded as in themselves illegal. The question on which the judges differed was whether Bayley, J., had influenced the jury by referring to the collateral advantage of cheapening coal in the London market. The effect of time in legalizing a nuisance is somewhat similar. It has not in itself that effect, but the fact that a given state of things is of very long standing may be evidence that it is not in fact a nuisance: see cases in 1 Russ. Cr. 421 and 442. The view taken by the Criminal Law Commissioners is rather different, see 7th Rep. p. 59.

DISORDERLY HOUSES.

The following houses are disorderly houses, that is to say, common bawdy houses, common gaming houses, common betting houses, disorderly places of entertainment.

ARTICLE 180.

COMMON BAWDY HOUSES.

² A common bawdy house is a house or room, or set of rooms, in any house kept for purposes of prostitution. And it is immaterial whether indecent or disorderly conduct is or is not perceptible from the ³ outside.

ARTICLE 181.

COMMON GAMING HOUSES.

⁴ A common gaming house is a house kept or used for playing therein at any game of chance, or any mixed game of chance and skill, in which (i.) A bank is kept by one or more of the players, exclusively of the others; or

(ii.) In which any game is played the chances of which

A common betting house is a house, office, room, or other place

(i.) Kept or used for the purpose of betting between persons resorting thereto and

The owner, occupier, or keeper thereof; or Any person using the same; or Any person procured or employed by, or acting for or on behalf of, any such person; ² or

Any person having the care or management, or in any manner conducting the business thereof; or

(ii.) Kept or used for the purpose of any money or valuable thing being received by or on behalf of any such person as aforesaid, as or for the consideration for any assurance, undertaking, promise, or agreement, express or implied, to pay or give thereafter any money or valuable thing on any event or contingency of or relating to any horse race, or other race, fight, game, sport, or exercise; or as or for the consideration for securing the paying or giving by some other person of any money or valuable thing on any such event or contingency.

³ Every common betting house is deemed to be a common gaming house.

ARTICLE 183.

EVIDENCE THAT A HOUSE IS A COMMON GAMING HOUSE.

The following circumstances are evidence (until the contrary is proved) that a house, room, or place is a common gaming house, and that the persons found therein were unlawfully playing therein: that is to say,

(i.) ¹ Where any cards, dice, balls, counters, tables, or other instruments of gaming used in playing any unlawful game are found in any house, room, or place suspected to be used as a common gaming house, and entered under a warrant or order issued under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 109, or about the person of any of those found therein.

(ii.) ² Where any constable or officer authorized as aforesaid, to enter any house, room, or place, is wilfully prevented from, or obstructed, or delayed in entering the same or any part thereof, or where any external or internal door or means of access to any such house, room, or place so authorized to be entered is found to be fitted or provided with any bolt, bar, chain, or any means or contrivance for the purpose of delaying, preventing, or obstructing the entry into the house, or any part thereof, of any constable or officer authorized as aforesaid, or for giving alarm in case of such entry; or

If any such house, room, or place is found fitted or provided with any means or contrivance for unlawful gaming, or for concealing, removing, or destroying any instruments of gaming.

ARTICLE 184.

DISORDERLY PLACES OF ENTERTAINMENT.

'The following places are disorderly places of entertainment, that is to say—

(a.) ³ Every house, room, garden, or other place kept for public dancing, music, or other public entertainment of the like kind in the cities of London and Westminster, or within twenty miles thereof, without a licence granted in compliance with the provisions of 25 Geo. 2, c. 36.

⁴ This definition does not include the Theatres Royal in Drury Lane and Covent Garden, or the King's Theatre in the Haymarket, or any performance or public entertainment carried on under letters patent, or licence from the Crown or the Lord Chamberlain.

(b.) ¹ Every house, room, or other place opened or used for public entertainment or amusement, or for publicly debating on any subject whatsoever upon any part of the Lord's Day, called Sunday, and to which persons are admitted by the payment of money, or by tickets sold for money.

The following places are deemed to be places to which persons are admitted by the payment of money, although money is not taken in the name of or for admittance, that is to say, any house, room, or place—

(i.) ² At which persons are supplied with tea, coffee, or other refreshments of eating or drinking on the Lord's Day at any greater price than the common and usual prices at which the like refreshments are commonly sold upon other days thereat, or at places where the same usually are sold.

(ii.) Any house, room, or place opened or used for any of the purposes aforesaid at the expense of any number of subscribers or contributors to the carrying on any such entertainment, or amusement, or debate, on the Lord's Day, and to which persons are admitted by tickets to which the subscribers or contributors are entitled.

ARTICLE 185.

DISORDERLY INNS.

³ A disorderly inn is an inn kept in a disorderly manner and suffered to be resorted to by persons of bad character for any improper purpose.

Every person who keeps a disorderly inn, or who, being an innkeeper, refuses, without reasonable grounds, to entertain any person ready and willing to pay for entertainment therein, commits a misdemeanor.

LOTTERIES.

¹ Every person commits a common nuisance who ² keeps a lottery of any kind whatever without the authority of Parliament.

ARTICLE 187.

NUISANCES TO HEALTH, LIFE, AND PROPERTY.

³ Every person commits a common nuisance who does anything which endangers the health, life, or property of the public or any part of it.

⁴ Publicly and wilfully exposing or causing to be exposed for sale articles of food unfit for consumption, and knowingly permitting servants to mix unwholesome ingredients in articles of food, are acts endangering the health or life of the public within the meaning of this article.

⁵ Everything is deemed to endanger health, life, or property, which either causes actual danger thereto, or which must do so in the absence of a degree of prudence and care the continual exercise of which cannot be reasonably expected.

A commits a common nuisance, although he uses the most scrupulous care to avoid accidents.

ARTICLE 188.

NUISANCES BY OFFENSIVE TRADES.

⁵ Every one commits a common nuisance who, for the purposes of trade or otherwise, makes loud noises, or offensive or unwholesome smells in such places and under such circumstances as to annoy any considerable number of persons in the exercise of rights common to all her Majesty's subjects.

ARTICLE 189.

NUISANCES TO HIGHWAYS.

Every one commits a common nuisance who obstructs any highway, by any permanent work or erection thereon or injury thereto, which renders the highway less commodious to the public than it would otherwise be; or who prevents them from having access to any part of it by an excessive and unreasonable temporary use thereof, or by so dealing with the land in the immediate neighbourhood of the highway as to prevent the public from using and enjoying it securely.

ARTICLE 190.

NUISANCES TO BRIDGES.

⁶ Every one is guilty of a common nuisance who, being bound by law to repair a bridge, leaves it unrepaired.

ARTICLE 191.

NUISANCES TO NAVIGABLE RIVERS.

⁷ Every one is guilty of a common nuisance who wilfully diverts or obstructs the course of any navigable river ⁸ so as appreciably to diminish its convenience for purposes of navigation, even though the alteration may, upon the whole, be for the convenience of the public ; ⁹ but the owner of a vessel wrecked in a navigable river is not guilty of a common nuisance because he does not remove it.

VAGRANCY.

ARTICLE 192.

IDLE AND DISORDERLY PERSONS.

² An idle and disorderly person is a person who

(a.) Being able, wholly or in part, to maintain himself or his family by work or otherwise, wilfully refuses or neglects so to do, by which refusal or neglect he or any of his family whom he may be legally bound to maintain becomes chargeable to any parish, township, or place; or

(b.) Who returns to, and becomes chargeable in any parish, township, or place whence he has been legally removed by order of two justices of the peace, unless he produces a certificate of the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of some other parish, township, or place, thereby acknowledging him to be settled in such other parish, township, or place; or

(c.) Who, being a petty chapman or pedlar, wanders abroad and trades without being duly licensed or otherwise authorized by law; or

(d.) Who, being a common prostitute, wanders in the public street or public highways or any place of public resort, and behaves in a riotous or indecent manner; or

(e.) Who wanders abroad, or places himself in any public place, street, highway, court, or passage, to beg or gather alms, or causes or procures any child so to do; or

(f.) ³ Who being a pauper,

(i.) Absconds or escapes from, or leaves any casual ward before he is entitled to discharge himself therefrom; or

(ii.) Refuses to be removed to any workhouse or asylum under the provisions of the "Pauper Inmates Discharge and Regulation Act, 1871," (34 & 35 Vict. c. 108); or

(iii.) Absconds or escapes from, or leaves any workhouse or asylum during the period for which he may be detained therein; or

(iv.) Refuses or neglects, whilst an inmate of any casual ward, workhouse, or asylum, to do the work or observe the regulations prescribed; or (v.) Wilfully gives a false name, or makes a false statement for the purpose of obtaining relief.

ARTICLE 193.

ROGUES AND VAGABONDS.

¹ A rogue and vagabond is a person who

(a.) Commits any of the offences in the last Article mentioned, after having been convicted as an idle and disorderly person; or

(b.) Pretends or professes to tell fortunes, or uses any subtle craft, means, or device, ² by palmistry or otherwise, to deceive and impose on any of Her Majesty's subjects; or

(c.) Wanders abroad and lodges in any barn or outhouse, or in any deserted unoccupied building, or in the open air, or under a tent, or in any cart or waggon, not having any visible means of subsistence, and not giving a good account of himself; or

(d.) ³ Wilfully exposes to view in any street, road, highway, or public place, or in the window or other part of any shop, or other building situate therein, any obscene print, picture, or other indecent exhibition; or

(e.) Wilfully, openly, lewdly, and obscenely exposes his person in any street, road, or public highway, or in the view thereof, or in any place of public resort, with intent to insult any female; or

(f.) Wanders abroad and endeavours, by the exposure of wounds or deformities, to obtain or gather alms; or

³ 1 & 2 Vict. c. 38, s. 2.

(g.) Goes about as a gatherer or collector of alms, or endeavours to procure charitable contributions of any nature or kind under any false or fraudulent pretence; or

(h.) Runs away and leaves his wife and his or her child or children chargeable, or whereby she or they or any of them become chargeable to any parish, township, or place; or

(i.) ¹ Plays or bets* in any street, road, highway, or other open and public place,† at or with any table or instrument of gaming,‡ at any game or pretended game of chance; or

(j.) Has in his custody or possession any picklock, key, crow, jack, bit, or other implement, with intent feloniously to break into any dwelling-house, warehouse, coachhouse, stable, or outbuilding; or

(k.) Is armed with any gun, pistol, hanger, cutlass, bludgeon, or other offensive weapon, or has upon him any instrument with intent to commit any felonious act; or

(l.) Is found in or upon any dwelling-house, warehouse, coachhouse, stable, or outhouse, or in any inclosed yard, garden, or area, for any unlawful purpose; or

(m.) Is a suspected person or reputed thief frequenting any river, canal, or navigable stream, dock or basin, or any quay, wharf, or warehouse, or any avenue leading thereto, or any street, or any highway, or any place adjacent to a street or highway, with intent to commit felony;

² In proving the intent to commit a felony it is not necessary to shew that the person suspected was guilty of any particular act tending to shew his purpose or intent, and he may be convicted if, from the circumstances of the case, and from his known character as proved to the Court or justice before whom or which he is brought, it appears to such Court or justice that his intent was to commit a felony; or (n.) Being apprehended as an idle and disorderly person, violently resists any constable or other peace officer, so appre-

INCORRIGIBLE ROGUES.

² An incorrigible rogue is a person who

(a.) Breaks or escapes out of any place of legal confinement before the expiration of the term for which he is committed under Article 193 ; or

(b.) Is convicted as a rogue and vagabond after being previously so convicted ; or a crime when it is done in the execution, in the manner prescribed by law by a person whose duty it is to execute it, of a lawful sentence duly passed by a competent Court.

A Court which, but for some formal defect in its authority or in its proceedings, would have had jurisdiction to pass a sentence, is deemed for the purposes of this Article to be a competent Court; but a Court which has by law no jurisdiction at all over the case in which sentence is passed is not deemed to be a competent Court, and a mistaken belief on the part of the judge, or of the officer who executes the sentence, that it is competent, does not justify or excuse his act.

PREVENTION OF THE COMMISSION OF CRIMES AND ARREST OF CRIMINALS.

The intentional infliction of death or bodily harm is not a crime when it is done by any person

Eyre, L. R. 6 Q. B. 15 (Court of Exchequer Chamber). The proper course in such cases is for the civil magistrate to direct and control what is done, but this is not absolutely necessary. The Riot Act (1 Geo. 1, st. 2, c. 5, see Article 74) authorizes in express terms the dispersion of rioters who continue riotously assembled together for more than an hour after the proclamation made, and indemnifies the persons concerned if any of the rioters should be killed ; but this Act appears to be narrower than the common law as laid down by Tindal, C.J. ARTICLE 200.

The intentional infliction of death or bodily harm is not a crime when it is inflicted by any person in order to defend himself or any other person from unlawful violence, provided that the person inflicting it observes the following rules as to avoiding its infliction, and inflicts no greater injury in any case than he in good faith, and on reasonable grounds, believes to be necessary when he inflicts it:—

(a.) ² If a person is assaulted in such a manner as to put him in immediate and obvious danger of instant death or grievous bodily harm, he may defend himself on the spot, and may kill or wound the person by whom he is assaulted.

(b.) ³ If a person is unlawfully assaulted,

(i.) In his own house;

(ii.) ⁴ In the execution of a duty imposed upon him by law;

(iii.) ⁴ By way of resistance to the exercise of force which he has by law a right to employ against the person of another;

he may defend himself on the spot, and may use a degree of force for that purpose proportioned to the violence of the assault, and sufficient (in case iii.) to enable him not only to repel the attack made upon him, but to effect his original purpose : but a person using force in the execution of a duty imposed upon him by law, or in order to effect a purpose which he may by law effect in that manner, and not being assaulted, is not entitled to strike or hurt the person against whom he employs such force, merely because he is unable otherwise to execute such duty or fulfil such purpose, except in the cases provided for in Article 199.

Cases, however, may be imagined in which a sudden and violent assault would be no crime, and yet might be resisted by killing the assailant: see Illustration (1).

(c.) ¹ If a person is unlawfully assaulted by another without any fault of his own, and otherwise than in the cases provided for in clauses (a.) and (b.), but with a deadly weapon, it is his duty to abstain from the intentional infliction of death or grievous bodily harm on the person assaulting, until he (the person assaulted) has retreated as far as he can with safety to himself.

But any person unlawfully assaulted may defend himself on the spot by any force short of the intentional infliction of death or grievous bodily harm ; and if the assault upon him is notwithstanding continued, he is in the position of a person assaulted in the employment of lawful force against the person of another.

¹ See the authorities quoted for clauses (a.), (b.), and (c.), and especially 1 Hale, P. C. 481. The qualification at the end of this rule is founded on the doctrine that any one may lawfully prevent or suppress by force a breach of the peace or affray (1 Hawk. P. C. 489 ; R. v. Osmer, 5 East, 308), from which it would seem to follow that a man who is himself assaulted may arrest his assailant, and on the doctrine that son assault demesne is a good defence to an indictment for assault (1 Hawk. P. C. 110). If this were not the law it would follow that any ruffian who chose to assault a quiet person in the street might impose upon him the legal duty of running away, even if he were the stronger man of the two. The passage of Hale appears to me to be applicable only to cases where deadly weapons are produced by way of bravado or intimidation, a case which no doubt often occurred when people habitually carried arms and used them on very slight provocation. In such a case it might reasonably be regarded as the duty of the person assaulted to retreat rather than draw his own sword, but I cannot think that Hale meant to say that a man who in such a case closed with his assailant and took his sword from him would be acting illegally, or that if in doing so the assailant were thrown down and accidentally killed by the fall the person causing his death would be guilty of felony. The minuteness of the law contained in the authorities on which this Article is founded is a curious relic of a time when police was lax and brawls frequent, and when every gentleman wore arms and was supposed to be familiar with the use of them. It might, I think, be simplified in the present day with advantage.

(d.) ¹ If two persons quarrel and fight neither is regarded as defending himself against the other until he has in good faith fled from the fight as far as he can ; but if either party does in good faith flee from the fight as far as he can, and if, when he is prevented either by a natural obstacle or any other cause of the same nature, from flying farther, the other party to the fight follows and again assaults him, the person who has so fled may defend himself, and may use a degree of violence for that purpose proportioned to the violence employed against him.

Illustrations.

(1.) ² A, a madman, violently attacks B in such a manner as to cause instant danger to B's life. B may kill A, though A is not committing any crime.

(2.) ³ A, an officer, has a warrant to arrest B on civil process. B flies. A overtakes him, and B assaults A. A may use any degree of violence to B necessary to repel his assault and to arrest him.

(3.) ⁴ A, a trespasser, enters B's house and refuses to leave it. B has a right to remove A by force, but not to strike him even if he cannot otherwise get him out of the house. If on the application of such force A assaults B, B may use any degree of force necessary to defend himself and to remove A from the house.

ARTICLE 201.

LAWFUL FORCE.

⁵ It is not a crime to inflict bodily harm by way of lawful correction, or by any lawful application of force (other than those hereinbefore mentioned) to the person of another ; but if the harm inflicted on such an occasion is excessive the act which inflicts it is unlawful, and, even if there is no excess,

² This seems to follow directly from the authorities cited. So, if A were under a mistake of fact which B had no time to explain.

³ 1 East, P. C. 307.

⁴ 1 Hale, P. C. 486.

⁵ It would be inconsistent with the plan of this work to try to enumerate all the cases in which force may be lawfully applied to the person of another. In 1 Russ. Cr. 856-60, cases will be found as to excessive violence in executing legal process : R. v. Hunter, Str. 499, p. 857. Pressing for the sea service (p. 859). Captains in the merchant service : R. v. Leggetts, 8 C. & P. 191 (p. 860). Correction of children and servants (861-4). See Draft Code, s. 68.

it is the duty of every person applying the force to take reasonable precautions against the infliction of other or greater harm than the occasion requires.

Illustrations.

(1.) ¹ A, a schoolmaster, beats B, a scholar, for two hours with a thick stick. Such a beating is unlawful.

(2.) ² A kicks B, a trespasser, out of his house, in order to force him to leave it. B is killed. The kick is an unlawful act.

(3.) (SUBMITTED.) A, the governor of a gaol, flogs B, a criminal, under the sentence of a court. It is A's duty to cause the surgeon of the gaol to be in attendance to see that no unintended injury is inflicted on B.

ARTICLE 202.

SUPERIOR ORDERS TO EMPLOY FORCE.

In all cases in which force is used against the person of another, both the person who orders such force to be used and the person using that force is responsible for its use, and neither of them is justified by the circumstance that he acts in obedience to orders given him by a civil or military superior, but the fact that he did so act, and the fact that the order was apparently lawful, are in all cases relevant to the question whether he believed, in good faith and on reasonable grounds, in the existence of a state of facts which would have justified what he did apart from such orders,³ or which might justify his superior officer in giving such orders.

Illustrations.

(1.) ⁴ A, a marine, is ordered by his superior officer on board a man-of-war to prevent boats from approaching the ship, and has ammunition given him for that purpose. Boats persisting after repeated warnings in approaching the ship A fires at one and kills B. This is murder in A, although he fired under the impression that it was his duty to do so, as the act was not necessary for the preservation of the ship [though desirable for the maintenance of discipline.]

(2.) ¹ A, the driver of an engine, orders B, the stoker (whose duty it is to obey his orders), not to stop the engine. The train runs into another in consequence, and C is killed. B is justified by A's order.

(3.) ² (SUBMITTED.) A, a civil magistrate, directs B, a military officer, to order his men to fire into a mob. B gives the order. It is obeyed, and C, a common soldier, shoots D dead. The question whether A, B, and C respectively committed any offence depends on the question whether each of them respectively had reasonable grounds to believe and did in fact believe in good faith either that what they did was necessary to suppress a dangerous riot, or in the case of B, that A, or in the case of D that B, had reasonable grounds to believe and did believe that the order given was necessary to suppress a dangerous riot. A's direction to B, and B's order to C, would not necessarily justify B or C in what they did, but would be facts relevant to the question whether they believed upon reasonable grounds as aforesaid.

ARTICLE 203.

CONSENT TO BODILY INJURY.

The consent of a person killed or maimed to the infliction of death or bodily harm, affects the criminality of such infliction to the extent defined in Articles 204-209, both inclusive. In each of these Articles the word "Consent" means a consent freely given by a rational and sober person so situated as to be able to form a rational opinion upon the matter to which he consents.

Consent is said to be given freely when it is not procured by force, fraud, or threats of whatever nature.

¹ R. v. Trainer, 4 F. & F. 105; 1 Russ. Cr. (5th ed.) 837, 838. The language of Willes, J., in this case seems to be a little too wide, unless it is taken in connection with the particular facts.

² Whether C would commit a military offence if he refused to obey B's order because he rightly thought it unreasonable, is a question which would have to be decided by a court martial. I should suppose that cases might be imagined in which even a court martial would hold that a military inferior might and ought to disobey orders on the ground of their illegality. An officer, e.g., who commanded his men to fire a volley down Fleet Street when there was no appearance of a disturbance, or to shoot a child of four years old running away during a riot, or to desert to the enemy, or to shoot a superior officer, ought to be disobeyed, and I suppose that a soldier who obeyed such an order might be punished by a court martial. That such acts as shooting peaceable people wantonly, or a child of four years old intentionally, even in a riot, would be murder as well in the soldier as in the officer cannot be doubted. If so, it seems impossible to suggest any other principle as to the effect of superior orders than the one mentioned in the text. It is indeed essential to the maintenance of the supremacy of the common law over military force.

ARTICLE 204.

RIGHT TO CONSENT TO BODILY INJURY FOR SURGICAL PURPOSES.

¹ Every one has a right to consent to the infliction of any bodily injury in the nature of a surgical operation upon himself or upon any child under his care, and too young to exercise a reasonable discretion in such a matter, but such consent does not discharge the person performing the operation from the duties hereinafter defined in relation thereto.

ARTICLE 205.

SURGICAL OPERATION ON PERSON INCAPABLE OF ASSENT.

(SUBMITTED)—² If a person is in such circumstances as to be incapable of giving consent to a surgical operation, or to the infliction of other bodily harm of a similar nature and for similar objects, it is not a crime to perform such operation or to inflict such bodily harm upon him without his consent or in spite of his resistance.

Illustrations.

(1.) A is rendered insensible by an accident which renders it necessary to amputate one of his limbs before he recovers his senses. The amputation of his limb without his consent is not an offence.

(2.) If the accident made him mad, the amputation in spite of his resistance would be no offence.

(3.) B is drowning and insensible. A, in order to save his life, pulls B out of the water with a hook which injures him. This is no offence.

ARTICLE 206.

RIGHT TO CONSENT TO BODILY INJURY SHORT OF MAIM.

² See note 1, p. 128. Draft Code, s. 67.

³ The positive part of this Article is proved thus:—Injuries short of maims are not criminal at common law unless they are assaults, but an assault is inconsistent with consent. As to the definition of a maim, see 1 Hawk. P. C. 107. He expressly mentions castration.

himself of bodily harm not amounting to a maim. A maim is bodily harm whereby a man is deprived of the use of any member of his body or of any sense which he can use in fighting, or by the loss of which he is generally and permanently weakened, but a bodily injury is not a maim merely because it is a disfigurement.

Illustration.

(1.) It is a maim to strike out a front tooth. It is not a maim to cut off a man's nose. Castration is a maim.

ARTICLE 207.

NO RIGHT TO CONSENT TO INFLICTION OF DEATH.

¹ No one has a right to consent to the infliction upon himself of death, or of an injury likely to cause death, in any case (other than those mentioned in Article 204), or to consent to the infliction upon himself of bodily harm amounting to a maim, for any purpose injurious to the public.

Illustrations.

(1.) ² A and B agree to fight a duel together with deadly weapons. If either is killed or wounded his consent is immaterial.

(2.) ³ A gets B to cut off A's right hand, in order that A may avoid labour and be enabled to beg. Both A and B commit an offence.

³ 1 Inst. 107 a, b. I think the qualification in the Article, "for any purpose injurious to the public," must be supplied. It seems absurd to say that if A gets a dentist to pull out a front tooth of A's because it is unsightly, though not diseased, A and the dentist both commit a misdemeanor. When it was an essential part of a common soldier's drill to bite cartridges I believe that it was not an uncommon military offence to get the front teeth pulled out, and this would, I presume, be an offence at common law also.

Quære, are A, C, D, E, and F, or any and which of them, guilty of manslaughter?

ARTICLE 210.

ACCIDENTAL INFLICTION OF BODILY INJURY BY LAWFUL ACT—
WHAT ACTS ARE LAWFUL.

² It is not a crime to cause death or bodily harm accidentally by an act which is not unlawful, unless such act is accompanied by an omission, amounting to culpable negligence, as defined in Article 211, to perform a legal duty imposed either by law or by contract on the person who does the act.

An effect is said to be accidental when the act by which it is caused is not done with the intention of causing it, and when its occurrence as a consequence of such act is not so probable that a person of ordinary prudence ought, under the circumstances in which it is done, to take reasonable precautions against it.

¹ There is, so far as I know, no authority on this point, but the principle on which prizefights have been held to be illegal might include such a case. Such an exhibition might also under circumstances be a public nuisance. To collect a large number of people to see a man put his life in jeopardy is a less coarse and boisterous proceeding than a prizefight, but is it less immoral?

² 1 Hale, 471, &c.; Foster, 258; 1 East, P. C. 260; 1 Russ. Cr. (5th ed.) 844. I cannot give any precise authority as to acts involving penalties.

The words "unlawful act" include—

- (i.) Acts punishable as crimes [or involving penalties];
- (ii.) ¹ Acts constituting actionable wrongs;
- (iii.) ² Acts contrary to public policy or morality, or injurious to the public.

Other acts are not unlawful within the meaning of this Article, though they may involve private immorality.

Illustrations.

(1.) ³ A, a schoolmaster, corrects a scholar in a manner not intended or likely to injure him, using due care. The scholar dies. Such a death is accidental.

(2.) ⁴ A turns B, a trespasser, out of his house, using no more force than is necessary for that purpose. B resists, but without striking A. They fall in the struggle and B is killed. Such a death is accidental.

(3.) ⁵ A, a workman, throws snow from a roof, giving proper warning. A passenger is nevertheless killed. Such a death is accidental.

(4.) ⁶ A takes up a gun, not knowing whether it is loaded or not, points it in sport at B and pulls the trigger. B is shot dead. Such a death is not accidental. If A had had reason to believe that the gun was not loaded, the death would have been accidental, although he had not used every possible precaution to ascertain whether the gun was loaded or not.

(5.) ⁷ A seduces B, who dies in her confinement. The seduction though an immoral, is not an unlawful act, within the meaning of this Article.

¹ 1 Russ. Cr. 812-21, for cases; see especially the summing up of Tindal, C.J., in 1 Lew. 179; 1 Russ. Cr. 817. Hale, East, and Foster make a distinction between mala in se and mala prohibita, which I think can no longer be regarded as law.

² See authorities for Article 208.

³ 1 Hale, 473. The same law of course applies to all cases of lawful correction. It would also, I think, apply to Illustration (2), and to all other cases in which force is lawfully applied by one person to the person of another. It is, of course, impossible in a work like this to attempt an enumeration of those cases.

⁴ Founded on Foster, 262.

⁵ Founded on Foster, 263. In one of the cases referred to in Foster, the prisoner was convicted of manslaughter, although he had tried the pistol with the rammer. Foster, with reason, thinks this "an extremely hard case." Dixon v. Bell, 5 M. & S. 198, may be taken as illustrating the line between negligence, for which a man is civilly, and negligence for which he is criminally responsible. A in this case had caused the priming to be taken from a loaded gun, and left it in a place where a little girl playing with it shot a little boy. The boy recovered damages against A, but if he had died I do not think A would have been guilty of felony. The case is just on the line.

⁶ No one ever suggested that this would be manslaughter, but it exactly marks the distinction between illegality and immorality.

CHAPTER XXII.

OF CULPABLE NEGLIGENCE AND OF DUTIES TENDING TO THE PRESERVATION OF LIFE.

ARTICLE 211.

DEATH OR BODILY INJURY CAUSED BY OMISSION TO DISCHARGE
A LEGAL DUTY.

¹ EVERY one upon whom the law imposes any duty,² or who has by contract or by any wrongful act taken upon himself any duty, tending to the preservation of life, and who neglects to perform that duty, and thereby causes the death of any person, commits the same offence as if he had caused the same effect by an act done in the state of mind, as to intent or otherwise, which accompanied the neglect of duty.

Provided, that no one is deemed to have committed a crime only because he has caused the death of or bodily injury to another by negligence which is not culpable. What amount of negligence can be called culpable is a question of degree for the jury, depending on the circumstances of each particular case.

Provided, also, that no one is deemed to have committed

- | | |
|--|------------------------------|
| 1. Use of dangerous things. | 6. The care of children, &c. |
| 2. Dropping things on roads. | 7. The care of medical men. |
| 3. Management of railroads and steamers. | 8. Dangerous machinery. |
| 4. Riding and driving. | 9. Athletic sports. |
| 5. The care of dangerous animals. | 10. Conclusion. |

I have carefully gone through the whole chapter, and I think the whole of it is only a set of illustrations of the principles stated in this and in the concluding Articles of the preceding chapter. It should be observed that the word "negligence" excludes intention. The very slightest omission of caution in order to cause death, would constitute malice aforethought, if death were caused thereby.

a crime by reason of the negligence of any servant or agent employed by him.

¹ Provided also that it must be shewn that death not only follows but is also caused by the neglect of duty.

Illustrations.

(1.) ² It is A's duty, by contract, as the banksman of a colliery shaft, to put a stage on the mouth of the shaft in order to prevent loaded trucks from falling down it. A omits to do so either carelessly or intentionally. A truck falls down the shaft and kills B. A is in the same position as if he had pushed the truck down the shaft carelessly or intentionally.

(2.) ³ A slings a cask in a manner which is reasonably sufficient for public safety. The cask slips and kills B. A is not criminally responsible merely because he omitted to take further precautions.

(3.) ⁴ A leaves an unloaded gun leaning against a wall in a friend's room. In his absence B loads it and leaves it loaded where he found it. A points it in sport at C and pulls the trigger. The gun goes off and kills C. A is not criminally responsible merely because he did not examine the gun before he pulled the trigger.

(4.) ⁵ A, the captain of a steamer, sets B to keep a look out. B fails to do so, whereby the steamer runs down a smack and drowns C. A is not criminally responsible for B's omission to look out.

(5.) ⁶ A, acting as a surgeon, physician, or midwife, causes the death of a patient by improper treatment, arising from ignorance or inattention. A is not criminally responsible, unless his ignorance, or inattention, or rashness is of such a nature that the jury regard it as culpable under all the circumstances of the case. It makes no difference whether A is or is not a properly qualified practitioner.

(6.) ⁷ A, by his servants, makes fireworks in his house contrary to the provisions of an Act of Parliament. The servants by culpable negligence cause an explosion which kills B. A is not criminally responsible for B's death.

(7.) ⁸ A being under a legal duty to supply medical aid for his son B, who has confluent small pox, refuses to do so from religious motives, and B dies. It must be shewn that B's life would probably have been prolonged if medical aid had been provided, before A can be convicted of manslaughter.

DUTY TO PROVIDE NECESSARIES OF LIFE.

² Every person under a legal duty, whether by contract or by law, or by the act of taking charge, wrongfully or otherwise, of another person, to provide the necessaries of life for such other person, is criminally responsible if death is caused by the neglect of that duty, and if the person to whom the duty is owing, is, from age, health, insanity, or any other cause, unable to withdraw himself from the control of the person from whom it is due, but not otherwise.

Some of the duties of parents towards children and of masters towards apprentices are defined in Articles 264, 265, and 266.

DELEGATION OF DUTY DEFINED IN ARTICLE 213.

If a person delegates the discharge of the duty mentioned in the last Article to his wife or to a servant, and supplies such wife or servant with the means of discharging the duties so delegated, it is the legal duty of such wife or servant to discharge such duties, and it is the legal duty of the man who delegates them to use ordinary care to see that they are properly discharged.

Illustration.

³ A, the sister of B's deceased wife, acts as B's housekeeper, and neglects to give to B's infant child food duly provided by B, and so causes its death. A is criminally responsible for this neglect. If B knew of A's neglect, and permitted her to continue it, he also is responsible, but not otherwise.

HOMICIDE DEFINED—WHEN A CHILD BECOMES A HUMAN BEING.

¹ HOMICIDE is the killing of a human being by a human being.

² A child becomes a human being within the meaning of this definition, when it has completely proceeded in a living state from the body of its mother, ³ whether it has or has not breathed, ⁴ and whether the navel string has or has not been divided, ⁵ and the killing of such a child is homicide, whether it is killed by injuries inflicted before, during, or after birth.

ARTICLE 219.

(SUBMITTED.) But the conduct of one person is not deemed for the purposes of this Article to be the cause of the conduct of another, if it affects such conduct only by way of supplying a motive for it, and not so as to make the first person an accessory before the fact to the act of the other.

interesting and elaborate chapter (ch. xii. §§ 358-389), entitled "Causal Connection," into which some discussion is introduced on the distinction between causes and conditions; a distinction of which Dr. Wharton maintains, and of which Mr. Mill (see his Logic, vol. i. p. 398, &c.) denies the solidity. For practical purposes, I think the Article in the text is sufficient. And if this were the proper place, I should be disposed to discuss some of Dr. Wharton's positions. The latter part of the Article and the Illustration (6) intended to explain it, must, I think, be law; but I know of no direct authority on the subject. The maxim "In jure non remota causa sed proxima spectatur" has no doubt a bearing on the subject (see Bacon's Maxims, 35-9, and Broom's Maxims, 216-30), but it is very vague. Lord Bacon says it does not apply to "criminal acts except they have a full interruption." His illustration is,—A fires a pistol at B, and misses him, and runs away. B pursues A. A stabs B with a dagger. "If the law should consider the last impulsive cause, it should say it was in his own defence, but the law is otherwise, for it is but a pursuance and execution of the first murderous intent." Surely in this case the stab is the immediate cause of B's death; A's state of mind is another matter, and is to be inferred from facts. The law as to accessories and incitement appears to shew the limit to which participation in a crime can be carried. Unless the line is drawn there it is impossible to say how far it would extend. Illustration (6) is a prosaic version of Othello. Iago, however, in Act iv. sc. 1, says when asked to give poison, "Do it not with poison, strangle her in her bed." This would clearly make him an accessory. To take a humbler instance, the catastrophe of Oliver Twist might, perhaps, fall within Illustration (6). In ch. xlvii. of that work, Fagin, after getting Sikes to say he would murder any one who should betray him, wakes up Noah Claypole and makes him tell Sikes that the girl Nancy had betrayed him, and, as Sikes rushes out in a passion, says, "You won't be too violent, Bill; I mean not too violent for safety." I think that the whole conversation taken together would be evidence to go to a jury, that Fagin did 'counsel' or 'procure' the murder committed by Sikes, which would make him an accessory before the fact, but if he had confined himself to merely telling Sikes what Claypole said he had heard, it would not have been enough. After all there was only the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice to prove what he said, and Claypole does not seem to have been by when the most damaging words were spoken.

(6.) A tells B facts about C in the hope that the knowledge of those facts will induce B to murder C, and in order that C may be murdered; but A does not advise B to murder C; B murders C accordingly. A has not caused C's death within the meaning of this Article.

A person is deemed to have committed homicide, although his act is not the immediate or not the sole cause of death in the following cases—

(d.) ³ If by any act he hastens the death of a person suffering under any disease or injury which apart from such act would have caused death.

An explosion follows, and C is killed. Both A and B have killed C.

WHEN CAUSING DEATH DOES NOT AMOUNT TO HOMICIDE.

A person is not deemed to have committed homicide, although his conduct may have caused death, in the following cases :

(a.) ⁴ When the death takes place more than a year and a day after the injury causing it. In computing the period the day on which the injury is inflicted is to be counted as the first day ;

(b.) [It is said] ⁵ When the death is caused without any definite bodily injury to the person killed, but this does not

⁵ 1 Hale, 429. Lord Hale's reason is that "secret things belong to God; and hence it was that before 1 Ja. 1, c. 12, witchcraft or fascination was not felony, because it wanted a trial" (i.e. I suppose because of the difficulty of proof). I suspect that the fear of encouraging prosecutions for witchcraft was the real reason of this rule. Dr. Wharton rationalizes the rule thus: "Death from nervous causes does not involve penal consequences." This appears to me to substitute an arbitrary quasi scientific rule for a bad rule founded on ignorance now dispelled. Suppose a man were intentionally killed by being kept awake till the nervous irritation of sleeplessness killed him, might not this be murder? Suppose a man kills a sick person intentionally, by making a loud noise which wakes him when sleep gives him a chance of life ; or suppose knowing that a man has aneurism of the heart, his heir rushes into his room, and roars in his ear, "Your wife is dead !" intending to kill and killing him, why are not these acts murder ? They are no more "secret things belonging to God" than the operation of arsenic. As to the fear that by admitting that such acts are made, people might be rendered liable to prosecution for breaking the hearts of their fathers or wives by bad conduct, the answer is that such an event could never be proved. A long course of conduct, gradually "breaking a man's heart," could never be the "direct or immediate" cause of death. If it was, and it was intended to have that effect, why should it not be murder ? In R. v. Towers, 12 C. C. C. 530, a man was convicted before Denman, J., of manslaughter, for frightening a child to death (see Wharton on Homicide, § 372, on this case).

WHEN HOMICIDE IS UNLAWFUL.

⁴ Homicide is unlawful,

Lord Hale doubts whether voluntarily and maliciously infecting a person of the plague, and so causing his death, would be murder (i. 432). It is hard to see why. He says that "infection is God's arrow." A different view was taken in the analogous case of R. v. Greenwood, 1 Russ. Cr. 100, 7 Cox, C. C. 404. As to the proviso, see Illustration (1).

CHAPTER XXIV.

—CONCEALMENT OF BIRTH.

ARTICLE 223.

MANSLAUGHTER AND MURDER DEFINED.

² MANSLAUGHTER is unlawful homicide without malice aforethought.

Murder is unlawful homicide with malice aforethought.

Malice aforethought means any one or more of the following states of mind preceding or co-existing with the act or omission by which death is caused, and ³ it may exist where that act is unpremeditated.

(a.) An intention to cause the death of, or grievous bodily harm to, any person, whether such person is the person actually killed or not;

(b.) Knowledge that the act which causes death will probably cause the death of, or grievously bodily harm to, some person, whether such person is the person actually killed or not, although such knowledge is accompanied by indifference whether death or grievous bodily harm is caused or not, or by a wish that it may not be caused;

(c.) An intent to commit any felony whatever;

² For the authorities for this Article see Note VIII. Draft Code, ss. 174-177.

³ Coke's first case of implied malice is malice implied from the want of provocation. A man who wantonly or on a slight cause intentionally and violently kills another, shews by that act, not indeed the existence of hatred of long standing, but the existence of deadly hatred instantly conceived and executed, which is at least as bad if not worse. This in the strict sense of the words is malice aforethought. As Hobbes well observes: "It is malice forethought, though not long forethought." (Dialogue of the Common Laws, "Works," vi. 85). And it is not by law necessary that it should be long. If a slight provocation does not reduce murder to manslaughter, à fortiori, the total absence of all provocation, and the mere rapidity with which the execution of a cruel and wicked design follows on its conception cannot have that effect. For cases of slight provocation, see 1 Russ. Cr. 712, and cases there collected.

(d.) An intent to oppose by force any officer of justice on his way to, in, or returning from the execution of the duty of arresting, keeping in custody, or imprisoning any person whom he is lawfully entitled to arrest, keep in custody, or imprison, or the duty of keeping the peace or dispersing an unlawful assembly, provided that the offender has notice that the person killed is such an officer so employed.

The expression "officer of justice" in this clause includes every person who has a legal right to do any of the acts mentioned, whether he is an officer or a private person.

Notice may be given, either by words, by the production of a warrant, or other legal authority by the known official character of the person killed, or by the circumstances of the case.

This Article is subject to the provisions contained in Articles 224-226, both inclusive, as to the effect of provocation.

(1.)¹ A knowing that B is suffering from disease of the heart, and intending to kill B, gives B a slight push, and thereby kills B. A commits murder.

(2.)¹ A in the last illustration pushes B unlawfully, but without knowledge of his state of health or intention to kill him, or do him grievous bodily harm. A commits manslaughter. If A laid his hand gently on B to attract his attention, and by doing so startled and killed him, A's act would be no offence at all.

(3.)² A finding B asleep on straw, lights the straw, meaning to do B serious injury, but not to kill him. B is burnt to death. A commits murder.

(4.)³ A waylays B, intending to beat, but not intending to kill him or do him grievous bodily harm. A beats B and does kill him. This is manslaughter at least, and may be murder if the beating were so violent as to be likely, according to common knowledge, to cause death.

or to do him grievous bodily harm. The blow kills B. A commits manslaughter.

(6.) ¹ A, recently delivered of a child, lays it naked by the side of the road and wholly conceals its birth. It dies of cold. This is murder or manslaughter, according as A had or had not reasonable ground for believing that the child would be preserved.

(7.) ² It is A's duty to put a stage at the mouth of the shaft of a colliery. He omits to do so. A truck falls down the shaft in consequence and kills B. If by omitting to erect the stage A intended that B's death should be caused, A is guilty of murder. If the omission was caused only by the culpable negligence of A, and without any intention to kill or injure B, or a reckless disregard to the chance of his being killed, A is guilty of manslaughter.

(8.) ³ A, for the purpose of rescuing a prisoner, explodes a barrel of gun-powder in a crowded street and kills a number of persons, intending to explode the barrel of powder in the crowded street. A commits murder, although he may have no intention at all about the people in the street, or may hope that they will escape injury.

(9.) ⁴ A shoots at a domestic fowl, intending to steal it, and accidentally kills B. A commits murder.

² R. v. Hughes, D. & B. 248.

³ R. v. Desmond, Barrett and Others. In this case Lord Chief Justice Cockburn said, "If a man did an act, more especially if that were an illegal act, although its immediate purpose might not be to take life, yet if it were such that life was necessarily endangered by it—if a man did such an act, not with the purpose of taking life, but with the knowledge or belief that life was likely to be sacrificed by it," that was murder: Times Report, Apr. 28, 1868. It is singular that this case is noticed in Cox's Reports only for the sake of a point about evidence not the least worth reporting: see 11 Cox, C. C. 146. The case of R. v. Allen and Others, the Fenians executed after the Manchester Special Commission in 1867, is not, so far as I know, reported, except in 17 L. T. (N.S.) 223, which reprints the letters printed in Note IX.

⁴ Foat. 258-9, and see note. This dictum (which is supported by many other authorities) was followed by Lord Chief Justice Cockburn in Barrett's Case. He said, "If a person seeking to commit a felony should in the prosecution of that purpose cause, although it might be unintentionally, the death of another, that, by the law of England, was murder. There were persons who thought and maintained that where death thus occurred, not being the immediate purpose of the (10.) ¹ A, from wanton mischief, throws stones down a coal-pit and knocks away a scaffolding. The absence of the scaffolding causes an accident by which B is killed. A commits manslaughter.

(11.) ² A, a thief, pursued by B, a policeman, who wishes to arrest A, trips up B, who is accidentally killed. A commits murder.

(12.) ³ A, having words with his wife, B, strikes her on the head with a pestle, and kills her. A commits murder, though the act was not pre-meditated.

(13.) ⁴ A, being called names by B, a woman, throws a broomstick at her, which happens to kill her. A commits manslaughter.

EFFECT AND DEFINITION OF PROVOCATION.

⁶ Homicide, which would otherwise be murder, is not murder, but manslaughter, if the act by which death is caused is done in the heat of passion, caused by provocation, as hereinafter defined, unless the provocation was sought or voluntarily provoked by the offender as an excuse for killing or doing bodily harm.

The following acts may, subject to the provisions contained in Article 225, amount to provocation:—

(a.) ⁷ An assault and battery of such a nature as to inflict actual bodily harm, or great insult, is a provocation to the person assaulted.

(b.) ⁸ If two persons quarrel and fight upon equal terms, person causing the death, it was a harsh law which made the act murder. But the Court and jury were sitting there to administer law, not to make or mould it, and the law was what he told them." Times, April 28, 1868.

and upon the spot, whether with deadly weapons or otherwise, each gives provocation to the other, whichever is right in the quarrel, and whichever strikes the first blow.

(c.) ¹An unlawful imprisonment is a provocation to the person imprisoned, but not to the bystanders, though an unlawful imprisonment may amount to such a breach of the peace as to entitle a bystander to prevent it by the use of force sufficient for that purpose. An arrest by officers of justice, whose character as such is known, but who are acting under a warrant so irregular as to make the arrest illegal, is provocation to the person illegally arrested, but not to bystanders.

(d.) ²The sight of the act of adultery committed with his wife is provocation to the husband of the adulteress on the part both of the adulterer and of the adulteress.

(e.) ³The sight of the act of sodomy committed upon a man's son is provocation to the father on the part of the person committing the offence.

(f.) ⁴Neither words, nor gestures, nor injuries to property, nor breaches of contract, amount to provocation within this Article, except [perhaps] words expressing an intention to inflict actual bodily injury, accompanied by some act which shews that such injury is intended; ⁵ but words used at the time of an assault—slight in itself—may be taken into account in estimating the degree of provocation given by a blow.

(g.) ⁶The employment of lawful force against the person of another is not a provocation to the person against whom it is employed.

off, or I'll stab you," and without giving B time to retreat, does stab him mortally. A does not receive from B such provocation as reduces his offence to manslaughter.

(12.)¹ A attacks B in such a manner as to endanger B's life. B drives off and pursues A. A in self-defence kills B. This is murder in A.

ARTICLE 225.

WHEN PROVOCATION DOES NOT EXTENUATE HOMICIDE.

²Provocation does not extenuate the guilt of homicide unless the person provoked is at the time when he does the act deprived of the power of self-control by the provocation which he has received, and in deciding the question whether this was or was not the case, regard must be had to the nature of the act by which the offender causes death, to the time which elapsed between the provocation and the act which caused death, to the offender's conduct during that interval, and to all other circumstances tending to shew the state of his mind.

Illustrations.

(1.)³ A and B violently quarrel, and throw bottles at each other at a tavern, A throwing the first bottle. The company interfering, they remain quiet for an hour, B wishing to be reconciled. A refuses, and says he will have B's blood. When B and the rest of the company leave, A calls B back in terms of insult, and fights with him with swords; B is killed. A commits murder, though the fight is on equal terms.

(2.)⁴ B strikes A with his fist. A, being the stronger man of the two, throws B down on the ground, and beats out his brains with a poker. A commits murder.

(3.)⁵ A and B quarrel and fight. B, getting the best of the fight, leaves A. A throws a coal-pick at B and injures him, and then wounds him with a knife. B leaves the house, saying to A, "You have killed me." A says to a third person, "I will have my revenge." B returns to the house soon afterwards and A stabs him again and kills him. A has committed murder.

(4.)¹ A is turned out of a house and kicked by B. A runs to his own house, between 200 and 300 yards off, returns with a knife, and meeting B, stabs him after walking quietly with him some yards. A then runs back and puts his knife in its usual place. The deliberation shewn in fetching and replacing the knife are facts to be considered by the jury in deciding whether or not A committed the offence whilst deprived of self-control by passion.

(5.)² Police-officers in charge of a police-van have in custody D, a person charged with felony under 11 Vict. c. 12. A, B, and C, and others assault the van in concert, rescue the prisoner, and shoot one of the policemen dead with a pistol. The warrant under which D was in custody was informal, but not to the knowledge of A, B, and C. A, B, and C and the others are guilty of murder, and it would have made no difference if they had known of the irregularity of the warrant.

ARTICLE 226.

PROVOCATION TO THIRD PERSON.

³ Provocation to a person by an actual assault or by a mutual combat, or by a false imprisonment, is in some cases provocation to those who are with that person at the time, and to his friends who, in the case of a mutual combat, take part in the fight for his defence. But it is uncertain how far this principle extends.

C, A's kinsman, casually riding by and seeing them in fight and his kinsman one of them, rode in, drew his sword, thrust B through and killed him, Coke, C.J., and the rest of the Court agreed that this is clearly but manslaughter in him (i.e. C) and murder in the other, for the one may have malice and the other not." I should have said C's offence was infinitely worse than A's, and I do not think this case would be followed in the present day.

ARTICLE 229.

ACCESSORIES BEFORE THE FACT IN MANSLAUGHTER.

It seems that there may be accessories before the fact in manslaughter if the act or omission by which death is caused is not such an act or omission as, but for provocation received by the offender, would have been murder.

Illustration.

² A advises B to give C a strong dose of medicine to make him feel sick and uncomfortable. B does so and C dies. B is guilty of manslaughter, and A is accessory before the fact to manslaughter.

Taylor*, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 148. That unlawful killing with a deliberate intent to do slight bodily harm, which happens to cause death, is manslaughter, is a comparatively modern doctrine. By Coke's definition it would be murder. Whatever it is called there may obviously be an accessory before the fact to such an act.

See remark of Cockburn, C.J., p. 306.

Whilst this is being written a case is reserved for the question whether a man who draws a pistol from his pocket intending to commit murder, but is stopped by having it taken from his hand, can be convicted under clause (h.) of the Article representing s. 15 of the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100.

¹The words "secret disposition of the body" include cases in which the body is placed in a situation where it is not likely to be found except by accident, or upon search, although the body is in no way concealed from any one who happens to go to that place.

¹ R. v. Brown, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 244. The Act seems to be defective in punishing only the secret disposition of the body, and not the disposing of the body in such a way as to conceal the fact that it was born of its mother. If a woman were to leave a child's body by night in the middle of a street, or to drop it by day in a crowd of people, there would be an effectual concealment of the birth, but would there be a "secret disposition" of the body? Under the old Act, 9 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 14, it was held that a temporary concealment of the body with intent to remove it afterwards to some other place was within the words "secret burying or otherwise disposing": R. v. Perry, Dear. 471. This would seem to be so a fortiori under the present law.

CHAPTER XXVII.

1 ASSAULTS, AGGRAVATED AND COMMON, PUNISHABLE ON INDICTMENT.

ARTICLE 241.

ASSAULT AND BATTERY AND ASSAULT DEFINED.

AN assault is

(a.) ² an attempt unlawfully to apply any the least actual
³ force to the person of another directly or indirectly,

(b.) the act of using a gesture towards another giving him reasonable grounds to believe that the person using that gesture meant to apply such actual force to his person as aforesaid,

(c.) the act of depriving another of his liberty, in either case without the consent of the person assaulted, or with such consent if it is obtained by fraud.

A battery is an assault whereby any the least actual force is actually applied to the person of another, or to the dress worn by him, directly or indirectly.

Provided that such acts as are reasonably necessary for the common intercourse of life, are not assaults or batteries if they are done for the purpose of such intercourse only and with no greater force than the occasion requires.

No mere words can in any case amount to an assault.

² See Article 42 for a definition of an attempt.

³ 1 Russ. Cr. (5th ed.) 956; 1 Hawk. P. C. 100. A most elaborate definition of "force" is given in the Indian Penal Code, s. 350, as the foundation for a definition of assault, s. 351. The definition is almost more mathematical than legal. It begins thus: "A person is said to use force to another if he causes motion, change of motion, or cessation of motion to that other," &c., &c. It is impossible not to ask why, if force is to be defined, motion should be left undefined. It is, I think, hardly too great a demand on the candour of a reader to suppose that he will see that a man who withdraws a chair on which a person is about to sit down, causing him thereby to fall to the ground; or who whips a horse on which he is sitting, and so makes him run away with his rider; or who breaks a hole in ice in front of a skater, and so causes him to fall into the water—"applies actual force to his person indirectly."

- (2.) ² A sets a dog at B, which bites B.
- (3.) ³ A man professing to act as a medical adviser fraudulently induces a girl to allow him to undress her, by falsely alleging that it is necessary for medical reasons to do so.
- (4.) ⁴ A touches B, a boy of eight, in a grossly indecent manner, B acquiescing in ignorance of the nature of the act.
- (5.) ⁵ A induces B to permit him to have connection with her, by pretending to be her husband.

The following are cases of assault without battery :—

ARTICLE 243.

ASSAULTS ON PERSONS PROTECTING WRECK.

¹ Every one is guilty of a misdemeanor and is liable, upon conviction thereof, to a maximum punishment of seven years penal servitude, who assaults and strikes or wounds any magistrate, officer, or other person lawfully authorized, in or on account of the execution of his duty in or concerning the preservation of any vessel in distress, or of any vessel or goods or effects wrecked, stranded, or cast on shore, or lying under water.

ARTICLE 244,

ASSAULTS CAUSING ACTUAL BODILY HARM.

² Every one commits a misdemeanor and is liable upon conviction thereof, to a maximum punishment of five years penal servitude, who commits an assault occasioning actual bodily harm.

ARTICLE 245.

ASSAULTS PUNISHABLE WITH TWO YEARS IMPRISONMENT.

Every person commits a misdemeanor and is liable, upon conviction, to a maximum punishment of two years imprisonment and hard labour,

(a.) ³ who assaults any person with intent to commit a felony or to resist or prevent the lawful apprehension or detainer of himself or of any other person for any offence ;

(b.) ³ or who assaults, resists, or wilfully obstructs any peace officer in the due execution of his duty, or any person acting in aid of such officer ;

(c.) ⁴ or who indecently assaults any female, or attempts to have carnal knowledge of any girl under twelve years of age ;

(d.)¹ or who by threats or force obstructs, or prevents, or endeavours to obstruct or prevent any clergyman or other minister in or from celebrating divine service or otherwise officiating in any church, chapel, meeting-house, or other place of divine worship, or in or from the performance of his duty in the lawful burial of the dead in any churchyard or other burial place ;

(e.)² or who strikes or offers any violence, or arrests upon or under the pretence of executing any civil process any clergyman or other minister engaged in or to the knowledge of the offender about to engage in any of the rites or duties mentioned in the last clause, or to the knowledge of the offender going to perform the same, or returning from the performance thereof.

ARTICLE 246.

PUNISHMENT OF COMMON ASSAULT ON INDICTMENT.

³ Every person who commits a common assault is guilty of a misdemeanor and is liable, on conviction thereof, to a maximum punishment of one year's imprisonment and hard labour.

The punishments specified in this chapter can be inflicted only in cases in which the offender is convicted on an indictment or information.

ASSAULTS ON OFFICERS PREVENTING SMUGGLING.

⁴ Every person is guilty of a misdemeanor and is liable to a fine of one hundred pounds who assaults, resists, or obstructs any officer of the army, navy, marines, coastguard, customs, or other person duly employed for the prevention of smuggling, in the execution of his duty, or in the seizing of any goods liable to forfeiture under the Customs Acts, or aids, abets, or assists therein.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

PUNISHMENT OF ASSAULTS ON SUMMARY CONVICTION.

ARTICLE 248.

ASSAULTS PUNISHABLE ON SUMMARY CONVICTION.

EVERY person who commits an assault may, subject to the provisions in this chapter contained, be punished in respect thereof upon summary conviction before two justices of the peace.

ARTICLE 249.

ASSAULTS WHICH OUGHT NOT TO BE PUNISHED ON SUMMARY CONVICTION.

¹ In case the justices find the assault or battery complained of to have been accompanied by any attempt to commit felony, or are of opinion that the case is from any other circumstance a fit subject for a prosecution by indictment, they must abstain from any adjudication thereupon and deal with the case in all respects in the same manner as if they had no authority finally to hear and determine the same.

Justices have no power under the provisions of this chapter to hear and determine any case of assault or battery in which any question arises as to the title to any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, or any interest therein or accruing therefrom, or as to any bankruptcy or insolvency, or any execution under the process of any Court of justice.

of an aggravated nature, and if the person assaulted is a female, or a male whose age does not in the opinion of the justices exceed fourteen years,¹ or if the person assaulted is a constable in the execution of his duty, the offender may be fined any sum not exceeding £20,² together with costs, and in default of payment may be imprisoned with or without hard labour for a maximum period of six months, unless such fine is sooner paid; or he may be imprisoned without the option of a fine, and³ he may in any case be bound to keep the peace and be of good behaviour for six months from the expiration of his sentence if the justices think fit.

In the case of an assault on a constable in the execution of his duty the offender may, if he has been convicted of a similar assault within two years, be imprisoned with or without hard labour for a maximum term of nine months.

³ If any person assaults or resists a borough constable [appointed under the Municipal Corporation Act, 1881] in the execution of his duty, or aids or incites any person so to assault or resist, he may for every such offence be fined on summary conviction a sum not exceeding five pounds.

This provision does not prevent any prosecution by way of indictment against any such offender, except that he cannot be prosecuted both by indictment and in a summary manner for the same offence.

It can hardly have been the intention of the legislature to repeal by implication the enactments embodied in the earlier part of the present Article, so far as they relate to borough constables.

was held that these words mean subsequent proceedings for an assault, and that they do not mean to cover subsequent proceeding for the act constituting the assault. It was held in R. v. Morris that if death followed an assault, for which the offender had been punished, he might nevertheless be indicted for manslaughter. In Masper v. Brown it was held that a man who had been fined for an assault on a married woman could not be afterwards sued by her husband for the damage he had sustained by the loss of his wife's services.

CHAPTER XXIX.

DEFINITION OF RAPE.

² RAPE is the act of having carnal knowledge of a woman without her conscious permission, such permission not being extorted by force or fear of immediate bodily harm; but if such permission is given, the fact that it was obtained by

² See the cases in the Illustrations, and see 1 Russ. Cr. 858, &c. A late decision, R. v. Flattery (46 L. J. (M.C.) 130), has thrown much uncertainty over the law. The prisoner was convicted of rape for having procured connection with a girl by falsely pretending that the act was necessary for a surgical or medical purpose, "the prosecutrix making but feeble resistance, believing that the prisoner was treating her medically." Two of the judges laid stress upon the resistance as negating consent to sexual connection, though not to the act done or supposed to be done. The Court, however, almost, though not altogether, overruled the principle said in R. v. Barrow (L. R. 1 C. C. R. 158) to be "established by a class of cases" (R. v. Jackson, R. & R. 487; R. v. Clarke, Dear. 397; R. v. Saunders, 8 C. & P. 285; R. v. Williams, 8 C. & P. 286) "that where consent is obtained by fraud the act done does not amount to rape." Hardly any of these cases seem to have been cited in the argument, though R. v. Barrow was. In R. v. Flattery, as in R. v. N. Fletcher, the Statute of Westminster 2nd., 13 Edw. 1, c. 34, was referred to as giving a "definition of rape." I do not see how the statute can be treated as defining rape at all. The words are "purveu est que si homme ravist femme, espouse, damoisele, ou autre femme desoremes, par la ou ele ne se est assentue, ne avaunt ne apres eit judgement, &c., e ensement par la ou home ravist femme, &c., a force tut seit ke ele se assente apres." In the Latin version the words are "rapiat ubi nec ante nec post consenserit." This cannot be a definition of rape, because it contains the word "rape." If however it is taken as being a definition, it implies that there may be cases of rape in which the woman consents, for the punishment is confined to cases of rape where there is no consent, before or after. The latter part of the enactment which speaks of consent after the fact appears inapplicable to rape in the modern sense of the word. When the crime is over how can a person consent to it? Had it not been for Coke's comments (2nd Inst. 180, 433, 3rd Inst. 60), I should have thought that the words applied rather to abduction than to what we mean by rape, especially as the statute contains provisions as to the ravishment of wards, in which the word "rapiat" is used, but I cannot think that the legislature intended to lay down any definition at all. Their language implies that the crime was then well known, and so does Coke's comment. The Act was repealed by 9 Geo. 4, c. 31, s. 1.

fraud, or that the woman did not understand the nature of the act, is immaterial. Provided that:—

(1.) ¹ A husband [it is said] cannot commit rape upon his wife by carnally knowing her himself, but he may do so if he aids another person to have carnal knowledge of her.

(2.) ² A boy under fourteen years of age is conclusively presumed to be incapable of committing rape.

³ Carnal knowledge means the penetration to any the slightest degree of the organ known by the male organ of generation.

(4.) ⁷ A has connection with B, a married woman, who permits the act because, owing to A's fraud, she believes him to be her husband. A has not ravished B.

³ Ibid. s. 4.

⁴ Ibid. s. 3. These words are obviously a mistake. In the preceding section (where they do not appear) they would have been superfluous, but harmless. In this section they are mischievous, for, if taken literally, they make it impossible to commit a rape upon a girl between twelve and thirteen, as they provide that carnally to know a girl between twelve and thirteen without her consent is a misdemeanor. The words ought either to be omitted altogether or else changed into "even with her consent." Probably the Court would so construe them, for it is impossible to suppose that Parliament can have intended the monstrous consequence pointed out above. It was held in R. v. —, by the Court for Crown Cases Reserved on Nov. 25, 1882, that this view of the law is correct, and that the enactment referred to did not alter the law as to rape on a child between twelve and thirteen. It was stated that Mellor, J., had held to the same effect in an earlier case.

CHAPTER XXX.

CRIMES AFFECTING CONJUGAL AND PARENTAL RIGHTS—BIGAMY—ABDUCTION.

² EVERY one commits the felony called bigamy, and is liable, upon conviction thereof, to a maximum punishment of seven years penal servitude, who, being married, marries any other person during the life of his or her wife or husband.

³ The expression "being married" means being legally married. The word "marries" means goes through a form of marriage which the ⁴ law of the place where such form is used recognizes as ⁵ binding, whether the parties are by that law competent to contract marriage or not, and although by their fraud the form employed may, apart from the ⁶ bigamy, have been insufficient to constitute a binding marriage.

Provided that this article does not extend

(i.) ⁷ to a second marriage contracted elsewhere than in England and Ireland by any other than a subject of Her Majesty; nor

(ii.) to any person marrying a second time, whose husband or wife has been continually absent from such person for

⁴ Burt v. Burt, 29 L. J. (Probate) 133.

⁶ See Illustration (4).

seven years then last past, and has not been known by such person to be living within that time.

¹ The burden of proving such knowledge is upon the prosecutor when the fact that the parties have been continually absent for seven years has been proved; nor

(iii.) to any person who at the time of such second marriage was divorced from the bond of the first marriage, nor to any person whose first marriage has been declared void by the sentence of any Court of competent jurisdiction.

² A divorce à vinculo matrimonii pronounced by a foreign Court between persons who have contracted marriage in England, and who continue to be domiciled in England, on grounds which would not justify such a divorce in England, is not a divorce within the meaning of this clause.

Illustrations.

(1.) ³ A marries B, a person within the prohibited degrees of affinity, and during B's lifetime marries C. A has not committed bigamy.

(2.) ⁴ A marries B, and during B's lifetime, goes through a form of marriage with C, a person within the prohibited degrees of affinity. A has committed bigamy.

(3.) ⁵ A marries B in Ireland, and during B's lifetime goes through a form of marriage with C in Ireland which is invalid, because both A and C are Protestants, and the marriage is performed by a Roman Catholic priest. A commits bigamy.

² R. v. Lolley, R. & R. 237. The decision does not refer to domicile, but this qualification appears from later cases to be required. All the cases on this subject are collected in 2 Sm. L. C. 839-45. Harvey v. Farnie, L. R. 5 P. D. 153, and 6 P. D. 32, is the converse of Lolley's case. In Harvey v. Farnie a Scotch divorce was recognized as dissolving a marriage between domiciled Scotch people, though the marriage took place in England, the wife being domiciled at the time in England. A question as to the exact time at which a person can be said to be divorced may arise. In 1 Hale, P. C. 694, a case is mentioned in which a person marrying after sentence of divorce, but pending an appeal, was held to be within a similar proviso in 1 Ja. 1, c. 11. In R. v. Hale, tried at the Leeds summer assizes, 1875, a woman pleaded guilty to a charge of bigamy before Lindley, J., she having married after the decree nisi was pronounced, but before it became absolute, which it afterwards did. The judge's attention, however, was not directed to the passage in Hale.

(b.) solemnises matrimony without due publication of banns, unless licence of marriage be first had and obtained from some person having authority to grant the same; or

(b.) who, in any such registered building or office, solemnises any marriage in the absence of a registrar of the district in which such registered building or office is situated; or

(c.) who solemnises any marriage in England (except by licence) within twenty-one days after the entry of the notice to the superintendent registrar, or after three months after such entry.

ARTICLE 261.

ABDUCTION WITH INTENT TO MARRY.

Every one commits felony and is liable, upon conviction, to a maximum punishment of fourteen years penal servitude, who, with intent to marry or carnally know any woman, or 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85; 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 22, and some others. The Act of 1823 assumes that all marriages are solemnised in the Established Church. The Act of 1837, 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85, provides for the solemnisation of marriages elsewhere.

² Sect. 7, relating to the certificate, is repealed, 37 & 38 Vict. c. 35.

³ No such exception is contained in the Act of 1823; but it can hardly have been intended to apply to such marriages. See 10 & 11 Vict. c. 58 (passed in consequence of the decision in R. v. Mills, 10 C. & F. 534).

with intent to cause any woman to be married or carnally known by any other person,

(a.) ¹ from motives of lucre, takes away or detains against her will any such woman having any such interest in property as is hereinafter mentioned ; or

(b.) ² fraudulently allures, takes away, or detains, any such woman, being under the age of twenty-one years, and having any such interest in property as is hereinafter mentioned, out of the possession and against the will of her father or mother, or of any other person having the lawful care or charge of her ; or

(c.) ³ by force takes away or detains against her will any woman of any age.

If any woman, against whom either of the offences defined in clauses (a.) and (b.) is committed, has any interest, legal or equitable, present or future, absolute, conditional, or contingent, in any real or personal estate, or is a presumptive heiress or co-heiress, or presumptive next of kin, or one of the presumptive next of kin to any one having such interest, any person convicted of either of the said offences against her is incapable of taking any estate or interest, legal or equitable, in any real or personal property of such woman, or in which she has any interest, or which comes to her as such heiress, co-heiress, or next of kin, and if any such marriage has taken place, such property must, upon such conviction, be settled in such manner as the Court of Chancery in England or Ireland may, upon any information at the suit of the Attorney-General, appoint.

⁴ In prosecutions for offences against this Article, a woman who, having been taken away, has been married to the offender, is, notwithstanding that marriage, competent to be a witness against him.

ARTICLE 262.

ABDUCTION OF GIRLS UNDER SIXTEEN.

¹ Every one commits a misdemeanor and is liable to a maximum punishment of two years imprisonment and hard labour, who unlawfully takes, or causes to be taken, any unmarried girl, being under the age of sixteen years, out of the possession and against the will of her father or mother, or of any other person having the lawful care or charge of her.

The taking must be a taking under the power, charge, or protection of the taker, but it is immaterial whether the girl is taken with her own consent, or at her own suggestion, or against her will.

The expression "taking out of the possession" means taking the girl to some place where the person in whose charge she is cannot exercise control over her, for some purpose inconsistent with the objects of such control. A taking for a time only may amount to abduction.

If the consent of the person from whose possession the girl is taken is obtained by fraud, the taking is deemed to be against the will of such person.

The fact that the offender supposes, in good faith and on reasonable grounds, that the girl is more than sixteen years of age, is immaterial; but [it seems] it is necessary that he should either know, or have reason to believe, that she was under the lawful care or charge of her father, mother, or some other person.

(4.) ² A, a girl, under sixteen, asks B, by whom she had been seduced, to elope with her, which he does. B commits abduction.

(5.) ³ A induces B to permit his daughter C to go away by falsely pretending that he (A) will find a place for C. A abducts C.

(6.) ⁴ A takes B, a girl under sixteen, out of her father's possession, believing her upon good grounds to be eighteen. A has abducted B.

(7.) ⁵ A meets B, a girl under sixteen, in the street, gets her to stay with him some hours, during which interval he seduces her, takes her back to the place where he found her, and there leaves her. She returns home. A was not aware at the time that B had a father or mother living. A has not abducted B.

ARTICLE 263.

STEALING CHILDREN UNDER FOURTEEN.

⁶ Every one is guilty of felony and is liable, upon conviction, to a maximum punishment of seven years penal servitude, who

(1.) unlawfully, either by force or fraud, leads, or takes away, or decoys or entices away, or detains any child under the age of fourteen years; or

(2.) receives or harbours any such child, knowing it to have been so dealt with,

with intent to deprive any parent or guardian, or other person having the lawful care or charge of such child, of the possession of it, or with intent to steal any article about or upon the person of such child.

Provided that this Article does not extend to any person who gets possession of any child, or takes any child out of the possession of any one who has lawful charge of it, if such person either claims a right to the possession of the child, or, (if it is an illegitimate child) is its mother or claims to be its father.

CHAPTER XXXI.

OFFENCES AGAINST CHILDREN BY PARENTS AND OTHERS.

ARTICLE 264.

NEGLECTING TO PROVIDE FOOD, ETC., FOR CHILDREN.

¹ Every one commits a misdemeanor who, being the parent or master, or mistress, of any child of tender years, and unable to provide for itself, refuses or neglects (being able to do so) to provide sufficient food, clothes, bedding, and other ² necessities for such child, so as thereby to injure the health of such child.

ARTICLE 265.

PARENTS NOT PROVIDING NECESSARIES FOR CHILDREN.

³ Every one commits a misdemeanor, and is liable upon summary conviction thereof before two justices to a maximum punishment of six months imprisonment with hard labour, who, being a parent, wilfully neglects to provide adequate food, clothing, medical aid, or lodging, for his child, being in his custody, under the age of fourteen years, whereby the health of such child is, or is likely to be seriously injured.

The justices may suspend the sentence until further notice if the offender enters into his own recognizances, with or without one or more sureties, as the justices may think fit, to come up for judgment when called upon.

¹ Friend's Case, R. & R. 20; R. v. Ryland, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 99. It is necessary to prove actual injury to the child's health, R. v. Philpott, Dear. 179, and R. v. Hogan, 2 Den. 277, and that the defendant actually has, not merely that he might get from the relieving officer the means of providing for the child: R. v. Chandler, Dear. 453.

³ 81 & 82 Vict. c. 122, s. 37.

The guardians of the union or parish in which the child may be living ¹ must institute the prosecution, and pay the costs thereof out of their funds.

ARTICLE 266.

MASTERS NOT PROVIDING FOR APPRENTICES—ABANDONING CHILDREN UNDER TWO.

Every one commits a misdemeanor, and is liable upon conviction thereof to a maximum punishment of five years penal servitude, ² who unlawfully abandons or exposes any child being under the age of two years, whereby the life of such child is endangered or its health has been or is likely to be permanently injured.

The words "abandoned" and "expose" include a wilful omission to take charge of the child on the part of a person legally bound to do so, and any mode of dealing with it calculated to leave it exposed to risk without protection.

Illustrations.

(1.) ³B, A's wife, living apart from A, leaves C their child, nine months old, lying in the road outside A's door. A, knowing its position, lets it lie there from 7 P.M. till 1 A.M. A's mother, D, knowing the child is there, and being in her house, acts in the same way as A. A has abandoned and exposed C, but D has not, as she was under no legal obligation to take charge of C.

(2.) ⁴A sends B, her child five weeks of age, packed up in a hamper as a parcel, by railway to C, B's putative father, giving directions to the clerk to be very careful of the hamper, and send it by the next train. The child reaches C safely. A has abandoned and exposed B.

CHAPTER XXXII.

* LIBELS ON PRIVATE PERSONS.

ARTICLE 267.

DEFINITION OF LIBEL.

THE word "libel" means

(a.) the offence defined in this Article.

(b.) Anything by the publication of which the offence is committed.

The publication of a libel on the character of a dead person is not a misdemeanor unless it is calculated to throw discredit on living persons.

Illustrations.

(1.) ² A religious society called the S. Nunnery, consisting of certain nuns and other persons, may be libelled though no individual is specially referred to.

(2.) ³ A libel may be published against "certain persons lately arrived from Portugal and living near Broad Street," though no particular person is mentioned or referred to.

* See Note X.

¹ 1 Hawk. P. C. 542. As to what can be a "libel" see Article 268. As to "publishes," see Article 270; "maliciously," see Article 271. As to libels on the dead see R. v. Topham, 4 T. R. 126. Lord Kenyon's words are, "If it be done with a malevolent purpose to vilify the memory of the deceased with a view to injure his posterity, then it is done with a design to break the peace." As the design to break the peace is only a legal fiction, and as men intend the natural consequences of their acts, this is equivalent to what is stated in the text.

² R. v. Gathercole, 2 Lew. 237.

³ R. v. Osborne, 2 Keb. 230.

ARTICLE 268.

THINGS CAPABLE OF BEING LIBELS.

¹ Any words or signs conveying defamatory matter marked upon any substance, and any thing which by its own nature conveys defamatory matter, may be a libel in the second sense of the word before mentioned. Words spoken can in no case be a libel, although they may convey defamatory matter.

Illustration.

A letter or passage in a book or newspaper, words written on a wall, a picture, a gallows set up before a man's door, may be a libel.

ARTICLE 269.

DEFAMATORY MATTER.

² Defamatory matter is matter which, either directly or by insinuation or irony, tends to expose any person to hatred, contempt, or ridicule.

Illustrations.

The following are instances of defamatory matter :—

³ A question suggesting that illegitimate children were born and murdered in a nunnery;

⁴ "A adds to his other vices ingratitude";

⁵ "A will not play the fool or the hypocrite" (meaning that he would);

⁶ "A has the itch, and smells of brimstone";

³ R. v. Gathercole, 2 Lew. C. C. 255.

⁶ Villars v. Moristen, Holt, 216.

⁷ R. v. Cooper, 8 Q. B. 533. I think it might, under special circumstances, be a libel to say of a person a thing apparently quite inoffensive. Suppose, for instance, a man wrote of another "his name is A," meaning that his real name was A, and that the name of B, by which he passed, was falsely assumed, would not this be a libel?

ARTICLE 270.

PUBLICATION DEFINED.

¹ To publish a libel is to deliver it, read it, or communicate its purport in any other manner, or to exhibit it to the person libelled, or any other person, provided that the person making the publication knows, or has an opportunity of knowing, the contents of the libel [(SUBMITTED) if it is expressed in words, or its meaning if it is expressed otherwise].

² A libel published in the ordinary course of the business of any person whose trade it is to deal in articles of the kind to which the libel belongs, is deemed to be published, not only by the person who actually sells or exhibits it, but also by his master if his master has given him general authority to sell or exhibit for his master's profit articles of that kind.

² Cases in Folkard's Starkie, 427-8; and especially R. v. Almond, 5 Burr. 2686.

left to the editor, but may be inferred from circumstances shewing that the proprietor permitted the editor to publish libels, or was indifferent as to whether libels were published by him or not.

Illustrations.

(1.) ¹ A delivers to B an open letter, of which A is the author, containing matter defamatory of C. A has published a libel.

(2.) ¹ A posts to B a sealed letter, of which A is the author, and which contains a libel on C. It seems that the posting of the letter is in itself a publication (quære).

(3.) ¹ The postman delivers to B the letter mentioned in the last illustration. The postman has not published the letter, but A has.

(4.) A bookseller's shopman sells a libellous book over the counter in the ordinary course of business; both the shopman and the bookseller have published the libel.

ARTICLE 271.

WHEN A LIBEL IS MALICIOUS.

² The publication of a libel is malicious in every case which does not fall within the provisions of some one or more of the six articles next following.

ARTICLE 272.

PUBLICATION OF THE TRUTH.

² In Bromage v. Prosser, 4 B. & C. 247, which is a leading case on the subject, Bayley, J., says, "Malice . . . in its legal sense means a wrongful act done intentionally and without just cause or excuse." From the nature of the case the publication of a libel must be an intentional act. The next six Articles sum up the different states of fact which have been held to constitute "just cause or excuse" for publishing libels. In Bromage v. Prosser and many other cases, much is said of malice in law and malice in fact, of privileged publications, &c., &c.; but a sufficiently simple and intelligible result has at last been reached by very circuitous roads. See Note X.

³ Effect of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 6.

Illustration.

¹ A writes of B, "Many years ago B committed immoral acts." The imputation is true. This is not a libel if the publisher can shew that it was for the public benefit that it should be published.

ARTICLE 273.

PUBLICATION OF MATTER HONESTLY BELIEVED TO BE TRUE.

² The publication of a libel is not a misdemeanor if the defamatory matter published is honestly believed to be true, by the person publishing it, and if the relation between the parties by and to whom the publication is made is such that the person publishing is under any legal, moral, or social duty to publish such matter to the person to whom the publication is made, or has a legitimate personal interest in so publishing it, provided that the publication does not exceed either in extent or in manner what is reasonably sufficient for the occasion,³ and provided that the person who publishes is not in fact actuated in so doing by any indirect motive.

When the existence of the relation establishing the duty has been proved, the burden of proving that the statement was not honestly believed to be true, and that the defendant was in fact actuated by some indirect motive (both or either) is upon the prosecutor.

Illustrations.

(1.) ⁴ A being asked the character of B, who had been in his service, by C, who is about to engage B as a servant, writes of B in a letter to C, the words "B is a drunkard and a thief." If A honestly and on reasonable grounds believes that B is a drunkard and a thief, though in fact he is neither, this is not a libel.

³ Clark v. Molyneux, L. R. 3 Q. B. D. 37.

⁴ Many cases as to giving characters to servants are collected and abstracted in Folkard's edition of Starkie, pp. 250-7.

If A published this letter in a newspaper it would be a libel.

As soon as the circumstances under which the letter was written are proved or appear the burden of proving that A did not honestly and on reasonable grounds believe B to be a drunkard and a thief is upon B in a prosecution or action by B.

(2.) ¹ A, the private secretary of a general, being directed by the general to give an inspecting officer information as to the discipline of a body of troops, writes a letter to the inspector, in which he says that B, who had formerly commanded the troops, attempted to excite a mutiny when he was removed from his command. This is not a libel, though false, if A honestly believed it to be true, and if it was relevant to the subject on which A was directed to report.

(3.) ² A writes a letter containing matter defamatory of B to C, A's mother-in-law, who is about to marry B. If A in good faith believes the imputations to be true, this is not a libel although the imputations are false.

(4.) ³ The mate of a ship writes a letter to A accusing the captain, B, of drunkenness and misconduct. A (who has nothing to do with the matter) forwards the letter to the owner of the ship believing the accusation to be true and thinking himself morally bound to report it. The accusation was in fact false. It is uncertain whether A has or has not libelled B.

ARTICLE 274.

FAIR CRITICISM.

⁴ The publication of a libel is not a misdemeanor if the defamatory matter consist of comments upon persons who submit themselves, or upon things submitted by their authors or owners, to public criticism, provided that such comments are fair.

² Todd v. Hawkins, 8 C. & P. 88.

⁵ Hunter v. Sharpe, 4 F. & F. 983; Folkard's Starkie, 232.

¹ Every person who takes a public part in public affairs submits his conduct therein to criticism.

² Every person who publishes any book or other literary production, or any work of art, or any advertisement of goods, submits that book, or literary production, or work of art, or advertisement to public criticism.

Illustrations.

(1.) ⁴ A, by direction of the Lords of the Admiralty, published to the world at large an official report made to the Lords of the Admiralty by B, which report contains matter defaming the character of C as a naval architect. C, having submitted to the Lords of the Admiralty proposals and plans for converting wooden ships of war into armoured ships of war, and the official report being part of a collection of papers intended to give the public information as to the construction of ships of war, and the publication being made in good faith, A has not libelled B.

(2.) ⁵ A publishes a caricature of B, an author, intended to convey the impression that his books were dull and ridiculous. A has not libelled B.

(3.) ⁶ B exhibits a picture at the annual exhibition of the Royal Academy. A writes a criticism on the pictures so exhibited, and calls B's picture "a mere daub." If this expresses A's honest opinion, A has not libelled B.

(4.) ⁷ B publishes an advertisement about a bag sold by him and called "the Bag of Bags." A publishes a criticism on the advertisement, saying, "The title is very silly, very slangy, and very vulgar." This may be a libel if it is meant to convey an imputation of B's way of managing his business, but is not a libel if it is only an expression of A's honest opinion as to the title given by B to his bag.

² Illustrations (2), (3), and (4).

⁵ Carr v. Hood, 1 Camp. 354; Folkard's Starkie, 225-7; and see Tabart v. Tipper, 1 Camp. 350. Carr v. Hood is a strong case, because the caricature ridiculed not only the book but the author. It is one thing to say, "This book is absurd," another to say, "You are an absurd person because you have written this absurd book." This decision would cover (within limits) common political caricatures.

PARLIAMENTARY PROCEEDINGS AND FAIR COMMENTS THEREON.

¹ It is not a misdemeanor to publish such of the reports, papers, votes, or proceedings of either House of Parliament as such House of Parliament may deem fit or necessary to be published; or,

² any extract from or abstract of such report, paper, votes or proceedings, if it is shewn by the party accused that such extract or abstract was published bonâ fide and without ³ malice; or

ARTICLE 275A.

REPORTS OF PROCEEDINGS OF PUBLIC MEETINGS.

⁶ Any report published in any newspaper of the proceedings of a public meeting is privileged if such meeting was

² 3 & 4 Vict. c. 9, s. 3.

lawfully convened for a lawful purpose and open to the public, and if such report was fair and accurate and published without malice, and if the publication of the matter complained of was for the public benefit. The protection afforded by the enactment on which this Article is founded is not available as a defence in any proceeding if the plaintiff or prosecutor can shew that the defendant has refused to insert in the newspaper in which the report containing the matter complained of appeared a reasonable letter or document of explanation or contradiction by or on behalf of such plaintiff or prosecutor.

¹ It is a misdemeanor for any person to publish any such report otherwise than in a newspaper, even though the report is fair and accurate and the object of publication is to give information to the public.

ARTICLE 276.

PUBLICATION IN A COURT OF JUSTICE.

It is not a misdemeanor to publish anything whatever in a judicial proceeding before a Court of competent jurisdiction, or in the discharge of any military duty, even if the person publishing knows the matter published to be false, and publishes it in order to injure the person to whom it relates.

Illustrations.

(1.) ² A, before justices of the peace, exhibits articles of the peace against B, containing false and scandalous charges against B, in order to cause B to be bound over to good behaviour. This is not a libel.

(2.) ³ A in an action between himself and B, falsely and maliciously swears an affidavit, charging C with fraud. The affidavit is not a libel.

(4.)¹ A being the military superior of D, and being as such under a military duty to make a report on B's conduct to C, their common superior, makes a report which he knows to be false in order to injure B. The report is not a libel.

ARTICLE 277.

FAIR REPORTS OF PROCEEDINGS OF COURTS.

² The publication of a fair report of the proceedings of a Court of justice is not a libel, merely because it defames the character of any private person; but such a publication may be an offence under Articles 91, 99, 161, or 172.

A report is said to be fair when it is substantially accurate, and when it is either complete or condensed in such a manner as to give a just impression of what took place, but this Article does not extend to comments made by the reporter, or to reports of observations made by persons not entitled to take part in the proceedings.

Reports of ex parte proceedings are within this Article if they are of a judicial nature, and proceedings before a magistrate under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, held with open doors, and with a view to the committal for trial of a suspected person, are judicial.

³ Provided in all the cases aforesaid that the publisher is not actuated in making the publication by any indirect motive.

Illustrations.

(1.)⁴ A publishes in a newspaper a fair report of the examination of a debtor before the registrar of a Bankruptcy Court. The examination contains irrelevant statements defaming B, who is a stranger to the proceedings. This is not a libel on B.

(3.) ¹ A publishes a report of proceedings for perjury against B, and omits certain parts of the cross-examination of the witnesses. This raises a question for the jury whether the effect of the omission is to make the report partial and inaccurate.

(4.) ² A, in the last illustration, begins his report with an account of the proceedings out of which the charge of perjury against B arose, and observes, "Evidence was given by C and D which entirely negatived B's story." This statement is not within the Article.

(5.) ³ A publishes in a newspaper an account of proceedings before a magistrate against B. The report contains a statement by the magistrate's clerk that B's alleged conduct was exceedingly improper under any circumstances. This observation is not within this Article.

(6.) ⁴ A publishes a fair report in a newspaper of a proceeding against B for perjury at a police court, which proceedings ended in the dismissal of the charge against B. This publication is not a libel.

(7.) ⁵ A publishes in a newspaper a fair report of statements of a defamatory kind, made before a magistrate extra-judicially, with a view to asking his advice. This publication may be a libel, as there is no judicial proceeding.

ARTICLE 278.

ARTICLE 279.

OFFENCES AGAINST RIGHTS OF PROPERTY AND RIGHTS ARISING OUT OF CONTRACTS.

The violation of rights of property, and rights arising from contracts, is a crime in the cases specified in this part.

* 3 Hist. Cr. Law, ch. xxviii. 121–176.

¹ This and the following chapter have I fear a somewhat abstract appearance, but it is impossible to understand the provisions of the Larceny Act without a knowledge of the doctrines which it presupposes—that is to say, the doctrine as to the definition of theft, and as to things capable of being stolen. The definition of Such violation may be :

(1.) By taking away property from the owner without his consent

(a.) by violence to his person or habitation;

(b.) without such violence.

(2.) By persuading the owner by fraud to transfer his rights of property.

(3.) By the misappropriation of property entrusted by the owner to the offender.

(4.) By acts calculated to defraud, whether they actually defraud or not; that is to say—

(a.) Forgery.

(b.) Personation.

(c.) Coining and uttering bad money.

(5.) By wilful and malicious mischief done to property.

(6.) By breaches of certain kinds of contract and interference in certain cases with freedom of trade.

ARTICLE 280.

PROPERTY IN MOVEABLE THINGS.

¹ A person who has a right as against the world at large to do with or to any moveable thing anything which the law does not specifically forbid him to do with or to it, and the right to prevent all other persons from doing therewith or thereto anything whatever which they are not specifically authorized to do, either by law or by his consent, is said to be the general owner of that thing, and that thing is said to be his property, although he may have limited the above-mentioned rights respecting it as regards particular persons by contract.

² ARTICLE 281.

POSSESSION.

A moveable thing is said to be in the possession of a person, when the thing is in his power, and he has the right to dispose of it, and this is unintelligible except in relation to the doctrine of property.

son when he is so situated with respect to it that he has the power to deal with it as owner to the exclusion of all other persons, and when the circumstances are such that he may be presumed to intend to do so in case of need.

A moveable thing is in the possession of the husband of any woman, or the master of any servant, who has the custody of it for him, and from whom he can take it at pleasure. The word "servant" here includes any person acting as a servant for any particular purpose or occasion.

The word "custody" means such a relation towards the thing as would constitute possession if the person having custody had it on his own account.

If a servant receives anything for his master from a third person, not being a fellow-servant, he has the possession as distinguished from the custody of it, until he has put it into his master's possession, by putting it into a place or thing belonging to his master, or by some other act of the same sort, whether the servant himself has or has not the custody of that place or thing.

If a servant receives anything belonging to his master from a fellow-servant who has received it from their common master, such thing continues to be in the possession of the master, unless the servant who delivered it delivered it with the intention to pass the property therein to the servant to whom it is delivered, having authority to do so from the master.

If a servant receives anything belonging to his master from a fellow-servant who has received it on the master's account, and has done no act to put it into the master's possession, it is in the possession of the servant who so receives it, and not in his custody merely.

Illustrations.

(1.) ¹ A, the master of a house, gives a dinner party, the plate and other things on the table are in his possession, though from time to time they are in the custody of his guests or servants.

(2.) ² A assigns the goods in his house to trustees for the benefit of his creditors. The trustees leave him undisturbed and do not in any way interfere with the goods. A and not the trustees is in the possession of the goods.

(3.) ¹ A produces a receipt stamp, and gets B to write a receipt on it in A's presence as for money paid by A to B. The stamp is in A's not B's possession.

(4.) ² A buys a bureau from B at a sale with money in a secret drawer, of the existence of which neither A nor B is aware. The money is not in B's possession (though the bureau which contains it is) because B cannot be presumed to intend to act as the owner of it when he discovers it.

(5.) ³ A is clerk to B, a banker, money is paid to A on B's account, A keeps it for a short time, and then puts it into the till. The money is in A's possession till it is put into the till, when it passes into B's possession, though A may have the custody of it.

(6.) ⁴ B leaves a watch with its maker to be regulated. A writes to the maker to send the watch to B at a certain post-office. A then goes to the post-office, and pretending to be B, gets the watch. As soon as the watch reaches the post-office addressed to B, it is in B's possession, as the post-master, as regards the letter and watch, is the servant of the owner.

(7.) ⁵ B being prevented by a crowd from getting near the pay-place at a railway station, hands a sovereign to A, who is close to it, to pay for her ticket, and give her the change. The sovereign is in B's possession, but in A's custody.

(8.) ⁶ B sends his servant A with a cart of B's to fetch coals for B from C. A receives the coals from C, carries them in sacks on his back to the cart, puts them into the cart, and drives it back to B. The cart is throughout in B's possession, but in A's custody. The coals are in A's possession whilst he is carrying them on his back to the cart, but as soon as they are deposited in the cart they are in the possession of B, though both coals and cart continue to be in the custody of A.

(9.) ⁷ A, B's servant, obtains by false pretences B's money from C, another of B's servants. The money after such obtaining is still in B's possession.

(10.) ⁸ A, B's servant, obtains by false pretences from C, B's cashier, the property in coins which belonged to B till C gave them to A. The possession of the coins is in A.

(11.)¹ A, B, and C are all servants to D. D's customers pay money to C, who pays it to A, who pays it to B. B, A, and C, each keep separate accounts of their receipts and payments, so as to be checks on each other. Money of D's paid by C to A is in A's possession, and not merely in his custody.

ARTICLE 282.

SPECIAL OWNER.

² Every person to whom the general owner of a moveable thing has given a right to the possession as against the general owner is said to be the special owner thereof, or to have a special property therein, and such special property is not divested if the special owner parts with the possession under a mistake.

ARTICLE 283.

POSSESSOR SPECIAL OWNER AS AGAINST STRANGER.

Every person who has obtained by any means the possession of any moveable thing is deemed to be the special owner thereof, as against any person who cannot show a better title thereto.

Illustrations.

(1.)³ A finds a bezoar-stone in the street and shows it to B, a jeweller, to ascertain its value. B keeps it. A has a right to the stone as against B.

(2.)⁴ A steals B's watch. C picks A's pocket of the watch. C steals from A.

TAKING AND CARRYING AWAY.

A thing is said to be taken and carried away when every part of it is moved from that specific portion of space which it occupied before it was moved (although the whole of it may not be moved from the whole of the space which it occupied), and when it is severed from any person or thing to which it was attached in such a manner that the taker has, for however short a time, complete control of it. An animal is said to be taken and driven or led away when it is caused to move from the place where it was before.

Illustrations.

(1.)¹ A removes a parcel from one end of a waggon to another. This is a taking and carrying away.

(2.)² A lifts a sword partly out of its scabbard. A has taken and carried away the sword.

(3.)³ A causes a horse to be led out of a stable for him to mount. A has led away the horse.

(4.)⁴ A, a postman, instead of delivering a letter in due course, or bringing it back in his pouch, which would be his duty if he could not deliver it, puts it in his pocket intending to steal it. This is a taking and carrying away.

(5.)⁵ A snatches a diamond earring from a lady's ear, tearing it out of the ear; it drops from his hand into her hair, and is found there by her afterwards. A has taken and carried away the earring.

(6.)⁶ Goods are tied to a string, one end of which is fastened to the bottom of a counter. A takes and carries them as far as the string will permit. A has not carried away the goods.

(7.)⁷ A has gas-pipes in his house running through a meter, such pipes being his property. In order to prevent the gas from passing through the meter he puts a connecting pipe between the pipe leading to, and the pipe leading from, the meter, and so diverts the gas from its proper course. This is a taking and carrying away of the gas.

² R. v. Walsh, 2 Russ. Cr. 153 (from MS. of Bayley, J.). An odd point would arise if the sword and scabbard were merely twisted round in the place which they occupied before they were touched. I suppose this would not be an asportation.

ARTICLE 285.

BAILMENT DEFINED.

When one person delivers, or causes to be delivered, to another any moveable thing in order that it may be kept for the person making the delivery, or that it may be used, gratuitously or otherwise, by the person to whom the delivery is made, or that it may be kept as a pledge by the person to whom delivery is made, or that it may be carried, or that work may be done upon it by the person to whom delivery is made gratuitously or not, and when it is the intention of the parties that the specific thing so delivered, or the article into which it is to be made shall be delivered either to the person making the delivery or to some other person appointed by him to receive it, the person making the delivery is said to bail the thing delivered, the act of delivery is called a bailment; the person making the delivery is called the bailor; the person to whom it is made is called the bailee.¹

OFFENCES RELATING TO PROPERTY COMMITTED BY AND AGAINST MARRIED WOMEN.

² Every married woman, whether married before, on or after 1st January, 1883, has in her own name, against all persons whomsoever, including her husband, the same remedies and redress by way of criminal proceedings for the protection and security of her own separate property as if such property belonged to her as a feme sole, provided that no criminal proceeding can be taken by any wife against her husband by virtue of the Married Women's Property Act, 1882, while they are living together as to or concerning any pro-

THINGS CAPABLE OR NOT OF BEING STOLEN.

ARTICLE 286.

THINGS CAPABLE OF BEING STOLEN.

THINGS are or not capable of being stolen according to the provisions contained in this chapter.

ARTICLE 287.

MOVEABLE THINGS—LAND—THINGS FIXED TO LAND.

²All moveable things are capable of being stolen, whether they are naturally moveable or whether they were, before being severed therefrom, a part of, or built upon, or growing out of, or fixed in a permanent manner to, the soil of the earth.

The soil of the earth itself cannot be stolen, by removing landmarks, building so as to make permanent encroachments, or other means of the same kind.

Things growing out of, built upon, permanently attached to, or forming part of the soil, cannot be stolen whilst they continue to be so attached to it or to form part of it, or by the act of severance, ³ except in the cases provided for in Articles 326, 327 (c), (d), (e), and 328 (h), (i), (k), (l).

TAME ANIMALS AND WILD ANIMALS IN CAPTIVITY.

¹ R. v. Watts, Dear. 326.

² R. v. Morrison, Bell, C. C. 158. It has been held that a railway ticket is capable of being stolen: R. v. Boulton, 1 Den. 508. In R. v. Kilham (L. R. 1 C. C. R. 264) it is said that "the reasons for this decision do not very clearly appear." It is, indeed, very hard to reconcile the decision with the established principle as to "choses in action," for what is a railway ticket except evidence of a contract by the railway to carry the holder?

³ "Water is a moveable wandering thing, and must of necessity continue common by the law of nature, so that I can only have a temporary transient usufructuary property therein" (Blackstone, 1 Steph. Com. 173, 5th ed.). There are decisions as to stealing water from pipes, but I cannot find them. One or two, which I think were not reported, have within the last few years been given at the Leeds Assizes.

The judges were of opinion (in 1818) that ferrets though tame and saleable could not be the subject of larceny." I know not whether a ferret would fall within (b) or not. It is necessary to mark the distinction between animals which are the subject of larceny at common law and those which are the subject of larceny by statute, because it is recognised in several statutes. WILD ANIMALS LIVING AND DEAD.

³ Living wild animals in the enjoyment of their natural liberty, whether they have escaped from confinement or not, are not capable of being stolen although they may be game, and although it may be an offence to pursue or kill them;⁴ but the dead body of such an animal is capable of being stolen, and it becomes the property of the person on whose ground the animal dies.⁵

THINGS OF NO VALUE.

CHAPTER XXXV.

* THEFT IN GENERAL.

ARTICLE 295.

DEFINITION OF THEFT.

¹THEFT is the act of dealing, from any motive whatever, unlawfully and without claim of right with anything capable of being stolen, in any of the ways in which theft can be committed, with the intention of permanently converting that thing to the use of any person other than the general or special owner thereof. Provided that the offences defined in Articles 339 and 340 do not amount to theft.

The ways in which theft can be committed are specified in Articles 296 to 300, both inclusive. In those articles the word "convert" means such a conversion as is herein-before specified.

A claim of right may be founded on a mistake of law.

Illustrations.

(2.) ³A, a post-office clerk, drops two letters down a water-closet in order that a mistake which he had made in sorting them might not be discovered. A steals the letters.

(3.) ⁴A, a servant, gets B's letters from the post-office, and destroys one of them written to B by C, A's mistress, making inquiries of B as to A's character, delivering the rest. A steals the letter.

(5.) ¹ A, without his master's leave, takes his master's corn to feed his master's horses. This was theft till the passing of 26 & 27 Vict. c. 103.

(6.) ² A gleans corn, not having, but believing himself to have, a legal right to do so. This is not theft.

(7.) ³ B, a gamekeeper, takes snares set by A, a poacher, and a dead pheasant caught therein. A, honestly believing that the snares and pheasant were his property, and that he had a legal right to them, forces B by threats to return them. This is not robbery, and if no violence was used would not be theft.

(8.) ⁴ A, believing that B owes him £11, and seeing B receive £7, knocks down B and tries to get the £7 out of his pocket, saying "Pay me the eleven sovereigns you owe me." This is not robbery, and if no violence were used would not be theft.

(9.) ⁵ The ore in a mine belongs to adventurers, and is to be excavated by tributers. One set of tributers are to be paid a larger sum in the pound than the other set for the ore excavated by them. The ore excavated by each set is placed in a heap by itself. A, one of the tributers, moves a quantity of ore from the heap to be paid for at the lower to the heap to be paid for at the higher rate. A has not stolen the ore.

(10.) ⁶ Workmen in the glove trade are paid according to the number of gloves finished by them. A (a workman) takes gloves from his master's warehouse and puts them in the place where the newly finished gloves are put to be counted, so as to increase the apparent number of newly finished gloves, and with intent fraudulently to obtain payment for the gloves so removed from the warehouse. This is not theft.

(11.) ⁷ B uses many bags in his trade, and is supplied with them by C. A, B's servant, takes old bags supplied by C to B from B's house, and puts them in a place outside B's house, where new bags were habitually put by C. C, by concert with A, claims payment for the bags from B as for bags newly supplied. A is guilty of theft, and C is an accessory before the fact.

without the consent of the owner (even if he expects and affords facilities for the commission of the offence), anything which is not in the possession of the thief at the time when the offence is committed,¹ whether it is in the possession of any other person or not.

If the thing taken and carried away is on the body or in the immediate presence of the person from whom it is taken, and if the taking is by actual violence intentionally used to overcome or to prevent his resistance, or by threats of injury to his person, property, or reputation, the offence is robbery.

²If the thing taken and carried away is for the first time rendered capable of being stolen by the act of taking and carrying away, and if the taking and carrying away is one continuous act, such taking and carrying away is not theft (except in the cases provided for in Articles 326, 327 (c), (d), (e), (f), 328 (h), (i), (k), (l). It seems that the taking and carrying away are deemed to be continuous if the intention to carry away after a reasonable time exists at the time of the taking.

(2.) ⁴A, a trespasser, finds a dead rabbit lying in a wood, of which he is not the owner, and converts it. This is theft.

(4.) ⁶A finds iron dropped from some canal boat or other, at the bottom of a canal, from which the water has been let off, and converts it. This is theft.

(5.) ⁷A instigates B, C's servant, to help A to steal money in C's desk.

¹ Property in no one's possession is said to be constructively in the possession of its owner, the object of this fiction is to satisfy a supposed necessity for showing that the taking in theft must be a taking out of some one's possession.

(7.) ² A, at a mock auction, knocks down goods to B, who has not bid for them, pretending that she has. On B's offering to go, A says she shall not be allowed to go unless she pays for the goods knocked down to her, which she does. This is theft at least, and perhaps robbery.

(8.) ³ A snatches at a sword worn by B. A and B struggle for the sword, and A gets it. This is robbery.

(9.) ⁴ A, in cutting the string by which a basket is tied, with intent to steal it, accidentally cuts the wrist of the owner, who at the same moment tries to seize and keep it. The cut causes the owner to withdraw her hand, and the thief gets the basket. This is theft, but not robbery, because the actual violence was not intentional.

THEFT BY A SERVANT. EMBEZZLEMENT.

Theft may be committed by converting, without the consent of the owner, anything of which the offender has received the custody as the servant of the owner, or in order that the thing may be used by the offender for some special temporary purpose in the presence or under the immediate control of the owner or his servant.

³ When a clerk, or servant, or person employed in the capacity of a clerk or servant, converts anything received by him from another person for his master or employer, he is deemed to have stolen it, but his offence is commonly called embezzlement, and is distinguished from theft for the purposes and in the manner mentioned in Chapter XXXVI.

THEFT BY A FALSE PRETENCE.

Theft may be committed by fraudulently obtaining from the owner a transfer of the possession of a thing, the owner intending to reserve to himself his property therein, and the offender intending, at the time when the possession is obtained, to convert the thing without the owner's consent to such conversion.

Illustrations.

(1.) ¹ A fraudulently persuades B to allow A to take two silver ewers to shew to A's master, to choose one if he pleased. A sells the ewers and keeps the money. This is theft.

(2.) ² A, by pretending to be B, fraudulently obtains B's goods from C, a carrier, to whom they were entrusted by B. This is theft, as the carrier transferred the possession only.

(3.) ³ A fraudulently bargains with B for the purchase by A of goods for ready money, and fraudulently induces B to let A have the goods, pretending that he is then about to pay B the price. A then takes away the goods, and does not pay the price. This is theft, as in such cases the purchaser does not mean to transfer the property till the money is paid.

(4.) ⁴ A fraudulently obtains goods and money from a shopkeeper by pretending to give him diamonds for them. This is not theft, as the shopkeeper means to transfer the property in the goods.

(5.) ⁵ A fraudulently induces B to give her ten sovereigns to conjure with, promising to bring back the ten sovereigns and 170*l.*, to which A says B is entitled. A carries off the ten sovereigns. If the ten sovereigns were to be returned, this is theft. If not, it is not theft, but is obtaining money by false pretences.

(6.) ⁶ A, B's wife, by a forged order gets money standing to B's credit at B's bankers. This is not theft from the bankers, as the cashier had a general authority to part with the banker's money, and meant to do so.

THEFT BY TAKING ADVANTAGE OF A MISTAKE.

Theft may be committed by ¹ converting property which the general or special owner has given to the offender under a mistake which the offender has not caused, but which he knows to be such at the time when it is made, and of which he fraudulently takes advantage.

But it is doubtful whether it is theft fraudulently to convert property given to the person converting it under a mistake of which that person was not aware when he received it.

Illustrations.

(1.) ¹ A having to receive ten shillings from a post-office savings bank, produces to the clerk a warrant for that amount. The clerk referring by mistake to another letter of advice, puts on the counter 8*l.* 16*s.* 10*d.*, which A takes away. This is theft.

(2.) ² A gives a cabman a sovereign for a shilling. The cabman, seeing that it is a sovereign, keeps it. This is theft of the sovereign.

(3.) ³ A receives a letter containing a cheque. The letter is addressed, and the cheque is payable, to another person of the same name as A. A receives the letter innocently, but, on discovering the mistake made, converts the cheque to his own use. This is not theft.

I am unable to distinguish these cases from those on which Illustration (3) is founded. It is remarkable that in the judgments, and apparently in the argument (which is not reported), in R. v. Middleton, no notice is taken of any of these cases, nor are the cases about the bureaux referred to in R. v. Davies, which was decided, without argument, solely on the authority of R. v. Mucklow. Cartwright v. Green is not referred to in R. v. Mucklow, which was decided before Merry v. Green. Merry v. Green does not refer to R. v. Mucklow. The result is that the cases appear to contradict each other.

BY AND FROM WHOM THEFT MAY BE COMMITTED.

Such a conversion is not theft.

(b.) if he does not intend to convert the goods at the time when he takes possession of them, whether he has such knowledge or grounds of belief or not at any time.

If the circumstances are such as to lead the finder reasonably to believe that the owner intended to abandon his property in the goods, the finder is not guilty of theft in converting them.

In some of the cases on this subject a distinction is taken between property absolutely lost, and property only mislaid: see R. v. West, Dear. 402. It would appear, however, that the only real difference is that in the latter case the finder must know that the owner may be found. The distinction was useful as a step towards modifying the generality of the rule laid down by the old text writers: see e.g. 1 Hawkins, P. C. 142. It is not theft to persuade any person by fraud to transfer the property of any chattel to any person, though such an act may be an offence under Chapter XL.

ARTICLE 306.

TEMPORARY TAKING IS NOT THEFT.

¹ It is not theft to deal with anything in any of the ways in which theft can be committed with the intention only to obtain the temporary use thereof, and not with the intention to convert it permanently to the use of some person other than the owner; but if a thing is so dealt with with the intention of totally depriving the owner of his property in it, the returning of the goods after a temporary use of them will not prevent the act from amounting to larceny.

EVIDENCE AS TO THEFT.

The inference that property alleged to have been stolen has in fact been stolen may be drawn from other facts than the fact that it is identified by a witness.

The inference that an accused person has stolen property, or has received it knowing it to be stolen, may be drawn from the fact that it is found in his possession after being stolen, and that he gives no satisfactory account of the way in which it came into his possession.

As to the rule as to recent possession of stolen goods, many cases have been decided on the subject (see 2 Russ. Cr. 337-42), but they seem to me to come to nothing but this, that every case depends on its own circumstances, and that the nature of the thing stolen, the length of the interval between the theft and the possession, and the behaviour of the accused may all vary the force of the evidence indefinitely. The unexplained possession of a single stolen coin by a shopkeeper doing a large business in whose till it was found ten minutes after the theft, missed from the warehouse and the pepper on A was not otherwise identified than by being shewn to be similar to that in the warehouse.

would prove nothing. The finding of a lost will ten years after its loss, locked up in the strong box of a careful person deeply interested in its temporary concealment, and peculiarly jealous of his strong box, would prove a great deal. Between these extremes there may be infinite degrees in the weight of such evidence.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

¹ EMBEZZLEMENT BY CLERKS AND SERVANTS.

ARTICLE 309.

EMBEZZLEMENT BY CLERKS AND SERVANTS—WHO ARE SERVANTS.

² WHEN a clerk or servant, or person employed in the capacity of a clerk or servant, commits theft by converting any chattel, money, or valuable security delivered to or received, or taken into possession by him for or in the name or on account³ of his master or employer, his offence is called embezzlement.

Such a conversion is not a criminal offence (except in the cases hereinafter specially provided for) unless the person who converts stands to the owner of the property converted in the relation of a clerk or servant, or person employed in the capacity of a clerk or servant.

⁴ It is a question for a jury whether a person accused of embezzlement is a clerk or servant or not.

⁵ A clerk or servant is a person bound either by an express contract of service or by conduct⁶ implying such a contract to obey the orders and submit to the control of his master in the transaction of the business which it is his duty as such clerk or servant to transact.

A man may be a clerk or servant

⁷ although he was appointed or elected to the employment in respect of which he is a clerk or servant by some other person than the master whose orders he is bound to obey;

⁴ Bramwell, B., doubted as to this in Walker's Case, D. & B. 602; but see R. v. Negus, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 34; R. v. Tite, L. & C. 33; R. v. May, L. & C. 13.

² although he is a member of any co-partnership, or is one of two or more beneficial owners of the ³ property embezzled ;

⁴ although he is the clerk or servant of more masters than one ;

⁵ although he acts as clerk or servant only occasionally, or only on the particular occasion on which his offence is committed.

⁶ But an agent or other person who undertakes to transact business for another, without undertaking to obey his orders, is not necessarily a servant because he receives a salary, or because he has undertaken not to accept employment of a similar kind from any one else, or because he is under a duty (statutory or otherwise) to account for money or other property received by him.

It seems that in order that a clerk or servant may be within the meaning of this Article it is necessary that the objects of his service should not be criminal, but a man may be such a clerk or servant although the objects of his service are in part illegal as being contrary to public policy.

(3.)¹ A took orders for B and collected money for him according to a journey book given to him by B, shewing the sums to be received and the persons from whom they were due. A was paid by a commission. A was clerk to B, though he was principally employed by C, D, and others.

(4.)² A was employed by B to go on messages when A had nothing else to do, and B was to give A whatever B chose. A was B's servant.

(5.)³ A, a drover, was employed by B, a farmer, on one single occasion to drive a cow and calf to a person to whom they were sold, and to bring back the money. A was B's servant.

(6.)⁴ A, the master of a charity school, on one particular occasion consents to get a subscription to the funds of the school, at the request of the treasurer of the committee of management by which A was appointed, and which managed the school. It was no part of A's duty as master to collect any subscriptions. In getting the subscription A was not the servant of B.

(7.)⁵ A, a drover, is employed by B, a grazier, to drive oxen to London, to sell them on the road, if possible, and to take those remaining unsold to a salesman in Smithfield. A is not B's servant.

(8.)⁶ B engaged A, who kept a refreshment house at Birkenhead, to get orders for manure manufactured by B. A was not bound to give any definite amount of time or labour to the purpose. The manure was sent to stores under A's control, and of which he was tenant, though B paid the rent, and was forwarded by A to the customers. A was paid £1 a year salary and a commission. A was B's agent, not his servant.

(9.)⁷ A was engaged by B to solicit orders. He was to be paid by commission. He was at liberty to apply for orders whenever he thought most convenient, but was not to employ himself for any other person than B. A was not B's servant.

⁸ R. v. Tyree, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 177. A treasurer would appear, as a rule, to be rather a banker than a servant, but every case depends on its special circumstances. In R. v. Murphy, 4 Cox, C. C. 101, the prisoner was both clerk and treasurer (see the explanation of this case given in R. v. Tyree). In R. v. Welch (1 Den. 199), the circumstances were very similar to those of R. v. Tyree, and Coleridge, J., appears to have been satisfied that the prisoner was a servant, and did not reserve the point. It is singular that this case is not referred to in R. v. Tyree.

not the servant of the trustees of the society, though by sect. 22 he is bound before seven days after being required by the trustees (in whom the money is vested by sect. 18) to account to the trustees.

(11.)¹ A parish clerk is not a servant, because he is not under the orders of any particular person.

(12.)² The chamberlain of the commons of a corporation chosen and sworn in at a court, but whose duty it is to superintend the commons, and to receive certain duties which he kept till the end of the year, when his accounts were audited and the balance paid over to his successor, is not a servant, because he holds a distinct office, and is not bound to pay at any time.

(13.)³ The servant of a trade union may be convicted of the embezzlement of its funds, although some of its rules are void as being in restraint of trade.

(14.)⁴ The servant of a society, the members of which took an unlawful oath under 37 Geo. 3, c. 123, and 52 Geo. 3, c. 104, cannot be convicted of embezzlement for misappropriating the funds of the society.

ARTICLE 310.

THE PROPERTY EMBEZZLED MUST BE THE MASTER'S.

The offence of embezzlement cannot be committed by the appropriation of property which does not belong to the master of the alleged offender, although such property may have been obtained by such alleged offender by the improper use of the property entrusted to him by his master, but property which does belong to the master of the offender may be embezzled, although the offender received it in an irregular way.

³ R. v. Stainer, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 230. In the argument on this case both sides assumed that if the society was criminal the conviction could not be sustained. Cockburn, C.J., said, "It is unnecessary to consider how far the criminal purposes of a society might affect its title to property." As stolen property may be stolen from the thief who stole it (1 Hale, P. C. 507), the question might deserve consideration if it ever arose. R. v. Hunt, in the next illustration, is in point, but it is only a nisi prius decision.

registrar. A received certain money and appropriated it, the money being the money of the registrar and not B's whose servant (if any one's) A was. This was not embezzlement.

(2.)¹ A railway company contracted with B to deliver the railway's coals in the railway's carts, B finding horses and carmen, but the terms of the contract were such as to make the carmen, after receiving the money, answerable to the railway. A, a carman, received money for coals and appropriated it. This was not embezzlement, as the money was not the money of B, but of the railway company.

(3.)² A, a bargeman, was forbidden by B, his master, to take a cargo on his barge on part of a particular voyage. A took the cargo, appropriated the freight to himself, and denied the receipt of it when questioned by his master. The person from whom he took the cargo and freight knew of no one in the transaction except A. This was not embezzlement, as the freight did not belong to B.

(4.)³ A, intrusted with a cheque for B, gets it cashed by a friend, and not, as was the regular course, at a bank, and appropriates the proceeds. This is embezzlement.

ARTICLE 311.

DISTINCTION BETWEEN EMBEZZLEMENT AND OTHER KINDS OF THEFT.

The distinction between embezzlement by a clerk or servant and other kinds of theft is, that in other kinds of theft the property stolen is taken out of the possession of the owner, whereas, in embezzlement by a clerk or servant the property embezzled is converted by the offender whilst it is in the offender's possession on account of his master and before that possession has been changed into a mere custody.

delivers to the customer both pickles and treacle, and keeps the price of the treacle. This is a theft of the treacle, as A had no authority to deliver it, but it is not an embezzlement of the price, as it was not received on B's account, but in fraud.

(2.) ¹ A, a clerk to a navy tailor goes on board a man-of-war with clothes delivered to him by his master to sell to the marine artillerymen on board. He afterwards enters as a seaman on another ship, carrying off the clothes. A commits theft, and not embezzlement.

(3.) ² A, the manager of a branch bank, has in his office a safe, the property of the bank, and of which the bank manager keeps the key at the head office. A's duty is to put money received during the day into this safe. He takes part of it out of the safe and applies it to his own purposes. This is theft, and not embezzlement.

(4.) ³ A's duty is to get bills accepted and discounted for his master. A having got a bill accepted for his master, lays it with other bills on his master's desk. He then takes it from his master's desk, gets it cashed, and appropriates the money. This is theft.

(5.) ⁴ A receives from his master, B, dock warrants enabling him to get property from the docks, and is induced by B to carry the property to London. A on the road appropriates part of the property. This is theft.

(6.) ⁵ A, B's servant, is sent by B to fetch 240 quarters of oats, which B has purchased, and which are lying on a vessel in the Thames. Whilst the oats are being measured into B's barge, A causes five quarters to be put up in sacks and set aside, the rest being loose. A then sells the sacks of oats for his own benefit from the vessel, and before they were put into the barge.⁶ This is theft.

(7.) ⁷ A, B's servant, gets plate for his master from a silversmith, puts it in B's plate-chest, and then takes it out and appropriates it. This is theft. [⁸ If he appropriates it before he puts it into the plate chest, he commits embezzlement.]

(8.) ⁹ A, B's servant, receives from C, a fellow-servant, £3 of B's money, and appropriates 10s. to his own use. This is not embezzlement [but is theft.

ARTICLE 312.

EVIDENCE AS TO EMBEZZLEMENT.

² The inference that a prisoner has embezzled property by fraudulently converting it to his own use, may be drawn from the fact that he has not paid the money or delivered the property in due course to the owner, or from the fact that he has not accounted for the money or other property which he has received, or from the fact that he has falsely accounted for it, or from the fact that he has absconded, or

³ from the fact that upon the examination of his accounts there appeared a general deficiency unaccounted for ;

² These facts are the common evidence of embezzlement given in every instance, and require no illustration. That the non-payment is only by way of delay, the false accounting a mistake, &c., are common topics of defence.

³ R. v. Grove, 1 Moody, 447 ; 2 Russ. Cr. 459-60. The authority of this case, decided by eight judges to seven, has been doubted. See R. v. Moah, Dear. 626, 639 : see, too, R. v. Lambert, 2 Cox, C. C. 309 ; R. v. Lloyd Jones, 8 C. & P. 288 ; R. v. Chapman, 1 C. & K. 119 ; R. v. King, 12 Cox, C. C. 73.

⁴ R. v. Hodgson, 3 C. & P. 422 ; R. v. Winnall, 5 Cox, C. C. 326. Mr. Greaves' note on this case disapproves of the summing-up of Erle, J., on what appears to me to be a misconception of its purport. Mr. Greaves' view that the fraudulent conversion constitutes the offence, and that everything else is only evidence of it is obviously correct ; but I think that Erle, J., did not mean to say anything inconsistent with this. Wilful false accounting is now a substantive offence. See 38 & 39 Vict. c. 24, s. 2, and Article 352, post.

ROBBERY.

EVERY one is guilty of felony and is liable upon conviction thereof, as a maximum punishment, to be kept in penal servitude in the case of the offences defined in clauses (a.) and (b.) for life, in the case of the offence defined in clause (c.) for fourteen years, and in the case of the offence defined in clause (d.) for five years, who does any of the following things (that is to say),

² R. v. Robertson, L. & C. 483. In that case it was held that a policeman who said he would lock a man up for speaking to a prostitute unless he received five shillings used a "menace," notwithstanding his having no power to do so.

³ 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 49. There is no similar section in the Act relating to offences against the person (see Article 234 (a.)), or in the Act relating to malicious injuries to property, from which a. ii. and a. iii. are taken. I think, however, both on authority and on principle, that those clauses would be construed as if there were. The language of the sections on which this Article is founded has been condensed and rearranged, but it will be found on examination that the Article accurately represents the seven sections which it embodies. As to threats to publish libels with intent to extort see Art. 278, p. 207.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

ARTICLE 315.

DEFINITIONS.

IN this chapter the following words are used in the following senses:—

² Night means the interval between nine of the clock at night and six of the morning.

House means a permanent building in which the owner, or the tenant, or any member of the family habitually sleeps at night.

⁴ A building occupied with and within the same curtilage with any dwelling-house, is deemed to be part of the said dwelling-house if there is between such building and dwelling-house a communication either immediate or by means of a covered and inclosed passage leading from the one to the other, but not otherwise.

The word "break" means

³ The cases and authorities on this subject are collected in Archbold, 518-520, but there is so little principle in the matter, and each case depends so much on its peculiar circumstances, that I have not thought it advisable to give illustrations, building itself, or the opening by any means whatever (including lifting, in the case of things kept in their places by their own weight) of any door, window, shutter, cellar flap, or other thing intended to cover openings to the house, or to give passage from one part of it to another, and getting down the chimney;

(b.) obtaining an entrance into the house by any threat or artifice used for that purpose, or by collusion with any person in the house.

The word "enter" means the entrance into the house of any part of the offender's body, or of any instrument held in his hand for the purpose of intimidating any person in the house, or of removing any goods, but does not include the entrance of part of an instrument used to break the house open.

Illustration.

ROBBING PLACES OF WORSHIP—BURGLARY.

Every one commits felony, and is liable upon conviction thereof to penal servitude for life as a maximum punishment, who

(a.) ² breaks and enters any church, chapel, meeting-house, or other place of divine worship, and commits any felony therein; or thereof, to a maximum punishment of fourteen years penal servitude, who breaks and enters and commits any felony in any dwelling-house, or any building being within the curtilage of a dwelling-house and occupied therewith (but not being part thereof within Article 315), or any schoolhouse, shop, warehouse, or counting-house.

ARTICLE 318.

ENTERING DWELLING-HOUSE WITH INTENT.

¹ Every one commits felony, and is liable upon conviction thereof to seven years penal servitude as a maximum punishment, who breaks and enters any of the buildings mentioned in Articles 316 or 317, or who by night enters any dwelling-house with intent in either case to commit felony therein.

ARTICLE 319.

BREAKING OUT AFTER COMMITTING FELONY.

² Every one who, being in any of the buildings mentioned in Articles 316 or 317, commits a felony therein, and breaks out of the same, commits felony, and is liable to the same punishment as if he had broken in and committed felony therein. If such building is a dwelling-house, and the offence is committed at night, the offender commits burglary.

Every one who enters any dwelling-house with intent to commit a felony therein, and breaks out of the same by night, is guilty of burglary.

ARTICLE 320.

BEING FOUND IN POSSESSION OF HOUSEBREAKING INSTRUMENTS.

³ Every one commits a misdemeanor, and is liable for the first offence to a maximum punishment of five, or if he has been previously convicted of felony or of such misdemeanor, of ten years penal servitude ;

CHAPTER XXXIX.

PUNISHMENTS FOR STEALING PARTICULAR THINGS AND RECEIVING GOODS UNLAWFULLY OBTAINED.

PUNISHMENT FOR STEALING THINGS FOR WHICH NO SPECIAL PUNISHMENT IS PROVIDED.

² EVERY one commits felony and is liable upon conviction thereof to a maximum punishment of five years penal servitude who steals anything capable of being stolen, and for the stealing of which no specific punishment is hereinafter provided.

If the conviction takes place after a previous conviction for any misdemeanor indictable under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, or

If the conviction takes place after two summary convictions under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, or 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, or any Act mentioned in the footnote hereto, the maximum punishment is increased to seven years penal servitude.

ARTICLE 322.

KILLING ANIMALS WITH INTENT TO STEAL EQUIVALENT TO STEALING.

² 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 4, S. W. Thefts falling under this Article appear to be the "simple larceny" referred to in 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 33 and 36 (Article 328 (a.) and (b.)). Hale means by "simple larceny" larceny without violence.

³ 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, ss. 7, 8, 9, S. W. The statutes are 7 & 8 Geo. 4, cc. 29, 30; 9 Geo. 4, cc. 55, 56; 10 & 11 Vict. c. 82; 11 & 12 Vict. c. 59; 14 & 15 Vict. c. 92. These are earlier Acts on the same subjects as the two Consolidation Acts,

ARTICLE 323.

STEALING AND CONCEALING VALUABLE SECURITIES.

¹ Every one who steals, or for any fraudulent purpose destroys, cancels, or obliterates the whole or any part of any ² valuable security, other than a document of title to land, commits felony of the same nature and in the same degree, and punishable in the same manner as if he had stolen any chattel of the like value with the share, interest, or deposit to which the security so stolen may relate, or with the money due on the security so stolen or secured thereby and remaining unsatisfied, or with the value of the goods or other valuable thing represented, mentioned, or referred to in or by the security.

Provided that no person who commits any offence against this Article or clause (a.) of the next succeeding Article, is liable to be convicted of any such offence by any evidence whatever in respect of any act done by him, if previously to being charged with such offence, he first discloses such act on oath in consequence of any compulsory process of any Court which, on the 6th of May, 1861, was a court of law or equity, in any action, suit, or proceeding bonâ fide instituted by any party aggrieved, or if he first discloses the same in any compulsory examination or deposition before any Court upon the hearing of any matter in bankruptcy or insolvency.

² Sect. 1. "Valuable security" includes any order, Exchequer acquittance, or other security whatsoever entitling or evidencing the title of any person or body corporate to any share or interest in any public stock or fund, whether of the United Kingdom, or of Great Britain, or of Ireland, or of any foreign state, or in any fund of any body corporate, company, or society, whether within the United Kingdom or in any foreign state or country, or to any deposit in any bank, and also includes any debenture, deed, bond, bill, note, warrant, order, or other security whatsoever for money, or for payment of money, whether of the United Kingdom, or of Great Britain, or of Ireland, or of any foreign state, and any document of title to lands or goods as defined in Article 327, note 3.

THEFTS PUNISHABLE WITH PENAL SERVITUDE FOR LIFE.

Every one commits felony and is liable upon conviction thereof to penal servitude for life as a maximum punishment, and in respect of the offences defined in clause (b.), to a maximum alternative term of imprisonment with hard labour for four years, who does any of the following things (that is to say):

(a.) ¹ who, either during the life of the testator, or after his death, steals, or for any fraudulent purpose destroys, cancels, obliterates, or conceals the whole or any part of any will, codicil, or other testamentary instrument, whether it relates to real or personal estate, or to both;

(b.) ² or who steals a post letter-bag, or a ³ post letter from a post letter-bag, or from a post office, or from an office of the post office, or from a mail;

² 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 36, ss. 27, 28, for punishments, ss. 41, 42 (S.), and for definitions, s. 47.

³ "Post letter" means any letter or packet transmitted by the post under the authority of the Postmaster-General from the time of its being delivered to a post office letter-carrier, or other person authorized to receive letters, to the time of its being delivered to the person to whom it is addressed, or to his house or office, or to his servant or agent, or other person considered to be authorized to receive the letter, according to the usual manner of delivering that person's letters. A letter not posted in the proper course, but put amongst the letters so posted for a sorter to sort is not a post letter. R. v. Shepherd, Dear. 606.

"Post letter-bag" includes a mail bag, or box, or package or parcel or other envelope or covering in which post letters are conveyed, whether it contains post letters or not.

"Mail" includes every conveyance by which post letters are carried, every person or horse employed in conveying or delivering post letters, every vessel employed by or under the Post-office or the Admiralty for the transmission of post letters, or not regularly so employed but under contract for the conveyance of post letters, and every ship of war or vessel in the service of Her Majesty so employed.

"Valuable security" is defined in sect. 47 in nearly the same terms as in sect. 1 of the Larceny Act: see above. The only difference of much importance is that the definition in the Post Office Act includes any warrant or order for the delivery or transfer of any goods or valuable thing (s. 47).

or who stops a mail with intent to rob or search the same ;

(c.) ¹ or who secretes, embezzles, or runs away with any of the things mentioned below, ² or any part of any such thing, being an officer or servant of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, or of the Bank of Ireland, and being intrusted with any such thing lodged or deposited with the said governor and company, ³ or with him as an officer or servant of the said governor and company.

ARTICLE 325.

THEFTS PUNISHABLE WITH PENAL SERVITUDE FOR FOURTEEN YEARS.

Every one commits felony, and is liable, upon conviction thereof, to a maximum punishment of fourteen years penal servitude, who does any of the following things (that is to say) :

(a.) ⁴ who steals any horse, mare, gelding, colt, filly, bull, cow, ox, heifer, calf, ram, ewe, sheep, or lamb, or wilfully kills any such animal with intent to steal the carcass, skin, or any part thereof ; or

(b.) ⁵ who steals any chattel, money, or valuable security from the person of another ; or

(c.) ⁶ who steals in any dwelling-house any chattel, money, or valuable security, if the value of the property stolen is in the whole £5 or more, or if the offender puts any one, being in such dwelling-house, in bodily fear by any menace or threat ; or

(i.) ⁷ who, being employed in the public service of Her Majesty, or being a constable or other person employed in the police of any county, city, borough, district, or place whatsoever, steals, embezzles, or in any manner fraudulently applies for his own benefit, or for any purpose except the public service, the whole or any part of any chattel, money,

THEFTS PUNISHABLE WITH PENAL SERVITUDE FOR SEVEN YEARS.

THEFTS PUNISHABLE WITH PENAL SERVITUDE FOR FIVE YEARS.

Every one commits felony, and is liable upon conviction thereof to a maximum punishment of five years penal servitude, who does any of the following things (that is to say):

(a.) ² who steals or for any fraudulent purpose destroys, cancels, obliterates, or conceals the whole or any part of any ³ document of title to lands; or

² Any record, writ, return, panel, process, interrogatory, deposition, affidavit, rule, order, or warrant of attorney. Any original document whatsoever belonging to any Court of record, or relating to any matter civil or criminal begun, depending, or terminated in any such Court. Any bill, petition, answer, interrogatory, deposition, affidavit, order or decree, or any original document whatsoever of or belonging to any Court of Equity, or relating to any cause or matter begun, depending, or terminated in any such Court. Any original document in anywise relating to the business of any office or employment under Her Majesty, and being or remaining in any office appertaining to any Court of Justice, or in any of Her Majesty's castles, palaces or houses, or in any government or public office.

³ 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 31, S. W. as in case of simple larceny. The words "burial ground" were added to do away with a doubt expressed by Baron Bramwell (R. v. Jones, D. & B. 558) as to whether a churchyard was a "public place" within 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 44. The other judges did not share this doubt. The present enactment does not absolutely remove it, as there are many churchyards which are not burial grounds. However, the case of R. v. Jones distinctly decided the point.

⁴ "Lead, iron, copper, brass, or other metal."

⁵ 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 32, S. W. The section is re-arranged for the sake of brevity, and the word "grow" substituted for "grows" to meet the grammar. The change also represents the sense, for it has been held that in estimating the damage done the value of several trees injured at the same time may be put together: R. v. Shepherd, L. R. 1 C. C. ³ Every one who commits any of the offences specified in clauses (c.), (d.), or (e.), after being previously convicted of any misdemeanor indictable under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, or after two previous summary convictions under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, or c. 97, or any Act mentioned in note (2) to Article 321, is liable to a maximum punishment of seven years penal servitude.

ARTICLE 327A.

THEFT PUNISHABLE WITH TWO YEARS IMPRISONMENT.

⁴ Every one commits felony and is liable on conviction thereof to two years hard labour as a maximum punishment who steals or severs with intent to steal the ore of any metal or any lapis calaminaris, manganese, or mundick, or any wad, black cawke, or black lead, or any coal or cannel coal from any mine, bed, or vein thereof respectively.

³ 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 8, S. W., makes this provision as to all offences punishable under the Act as simple larceny. The offences in question are created by ss. 26, 31, 32, 33, 36. The case of a conviction of one of these offences after a previous conviction for felony is provided for, I suppose, by 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28, s. 11. See Article 19, ante.

CHAPTER XL.

¹ OBTAINING PROPERTY BY FALSE PRETENCES AND OTHER CRIMINAL FRAUDS AND DEALINGS WITH PROPERTY.

ARTICLE 329.

OBTAINING GOODS, ETC., BY FALSE PRETENCES.

EVERY one commits a misdemeanor, and is liable upon conviction thereof to five years penal servitude as a maximum punishment, who

(a.) ² by any false pretence obtains from any other person any chattel, money, or valuable security with intent to defraud, or who,

(b.) ³ with intent to defraud or injure any other person by any false pretence, fraudulently causes or induces any other person to ⁴ execute any valuable security, or to write, impress, or affix his name, or the name of any other person,⁵ upon any paper or parchment, in order that the same may afterwards be made or converted into, or used or dealt with as, a valuable security.

It is not an offence to obtain by false pretences any chattel which is not the subject of larceny at common law, but it is immaterial whether such a chattel so obtained is or is not in existence at the time when the false pretence is made if the thing when made is obtained by the false pretence.

It is not an offence to obtain credit in a partnership account by false pretences as to the amount which a partner is entitled to charge against the partnership funds.

² 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 88, S., as explained by the cases.

⁴ Make, accept, endorse, or destroy the whole or any part of.

(1.) ¹ A obtains two pointers worth £5 each by a false pretence. This is not an offence within this Article.

(2.) ² A orders a van from B, and gets it made and delivered by falsely pretending to be agent to a company. This is an offence, although the van was not in existence when the pretence was made.

(3.) ³ A travels as agent for his partners, and obtains commission from them by falsely pretending he has received orders. His commission would form a charge on the partnership funds. This is not an offence within this Article.

ARTICLE 330.

DEFINITION OF "FALSE PRETENCE."

The expression "false pretence," in Article 329, means a false representation made either by words, by writing, or by conduct, that some fact exists or existed, and such a representation may amount to a false pretence, although a person of common prudence might easily have detected its falsehood by inquiry, and although the existence of the alleged fact was in itself impossible.

But the expression "false pretence" does not include

(a.) a promise as to future conduct not intended to be kept, unless such promise is based upon or implies an existing fact falsely alleged to exist; or,

(b.) such untrue commendation or untrue depreciation of an article which is to be sold as is usual between sellers and buyers, unless such untrue commendation or untrue depreciation is made by means of a definite false assertion as to some matter of fact capable of being positively determined.

obtaining a pair of straps from a tradesman in Oxford. This is a false pretence by conduct.

(2.) ¹ A presents a note for £5 as a good note for that amount, knowing that the bank by which it was issued had stopped. This is a false pretence by conduct.

(3.) ² A gives a cheque in discharge of a debt. This is a representation that A has authority to draw upon the bank for the amount of the cheque, and that the cheque is a good and valid order for the payment of money. If these representations are untrue to the knowledge of A, and if he intends to defraud and obtains goods by making them, he commits the offence of obtaining goods by false pretences, but the mere giving of a cheque is not necessarily a representation that the drawer has funds at the bank to meet it.

(4.) ³ The secretary of an Odd Fellows' lodge tells a member that he owes the lodge 13s. 6d., and thereby obtains that sum from him, whereas in fact he owed only 2s. 2d. This is a false pretence, though an inquiry might easily have been made.

(5.) ⁴ A represents to B that A has power to bring back B's husband (who had run away) over hedges and ditches, and that a certain stuff which A has is sufficient and effectual for that purpose, and thereby obtains from B a dress and two sixpences. This is a false pretence, although the alleged fact is impossible.

(6.) ⁵ A tells B that A is going to pay his rent on the 1st of March, and wants £10 to make up his rent, whereby he obtains £10 from B. This statement, though false, is not a false pretence, as it relates to something intended to be done at a future time.

(7.) ⁶ A falsely tells B that A has bought skins, and wants £4 10s. to fetch them by the railway, and that he will sell them to B if B will let A have the £4 10s. on account, which B does, partly because B believes that A has bought the skins, and partly because B believes that A will sell the skins to B. This is a false pretence, as part of it alleges falsely an existing fact.

(8.) ⁷ A obtains money from B by promising to marry her, and to furnish a house with the money, representing himself to be an unmarried man. A in fact is married. The representation that A was unmarried is a false pretence, though the promises based upon it would not have been false pretences without it.

(9.) ¹ A induces B to lend him money by saying that certain spoons are of the best quality, that they are equal to Elkington's A (a description known in the trade), that the foundation is of the best material, and that they have as much silver in them as Elkington's A. These words being construed as mere exaggeration of the quality of the spoons, and not as containing a statement of a definite fact as to the quantity of silver in the spoons, are not a false pretence.

(10.) ² A induces B to buy a chain by saying, "It is 15-carat gold, and you will see it stamped fine on every link. It was made for me, and I paid nine guineas for it. The maker told me it was worth £5 to sell as old gold." The chain had on every link the mark 15-ct. The chain in fact was 6-carat gold, worth in all £3 0s. 3d. This is a false pretence.

ARTICLE 331.

OF "OBTAINING."

⁴ Whoever, by any false pretence, causes or procures any money to be paid, or any chattel or valuable security to be delivered to any other person for the use or benefit, or on account of the person making such false pretence, or of any other person, with intent to defraud, is deemed to have obtained such money, chattel, or valuable security within the meaning of Article 329.

² If a thing is obtained by the joint effect of several false pretences, any one of which is a false pretence within the meaning of the last Article, and if the thing would not have been obtained without that false pretence, it is deemed to have been obtained by such false pretence.

Illustrations.

(1.) ³ A draws a bill upon B in London and gets it discounted by C in Russia by falsely pretending, by means of a forged authority, that he is authorized to draw upon B for the amount of the bill. A does not attempt to obtain money by false pretences from B, though he meant that C should forward the draft to B, and should obtain payment of the amount, and though his act if done in England would have been an obtaining by false pretences from C.

(2.) ⁴ A by a false pretence obtains from B, a livery stable keeper, the use of a horse for the day for which he would have been charged 7s. This is not obtaining goods by false pretences, as the horse was returned.

(3.) ⁵ A, by false pretences, induces B to enter into partnership with him, and to advance £500 as part of the capital of the concern. B treats the partnership as an existing one, and endeavours to dispose of his interest in it. A has not obtained £500 by false pretences, as B, as partner, retained his interest in it.

(4.) ⁶ A induces B to buy a cheese at a higher price than it is worth, by inserting in it a taster of superior quality to the rest of the cheese, and so making B believe that the whole cheese was of the same quality as the taster. This is obtaining money by a false pretence.

(5.) ¹ A induces B to lend him £100 on a deposit of title deeds to land, by falsely pretending that a house had been built upon it worth £300. This is obtaining £100 by a false pretence.

(6.) ² A, by falsely pretending to be a naval officer, induces B to enter into a contract to board and lodge him at a guinea a week, and under this contract is supplied with food for a week. This is not obtaining food by false pretences, as the supply of food in consequence of the contract is too remotely the result of the false pretence to become the subject of an indictment.

(7.) ³ A makes a false pretence to B to obtain money, which pretence is false to B's knowledge. B pays A the money and prosecutes him for obtaining it by a false pretence. This is not obtaining money by a false pretence.

(8.) A falsely pretends to B, 1, that he is an unmarried man; 2, that he will marry B; 3, that if B will give him £8 he will furnish a house for himself and her to live in after marriage. By these false pretences he obtains the £8. He is deemed to have obtained the £8 by the false pretence that he is an unmarried man, which is a false representation as to an existing fact.

INTENT TO DEFRAUD.

An intent to defraud, in the case of offences against Article 329, is consistent with an intent to undo the effect of the fraud if the offender should be able to do so.

ARTICLE 334.

OBTAINING CREDIT, ETC., BY FALSE PRETENCES.

¹ Every one commits a misdemeanor, and is liable upon conviction thereof to twelve months imprisonment and hard labour, as a maximum punishment, who,

(a.) in incurring any debt or liability, obtains credit under false pretences, or by means of any other fraud; or,

(b.) with intent to defraud his creditors or any of them, makes or causes to be made any gift, delivery, or transfer of or any charge on his property; or,

ARTICLE 336.

CONSPIRACY TO DEFRAUD OR EXTORT.

Every one commits the misdemeanor of conspiracy who agrees with any other person or persons to do any act with intent to defraud the public, or any particular person, or class of persons, or to extort from any person any money or goods. Such a conspiracy may be criminal although the act agreed upon is not in itself a crime.

² An offender convicted of this offence may be sentenced to hard labour.

The following are instances of conspiracies with intent to defraud:—

³ A conspiracy to defraud the public by a mock auction.

⁴ A conspiracy to raise the price of the funds by false rumours.

⁵ A conspiracy to defraud the public by issuing bills in the name of a fictitious bank.

⁶ A conspiracy to induce a person to buy horses by falsely alleging that they were the property of a private person and not of a horse dealer.

PRETENDING TO EXERCISE WITCHCRAFT.

³ Every one commits a misdemeanor and must, upon conviction thereof, be imprisoned for a year, and may be obliged to give sureties for his good behaviour in such sum and for such time as the Court thinks fit, who pretends to exercise or use any kind of witchcraft, sorcery, enchantment, or conjuration, or undertakes to tell fortunes, or pretends from his skill or knowledge in any occult or crafty science to discover where or in what manner any goods or chattels supposed to have been stolen or lost may be found.

ARTICLE 338.

CHEATING.

Every one commits the misdemeanor called cheating, who fraudulently obtains the property of another by any deceitful practice not amounting to felony, which practice is of such a nature that it directly affects, or may directly affect, the public at large. But it is not cheating within the meaning of this Article to deceive any person in any contract or private dealing by lies unaccompanied by such practices as aforesaid.

SERVANTS FEEDING HORSES, ETC., AGAINST ORDERS.

⁷ Every servant commits a misdemeanor, and is liable upon summary conviction thereof before two justices of the peace, as a maximum punishment, to three months imprisonment and hard labour or to a fine of £5, and in default of payment before a time to be fixed by the justices, to imprisonment with hard labour for three months, unless the fine is sooner paid, who, contrary to the orders of his master, takes from his possession any corn, pulse, roots, or other food, for the purpose of giving the same or having the same given to any horse or other animal belonging to or in the possession of his master. “ MISAPPROPRIATE ” DEFINED.

² In this chapter the word “misappropriate” means converting any of the things in respect of which the offences defined in it are committed to the use or benefit of the offender, or to the use or benefit of any person other than the person by whom the offender was intrusted therewith. In regard to each of the offences defined in Articles 345, 346, and 347, it is immaterial whether the offender was intrusted with the thing in respect of which the offence was committed solely, or jointly with any other person.

RULE OF EVIDENCE.

² No one is entitled to refuse to make a full and complete discovery by answer to any statement of claim for discovery, or to answer any question or interrogatory in any civil proceeding in any Court, or upon the hearing of any matter in bankruptcy, upon the ground that his doing so might tend to shew that he had committed any of the offences defined in Articles 345 to 350, both inclusive.

No one is liable to be convicted of any such misdemeanor by any evidence whatever in respect of any act done by him if he has at any time, previous to his being charged with such offence, ³ first disclosed such act on oath in consequence of any compulsory process of any Court which, in 1861, was a Court of either law or equity, in any action, suit, or proceeding bonâ fide instituted by any party aggrieved, or if he has ³ first disclosed the same in any compulsory examination or deposition before any Court upon the hearing of any matter in bankruptcy or insolvency.

ARTICLE 352.

FRAUDULENT FALSE ACCOUNTING.

¹ Every one commits a misdemeanor who, being a clerk, officer or servant, or employed or acting in the capacity of a clerk, officer or servant, wilfully, and with intent to defraud, destroys, alters, mutilates, or falsifies any book, paper, writing, valuable security, or account which belongs to or is in the possession of his employer, or has been received by him for or on behalf of his employer ; or wilfully and with intent to defraud, makes or concurs in making any false entry in, or omits or alters, or concurs in omitting or altering any material particular from or in any such book, or any document or account.

CHAPTER XLII.

RECEIVING.

ARTICLE 353.

RECEIVING DEFINED.

¹ A PERSON is said to receive goods improperly obtained as soon as he obtains control over them from the person from whom he receives them.

Where goods are received by a wife or servant, in the husband's or master's absence, with a guilty knowledge on the part of such wife or servant, the husband or master does not become a receiver only by acquiring a guilty knowledge of the receipt of the goods by such wife or servant, and passively acquiescing therein, but he does become a receiver with a guilty knowledge if, having such knowledge, he does any act approving of the receipt of the goods.

Property ceases to be stolen or otherwise improperly obtained within the meaning of this Article as soon as it comes into the possession of the general or special owner, and if such general or special owner delivers it to some one who delivers it to a person who receives it knowing of the previous theft or other obtaining, such receiving is not an offence within this Article.

¹ R. v. Wiley, 2 Den. 37. In this case the thieves carried stolen fowls into a stable belonging to the receiver's father. The receiver lighted them in, and was taken in the act of bargaining for them as they lay on the ground between the three men. Eight judges to four held that the conviction must be quashed; substantially they all agreed in the proposition given in the text, but they differed on the question whether, under the circumstances, the receiver had the control of the fowls or not. There was also some difference as to the effect of the terms in which the question had been left to the jury by the chairman of sessions who stated the case. For these reasons I have not attempted to turn the case into an illustration. The case of R. v. M. Smith, Dear. 494, is somewhat similar. See, too, R. v. Hill, 1 Den. 453. In R. v. Miller, 6 Cox, C. C. 353, a person was found guilty of receiving who had never had possession of the goods except by a servant.

Illustrations.

(1.) ¹A's wife in A's absence receives stolen potatoes knowing them to be stolen. The jury find that A "afterwards adopted his wife's receipt." This finding is not sufficient to sustain a verdict of guilty, as it is consistent with A's having passively consented to what his wife had done without taking any active part in the matter.

(2.) ²A's wife in A's absence receives stolen goods and pays the thief 6*d.* on account. The thief then tells A, who strikes a bargain with the thief, and pays him the balance. A has received stolen goods knowing them to be stolen.

(3.) ³B steals C's property. C finds it in B's pocket, restores it to B, and tells B to sell it at the same place where he has sold other property of C's. B sells it to A, who knows that it has been stolen. A commits no offence, as the property after being stolen has got into the owner's hands.

(4.) ⁴B steals goods from a railway to which they have been bailed. B then sends the goods to A by the same railway. A receives them, knowing them to have been stolen, from the railway porter knowing them to have been stolen. A policeman employed by the railway discovers whilst the goods are in transit that they have been stolen, and causes them to be delivered to A in order to detect them. A has committed no offence under this Article.

ARTICLE 354.

RECEIVING PROPERTY ULAWFULLY OBTAINED.

Every one commits an offence amounting, in cases (a.), (b.), and (d.), to felony, and in case (c.) to misdemeanor, and is liable upon conviction thereof, as a maximum punishment, to penal servitude for life in case (a.), and to penal servitude for fourteen years in case (b.), and to penal servitude for seven years in cases (c.) and (d.), who does any of the following things (that is to say):—

feloniously stolen, taken, embezzled, or secreted, and to have been sent or to have been intended to be sent by the post; or

(b.) ¹who receives any chattel, money, valuable security, or other property whatsoever, the stealing, taking, extorting, obtaining, embezzling, or otherwise disposing whereof is a felony, either at common law or by the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96 (² but not by 31 & 32 Vict. c. 116), knowing the same to have been so dealt with; or

(c.) ³who, knowing the same to have been so dealt with, receives any chattel, money, valuable security, or other property which may have been stolen, taken, obtained, converted, or disposed of in such a manner as to amount to a misdemeanor by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96; or

(d.) ⁴who corruptly takes any money or reward, directly or indirectly, under pretence or upon account of helping any person to any chattel, money, valuable security, or other property whatsoever, stolen, taken, obtained, extorted, embezzled, converted, or disposed of by any felony or misdemeanor prohibited by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, unless he uses all due diligence to cause the offender to be brought to trial for the same.

² Which makes stealing by a partner, &c., felony, see supra, Art. 301: R. v. Smith, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 266, an instructive, but I think a most unfortunate, decision. It is exactly in the same spirit as R. v. Sadi, 1 Lea. 468, in which it was held that to receive a bank note knowing it to be stolen was not felony, because bank notes are not the subject of larceny at common law. See, too, *R. v. CHAPTER XLIII.

' FORGERY IN GENERAL.

ARTICLE 355.

DEFINITION OF FORGERY—INTENT TO DEFRAUD.

FORGERY is making a false document, as defined in Article 356, with intent to defraud.

An intent to defraud is presumed to exist if it appears that at the time when the false document was made there was in existence a specific person, ascertained or unascertained, capable of being defrauded thereby, and this presumption is not rebutted by proof that the offender took or intended to take measures to prevent such person from being defrauded in fact; nor by the fact that he had, or thought he had, a right to the thing to be obtained by the false document.

The presumption may be rebutted by proof that at the time when the false document was made there was no person who could be reasonably supposed by the offender to be capable of being defrauded thereby; but it is not necessarily rebutted by proof that there was no person who could in fact be defrauded thereby.

It is uncertain whether, in the absence of any evidence as to the existence of any person who can be defrauded by a false document, an intent to defraud will or will not be presumed from the mere making of the document.

An intent to deceive the public or particular persons, but not to commit a particular fraud or specific wrong upon any particular person, is not an intent to defraud within the meaning of this Article.

Illustrations.

(1) ¹ A makes a false receipt, the effect of which, if the receipt were genuine, would be to render B accountable to C for a larger sum than B has in fact received on C's account. A is presumed to have intended to defraud, although the receipt was not used in fact, and was probably not intended to be used in fact for the purpose of increasing B's liability.

(2.) ¹A imitates a Bank of England note with intent to defraud any person to whom it may be passed, but without specially intending to defraud the Bank of England. This is an intent to defraud.

(3.) ²A makes a false acceptance to a bill of exchange, and puts it in circulation, intending to take it up, and actually taking it up before the bill is presented to the acceptor for payment. This is forgery with intent to defraud.

(4.) ³A being directed by his master to fill up a blank cheque with an amount to be ascertained, and to take up a bill with the proceeds, A fills it up for a larger amount and keeps the difference on a claim that it was due to him for salary. Here there is an intent to defraud.

(5.) ⁴A pays to his credit at a bank a false promissory note. The bank hold guarantees for a much larger amount. Notwithstanding this the inevitable conclusion is that he meant to defraud.

(6.) ⁵A signs B's name without his authority to two deeds of transfer of railway shares, by one of which the shares purport to be transferred by C to B, and by the other to be transferred from B to D. The circumstances are such that no one can be defrauded by these deeds. ⁶This rebuts the presumption of an intent to defraud raised by the writing of B's name.

(7.) ⁷A imitates a cheque in B's handwriting and name on a bank at which, to A's knowledge, B had long ceased to keep an account. The jury may infer from this an absence of intent to defraud.

(8.) ⁸A imitates a cheque in B's name on a bank from which B had, without A's knowledge, withdrawn his balance the day before. Here the fact that no one could be defrauded by the false cheque does not rebut the presumption of an intent to defraud.

(9.) ⁹A makes a false will. It does not appear whether there was or was

² R. v. Geach, 9 C. & P. 499; and in the case stated by Coleridge, J., in R. v. Todd, 1 Cox, C. C. 57.

³ R. v. Wilson, 1 Den. 284.

⁵ This is a barely possible supposition, though Cresswell, J., held that it was so in R. v. Marcus, 2 C. & K. 356. Rolfe, B., held otherwise in R. v. Hontson, 2 C. & K. 777, see note.

⁶ R. v. Marcus, 2 C. & K. 356.

⁷ This and Illustration (6) are founded on the dictum of Maule, J., in R. v. Nash, 2 Den. C. C. 499.

⁸ Tuff's Case, 1 Den. C. C. 819. The Court were equally divided on a question which, I submit, was substantially the one stated.

not any person who could be defrauded by it. It is uncertain whether an intent to defraud is or is not to be presumed.

(10.) ¹ A forges a diploma of the College of Surgeons, intending to induce a belief that the document is genuine, and that he is a member of the College of Surgeons, and shews it to two persons with intent to induce that belief in them. This is not an intent to defraud within the meaning of this Article, though it is an intent to deceive.

ARTICLE 356.

MAKING A FALSE DOCUMENT DEFINED.

To make a false document is (a.) ² to make a document purporting to be what in fact it is not ;

(b.) ³ to alter a document without authority in such a manner that if the alteration had been authorized it would have altered the effect of the document ;

(c.) ⁴ to introduce into a document without authority, whilst it is being drawn up, matter which, if it had been authorized, would have altered the effect of the document ;

(d.) to sign a document

(i.) in the name of any person without his authority, whether such name is or is not the same as that of the person signing ;

⁵ (ii.) in the name of any fictitious person alleged to exist, whether the fictitious person is or is not alleged to be of the same name as the person signing ;

⁷ (iv.) in a name of a person personated by the person signing the document, provided that the effect of the instrument depends upon the identity between the person signing the document and the person whom he professes to be.

But it is not making a false document,

¹ to procure the execution of a document by fraud ;

² to omit from a document being drawn up matter which would have altered its effect if introduced, and which might have been introduced, ³ unless the matter omitted qualifies the matter inserted ;

⁵ It is not essential to the making of a false document that the false document should be so framed that if genuine it would have been valid or binding, provided that in cases in which the forgery of any particular instrument is made a specific offence by any statute, the false document must, in order that the offence may be completed, fall within the description given in the Act.

⁷ Provided that in cases in which the forgery of any particular instrument is made a specific offence by any statute, the false document must have such a resemblance to the document which it is intended to resemble as to be likely to deceive a common person.

execute a deed purporting to be of earlier date than the conveyance to B, by which the same land purports to be let to C for a term of 999 years. The second deed is a false document, though executed by A and C.

(2.) ¹ A obtains a blank acceptance from B, with authority to fill it up for any amount not exceeding £200. A fills it up for £500. This is a false document.

(3.) ² A persuades his servant, William Wilkinson, to write his name across a stamped paper, so as to appear to be the name of the acceptor of a bill of exchange. A then fills up the bill and addresses it to Mr. William Wilkinson, Halifax, so as to make the bill appear as if it had been drawn upon and accepted by a different William Wilkinson. This is a false document.

(4.) ³ A gets B to sign a receipt, and afterwards makes additions to it, so as to make it appear that a larger sum was paid to B than had actually been paid. The altered receipt is a false document.

(5.) ⁴ A, employed to draw up B's will, inserts in it legacies out of his own head. The will is a false document.

(6.) ⁵ Sheppard signs a draft in the name of H. Turner, Junior, of Noah's Row, Hampton Court, there being no such place or person. The note is a false document.

(7.) ⁶ Thomas Brown authorizes B to sign a promissory note in the name of Thomas Brown, in order that it might be used as the note of a different and entirely fictitious Thomas Brown. This is a false document, whether B knew or not of the use for which the note was intended.

(8.) ⁷ B agrees to give A time for the payment of a debt, if A will get his mother-in-law, C. Watters (whose Christian name is unknown to B), to execute a promissory note. A gets his wife to sign the note in her maiden name, "A. Watters," and produces the note to B as the note of his mother-in-law. This is a false document.

(9.) ⁸ A, personating the Hon. A. A. Hope, the brother of the Earl of Hoptown, draws a bill of exchange in the name of A. A. Hope on a person to whom he was known by that name, and who would have paid it if A had really been A. A. Hope, the brother of the Earl of Hoptown. The bill is a false document, though the person on whom it was drawn knew and gave credit to the person who drew it.

¹ R. v. Hart, R. & M. 486 ; 7 C. & P. 652. In this case the words "£200" were written in the corner of the blank acceptance, and erased. Littledale, J., however, told the jury that the filling up the acceptance for a greater amount than that which was authorized was forgery: R. v. Bateman, 2 Russ. Cr. 715 ; 1 Cox, C. C. 186, is to the same effect.

² R. v. Blenkinsop, 1 Den. C. C. 276 ; 2 Russ. Cr. 724.

⁸ R. v. Hadfield, 2 Russ. Cr. 733. This is the well-known case of the man who married the girl known as the Beauty of Buttermere.

(10.) ¹ A gets B to make his mark to a deed by representing it to be a requisition to a person to stand for a seat in Parliament. A does not make a false document.

(11.) ² A reads B a document by which an action is agreed to be settled for £9. B agrees to sign it, and pays the £9. A, before B signs it, alters the 9 to 12. A does not make a false document.

(12.) ³ In drawing up B's will, A omits a legacy to C. A does not make a false document.

(13.) ⁴ In drawing up B's will, A omits a devise of an estate for life to C, whereby the will operates to give D an estate in possession, and not in remainder, on B's death. A makes a false document.

(14.) ⁵ A, personating B, draws a cheque in his assumed name of B, on a bank with which in his assumed name he had opened a genuine account by the actual payment of money to his credit. A does not make a false document.

(15.) ⁶ A, with intent to defraud, counterfeits the will of a living person. A is guilty of forgery.

(16.) ⁶ A, with intent to defraud, counterfeits a bill of exchange on unstamped paper, a stamp being necessary to the validity of such a bill. A commits forgery.

(17.) ⁷ If a person is indicted for forging a bill of exchange, it must be shewn that the document forged is a bill of exchange.

² R. v. Chadwick, 2 M. & R. 545.

³ 1 Hawkins, P. C. 265. The distinction seems idle, as every omission of a legacy must increase the residue.

⁴ Such, I submit, would be the law, though I know of no case in which the precise question has been determined. If the law is otherwise, a person passing by a false name would go half way to forgery every time he signed it. If a man passing by a false name drew many bills and regularly provided for them, and at last drew one for which he could not and ought to have known that he could not provide, I do not think he would be guilty of forgery any more than if he had used his own name. The use of a false name is no doubt a fact from which an intent to defraud may often be inferred, but which is a different matter. See the observations of Sir E. H. East on Aickles' Case, 2 East, P. C. 969. Since this first edition of this work was published the case of R. v. Martin, L. R. 5 Q. B. D. 34, has been decided, which, without going quite as far as Illustration (14), confirms the view suggested by it. In that case, Robert Martin, for some reason which did not appear, drew in payment for a pony a cheque in the name of William Martin on a bank where he had ceased to have an account. This was held not to be forgery, though it was obtaining the pony by a false pretence. See, too, R. v. Dunn, 1 Leach, C. C. 59.

⁵ Murphy's Case, 2 East, P. C. 949.

⁶ Hawkeswood's Case, 2 East, P. C. 955.

⁷ See several cases collected in 2 Russ. Cr. 755-61, all of which turn on the question whether peculiarly worded instruments answer the statutory description given in the indictment.

(18.) ¹ A is charged with forging a Bank of England note. If the resemblance of the forged and the real note is sufficient to deceive a common person, the conviction will not be quashed, because in certain important particulars the two documents differ.

(19.) ² A forges a note in these words: "I promise to pay for self and company of my bank in England." A cannot be convicted of forging a Bank of England note.

ARTICLE 357.

"DOCUMENT."

The word document in Articles 355 and 356 does not include trade-marks or other signs, though they may be written or printed.

Illustrations.

(1.) ³ A paints a picture, and intending to represent that it was painted by an eminent artist, writes that artist's name in the corner. This may be a cheat, but is not forgery.

(2.) ⁴ A prints a number of wrappers imitating advertisements in which egg powders were wrapped for sale by B their maker. He incloses spurious egg powders in the wrappers, and sells them. This is not forgery though it is obtaining money by false pretences.

³ R. v. Cross, D. & B. 460.

⁴ E. v. Smith, D. & B. 566. It would seem as if in this case the element wanting to complete the offence was the intent to defraud by means of the document, rather than the absence of a document capable of being forged; the offence lay in selling spurious as real powders. The wrappers without the powders could have no effect whatever. The essence of a forgery is, that the document itself should be made the instrument of fraud.

PUNISHMENT OF PARTICULAR FORGERIES.

ARTICLE 358.

“UTTER,” “RESEMBLE,” “FORGE.”

¹ In this chapter the word “utter” includes “offer, dispose of, and put off;” and when it is stated that any uttering is an offence, uttering with knowledge of the character of the thing uttered is intended.

The word “resembling” means “made or apparently intended to resemble.”

The word “forge” includes “alter.”

² “Having in possession” includes knowingly and wilfully having

(b.) in any place for the use or benefit of the possessor or any other person.

ARTICLE 359.

FORGERIES PUNISHABLE WITH PENAL SERVITUDE FOR LIFE.

² These are mere drafting abridgments. In the Act the words “utter, offer, dispose of, and put off,” “resembling and made, or apparently intended to resemble,” and “forge and utter” are invariably coupled together. The meaning of the word “utter” was much discussed in R. v. Jon, 2 Den. 475, in which it was held to be an uttering to produce a forged receipt for inspection, and in order to lead the person to whom it was produced to believe that the person producing it had paid his rents.

³ 33 & 34 Vict. c. 58, s. 3, S.

⁴ 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 48, S. This section is exceedingly verbose, and is not likely to be put in force. I have therefore greatly abridged it. To judge from the Index to the Revised Statutes, it can apply only to two statutes, 52 Geo. 3, c. 143, s. 6, referring to forging certificates, &c., of redemption of the land tax and 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 53, s. 56, relating to the forgery of instruments to receive money from the Bank of England, on account of the Receiver General of Excise, &c. In each case the punishment was originally death, and in each it was reduced to transportation for life by 1 Will. 4, c. 66, s. 1.

⁵ 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 26, S., "shall fraudulently forge or alter or shall" utter; s. 31, "shall forge or fraudulently alter or shall" utter; s. 33, "whoever with intent to defraud shall forge or alter," &c. I see no difference in the meaning of these phrases, nor do I understand why they are varied. The word "forge" in itself implies an intent to defraud.

FORGERIES PUNISHABLE WITH SEVEN YEARS PENAL SERVITUDE.

Every one commits felony, and is liable upon conviction thereof to seven years penal servitude as a maximum punishment, who

(a.) ² forges the seal of any Court of record ; or

(b.) ³ forges or utters any process of any Court of justice whatever, or serves or enforces any such forged process knowing it to be forged, or delivers, or causes to be delivered, to any person any paper falsely purporting to be any such process, or a copy thereof, or to be any judgment, decree, or order of any Court of law or equity, or a copy thereof, or acts, or professes to act, under any such false process knowing (in any such case) such process to be false ; or

(c.) ⁴ forges or utters any copy or certificate of any record, or utters any such copy or certificate having thereon any forged name, handwriting, or signature ; or

² Clause (a.) represents part of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 28, S., which occurs in the middle of the section. The statutes says nothing in this case of forging the stamp or impression of such seals.

³ Clause (b.) represents the effect of that part of sect. 27, S., which makes it an offence, inter alia, to forge the process of certain Courts named, combined with that part of sect. 28 which make it an offence to forge the process of any other Court than those mentioned in sect. 27, and to serve the forged process of any Court whatever. These sections are singularly cumbersome and ill-arranged, besides being intolerably wordy. A somewhat similar provision as to County Courts occurs in 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 57, see R. v. Richmond, Bell, 142, and R. v. Evans, D. & B. 236.

CHAPTER XLVI.

¹ OFFENCES RELATING TO THE COIN.² ARTICLE 369.

INTERPRETATION OF TERMS.

In this chapter the following words and expressions are used in the following senses :—

³ “Current,” applied to coin, means coin coined in any of Her Majesty’s mints or lawfully current by virtue of any proclamation or otherwise in any part of Her Majesty’s dominions, whether within the United Kingdom or without.

“Copper,” applied to coin, includes bronze or mixed metal and every other kind of coin inferior in value to silver.

“Counterfeit coin” means coin not genuine, but resembling, or apparently intended to resemble, or pass for genuine coin; and includes genuine coin prepared or altered so as to resemble or pass for coin of a higher denomination.

⁴ A coin fraudulently filed at the edges so as to remove the milling, and on which a new milling has been added to restore the appearance of the coin, is a counterfeit coin.

“Gild” and “silver,” as applied to coin, include casing with gold or silver respectively, and washing and colouring by any means whatsoever with any wash or materials capable of producing the appearance of gold or silver respectively.

“Utter” includes “tender” and “put off.”

“Having in possession” includes knowingly and wilfully having

(a.) in the possession or custody of any other person; or

COINING AND POSSESSION OF INSTRUMENTS FOR COINING—PENAL SERVITUDE FOR LIFE.

Every one commits felony and is liable upon conviction thereof to penal servitude for life as a maximum punishment,

(a.) ¹ who makes any counterfeit gold or silver current coin ; or

(b.) ² who gilds or silvers any counterfeit current coin ; or

(c.) ² who gilds or silvers any piece of metal or mixture of metals whatever of a fit size and figure to be coined, with intent that it shall be coined into counterfeit current gold or silver coin ; or

(d.) ² who gilds, files, or alters any current silver or copper coin with intent to make it resemble or pass for current gold or silver coin ; or

(e.) ³ who buys, sells, receives, pays, or puts off any counterfeit gold or silver current coin at a lower rate than it imports or was apparently intended to import, or offers to do any such thing, ⁴ whether or not such coin was in a fit state to be uttered, and whether or not the counterfeiting thereof was finished ; or

(f.) ⁵ who imports or receives into the United Kingdom from beyond the seas any counterfeit current coin knowing it to be counterfeit ; or

(g.) ⁶ who makes, mends, begins or proceeds to make or mend, buys, sells, or has in his custody or possession,

(i.) any puncheon, counter-puncheon, matrix, stamp, die, pattern or mould, in or upon which is made or impressed or which is adapted and intended to make or impress the figure, stamp, or apparent resemblance of both or either of the sides

(ii.) any edger, edging or other tool, collar, instrument, or engine adapted and intended for the marking of coin round the edges with letters, grainings, or other marks or figures apparently resembling the marks on the edge of such coin as aforesaid, knowing the same to be so adapted and intended ; or

(iii.) any press for coinage, or any cutting engine for cutting, by force of a screw or any other contrivance, round blanks out of gold, silver, or other metal or mixture of metals, or any other machine, knowing such press to be a press for coinage, or knowing such engine or machine to have been, or to be intended to be, used for or in order to counterfeiting any such coin as aforesaid ; or

(h.) ¹ who knowingly conveys out of any of Her Majesty's mints any puncheon, counter-puncheon, matrix, stamp, die, pattern, mould, edger, edging or other tool, collar, instrument, press, or engine used or employed in coining, or any useful part of any of the said things, or any coin, bullion, metal, or mixture of metals.

² None of the acts specified in (e.), (f.), (g.), and (h.) is an offence unless it is done without lawful authority or excuse, to be proved by the party accused.

ARTICLE 371.

CLIPPING—PENAL SERVITUDE FOR FOURTEEN YEARS.

³ Every one commits felony and is liable on conviction to a maximum punishment of fourteen years penal servitude, who impairs, diminishes, or lightens any current gold or silver coin with intent that when so dealt with it may pass as current gold or silver coin.

ARTICLE 372.

COINING COPPER OR FOREIGN MONEY—PENAL SERVITUDE FOR SEVEN YEARS.

Every one commits felony and is liable to seven years penal servitude as a maximum punishment,

(a.) ¹ who counterfeits the Queen's current copper coin; or

(b.) ¹ who (without lawful authority or excuse (the proof whereof lies upon him)) knowingly makes or mends, or begins or proceeds to make or mend, or buy or sell, or have in his custody or possession, any instrument, tool, or engine adapted and intended for counterfeiting any of the Queen's current copper coin; or,

(c.) ² who buys, sells, receives, pays, or puts off any counterfeit copper coin at a lower rate or value than the same imports or was apparently intended to import; or

(d.) ³ who makes counterfeit gold or silver coin of any foreign prince, state, or country; or

(e.) ⁴ who brings or receives into the United Kingdom counterfeit gold or silver coin of any foreign prince, state, or country, knowing the same to be counterfeit, without lawful authority or excuse, to be proved by the party accused, ⁵ whether or not such coin was in a fit state to be uttered, and whether or not the counterfeiting thereof was finished; or

(f.) ⁶ who has in his custody or possession any filings or clippings, gold or silver bullion, or gold or silver in dust or solution, obtained by impairing current gold or silver coin, knowing it to have been so obtained.

COINING FOREIGN COPPER MONEY—PENAL SERVITUDE FOR SEVEN YEARS.

ARTICLE 374.

UTTERING AND POSSESSING WITH INTENT TO UTTER.

Every one commits a misdemeanor, or in case (d.) a felony, and is liable to a maximum punishment of one year's imprisonment and hard labour in case (a.), two years imprisonment and hard labour in case (b.), five years penal servitude in case (c.), and penal servitude for life in case (d.),

(a.) ² who utters counterfeit current gold or silver coin, knowing it to be counterfeit; or,

(b.) ³ who at the time of such uttering as is specified in clause (a.) has in his custody or possession any other piece of such counterfeit coin, or who, on the same day, or on any of the ten days next ensuing, utters any such counterfeit coin, knowing the same to be counterfeit; or,

(c.) ⁴ who has in his possession three or more pieces of counterfeit current gold or silver coin, with intent to utter them or any of them: or,

(d.) ⁵ who commits any of the above-mentioned offences, after having been previously convicted at any time of any one of them, or of any felony relating to the coin.

UTTERING BASE COPPER OR FOREIGN COIN.

Every one commits a misdemeanor

(a.) ¹ who, without lawful authority or excuse to be proved by him, exports or puts on board any vessel for the purpose of being exported from the United Kingdom any counterfeit current coin whatever, knowing the same to be counterfeit ; or,

(b.) ² who utters any counterfeit current copper coin, knowing it to be counterfeit ; or

(c.) ² who has in his possession three or more pieces of such counterfeit coin, knowing the same to be false and with intent to utter any of them ; or

(d.) ³ who, with intent to defraud, utters as current gold or silver coin any coin which is not such coin, or any medal or piece of metal or mixed metal resembling in size, figure, and colour, the current coin as which it is uttered, but being of less value ; or,

(e.) ⁴ who defaces any current coin whatever by stamping thereon any names or words, whether such coin is or is not thereby diminished or lightened ; or,

(f.) ⁵ who utters any counterfeit gold or silver coin of any foreign prince, state, or country, knowing it to be counterfeit ; or,

(g.) ⁶ who has in his custody or possession more than five pieces of counterfeit gold or silver coin or any counterfeit copper coin of any foreign prince, state, or country, without lawful authority or excuse to be proved by such person.

The maximum punishment for the offence in clause (f.) is, for the first offence six months imprisonment with hard labour; ¹ for a second offence, after a previous conviction therefor, two years imprisonment and hard labour; ¹ and after two previous convictions the offence is felony, and the offender is liable to penal servitude for life as a maximum punishment.

The punishment for the offence numbered (g.) is a fine not exceeding forty shillings, and not less than ten shillings for every such piece of money, half to go to the informer, and half to the poor of the parish where the offence is committed, and forfeiture of the counterfeit coins, which are to be destroyed. In default of payment, the offender may be imprisoned with hard labour for a maximum period of three months. The proceeding is to be before any justice of the peace.

(b.) any of Her Majesty's arsenals, magazines, dockyards, rope-yards, victualling offices, or any of the buildings erected therein or belonging thereto; or

(c.) any timber or materials there placed for building, repairing, or fitting out of ships or vessels; or

(d.) any of Her Majesty's military, naval, or victualling stores or other ammunition of war; or

² Ibid. s. 1, S. W.

³ As to what constitutes "setting fire," it is not necessary that flame should be seen: R. v. Stallion, 1 Moo. 398 ; but it is not sufficient that wood should be scorched black: R. v. Russell, Car. & M. 541. It is sufficient if the wood has been at a red heat: R. v. Parker, 9 C. & P. 45. I suppose the question is whether the thing burnt has or has not begun to be decomposed by the action of fire.

Many cases are collected in Fisher's Digest, 2318-2321 as to the buildings which fall under one or the other of these terms. ⁸ The word "maliciously" is here omitted, though "unlawfully" is retained. The reason, no doubt, is that one particular form of malice, viz., an intent to bring a ship into danger, is specified, but it is singular that in the latter part of

⁴ R. v. Manning, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 338. It is a question for a jury what constitutes a building.

⁵ 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, s. 7, W. In R. v. Child, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 307, it was said that the legislature probably meant to enact that, if any person sets fire to anything in a house likely to set fire to the house itself, he should be guilty of felony, but that they had failed to say so. In that case A set fire to goods in a house to spite the owner, but with no intention to burn the house, and (as the jury were considered by the Court to have found) not thinking it probable that what he was doing would have that effect, and not being reckless on the subject. My impression is that the legislature said what it meant, but that the judge who reserved the case (Blackburn, J.) was not followed by the jury in the directions which he gave.

two or more persons to do or procure to be done any unlawful act in restraint of trade.

ARTICLE 391.

WHAT ACTS DONE IN RESTRAINT OF TRADE ARE NOT UNLAWFUL.

¹ The purposes of a trade union are not, by reason merely that they are in restraint of trade, unlawful within the meaning of Article 390.

² No act in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute between employers and workmen is unlawful within the meaning of Article 390, unless a person doing it would be punishable for it on indictment, or liable to be imprisoned (either absolutely or at the discretion of the Court as an alternative for some other punishment) on summary conviction.

ARTICLE 392.

CONSPIRACIES IN RESTRAINT OF TRADE, MISDEMEANORS.

² Every conspiracy in restraint of trade is a misdemeanor, but no person convicted of a conspiracy to do, or procure to be done, in restraint of trade an act punishable only on summary conviction can be sentenced to imprisonment for more than three months, or such longer time, if any, as may have been prescribed by the statute for the punishment of the said act when committed by one person.

CRIMINAL BREACHES OF CONTRACT OF SERVICE—INTIMIDATION AND PICKETING.

(a.) ¹ who wilfully and maliciously breaks a contract of service or of hiring, knowing or having reasonable cause to believe that the probable consequence of his so doing, either alone or in combination with others, will be to endanger human life, or cause serious bodily injury, or to expose valuable property, whether real or personal, to destruction or serious injury; or

(b.) ² who being employed by a municipal authority, or by any company or contractor upon whom is imposed by Act of Parliament the duty, or who have otherwise assumed the duty of supplying any city, borough, town, or place, or any part thereof, with gas or water, wilfully and maliciously breaks a contract of service with that authority or company or contractor, knowing, or having reasonable cause to believe, that the probable consequence of his so doing, alone or in combination with others, will be to deprive the inhabitants of that city, borough, town, place or part, wholly or to a great extent of their supply of gas or water; or

(c.) ³ who being a master legally bound to provide for his servant or apprentice necessary food, clothing, medical aid, or lodging, wilfully and without lawful excuse neglects to provide the same, whereby the health of the servant or apprentice is or is likely to be seriously or permanently injured; or

(d.) ⁴ who with a view to compel any other person to abstain from doing or to do any act which such other person has a legal right to do or abstain from doing wrongfully and without legal authority,

(i.) Uses violence to or intimidates such other person or his wife or children, or injures his property; or

(ii.) Persistently follows such other person about from place to place; or

(iii.) Hides any tools, clothes, or other property owned or used by such other person, or deprives him of or hinders him in the use thereof; or (v.) Follows such other person with two or more other persons in a disorderly manner in or through any street or road.

Attending at or near the house or place where a person resides, or works, or carries on business, or happens to be, or the approach to such house or place in order merely to obtain or communicate information is not a watching or besetting within (iv.)

Cases under this Article may be determined by a Court of summary jurisdiction, or if the accused objects to being tried for such offence by such a Court, the Court of summary jurisdiction [must¹] deal with the case in all respects as if the offender were charged with an indictable offence, and the offence may be prosecuted on indictment accordingly.

BREACHES OF EMPLOYER'S DUTY TO SEAMEN—LEAVING SEAMEN BEHIND.

² Every one commits a misdemeanor who

(a.) ³ being the master or other person belonging to any British ship wrongfully forces on shore and leaves behind, or otherwise wilfully and wrongfully leaves behind, in any place on shore or at sea, in or out of Her Majesty's dominions, any seaman or apprentice belonging to such ship before the completion of the voyage for which such person was engaged, or the return of the ship to the United Kingdom; or situate in any British possession abroad (except the possession in which he was shipped) without previously obtaining the sanction in writing endorsed on the agreement of some public shipping master, or other officer duly sanctioned by the local government in that behalf, or (in the absence of any such functionary) of the chief officer of customs resident at or near the place where the discharge takes place :

(ii.) Discharges any seaman or apprentice at any place out of Her Majesty's dominions without previously obtaining the sanction so endorsed as aforesaid of the British consular officer there, or in his absence, of two respectable merchants resident there :

(iii.) Leaves behind any seaman or apprentice at any place situate in any British possession abroad, on any ground whatever, without previously obtaining a certificate in writing so endorsed as aforesaid from such officer or person as aforesaid, stating the fact and the cause thereof, whether such cause be unfitness or inability to proceed to sea, or desertion or disappearance :

(iv.) Leaves behind any seaman or apprentice at any place out of Her Majesty's dominions, on shore or at sea, on any ground whatever, without previously obtaining the certificate endorsed in manner and to the effect last aforesaid, of the British consular officer there, or in his absence, of two respectable merchants, if there is any such at or near the place where the ship then is.

The said functionaries must, and the said merchants may, examine into the grounds of such proposed discharge, or into the allegation of such unfitness, inability, desertion, or disappearance as aforesaid in a summary way, and may for that purpose, if they think fit so to do, administer oaths, and may either grant or refuse such sanction or certificate as appears to them to be just.

he had obtained the same previously to having discharged or left behind such seaman or apprentice, or that it was impracticable for him to obtain such sanction or certificate.

ARTICLE 395.

BREACHES OF SHIPOWNER'S DUTY TO SEAMEN—SENDING UNSEAWORTHY SHIPS TO SEA.

(a.) who sends or attempts to send or is party to sending or attempting to send a British ship to sea in such unseaworthy state that the life of any person is likely to be thereby endangered, unless he proves that he used all reasonable means to ensure her being sent to sea in a seaworthy state, or that her going to sea in such unseaworthy state was, under the circumstances, reasonable and justifiable, and for the purpose of giving such proof he may give evidence in the same manner as any other witness

(b.) who being the master of a British ship knowingly takes the same to sea in such unseaworthy state that the life of any person is likely thereby to be endangered, unless he proves that her going to sea in such unseaworthy state was, under the circumstances, reasonable and justifiable, and for the purpose of giving such proof he may give evidence like any other witness.

ARTICLE 398.

BREACH OF DUTY TO OTHER SHIP IN CASE OF A COLLISION.

¹ In every case of collision between two vessels, it is the duty of the master or person in charge of each vessel, if and in so far as he can do so without danger to his own vessel, crew, and passengers (if any), to stay by the other vessel until he has ascertained that she has no need of further assistance, and to render to the other vessel, her master, crew, and passengers (if any), such assistance as may be practicable, and as may be necessary in order to save them from any danger caused by the collision; and also to give the master or person in charge of the other vessel the name of his own vessel, and of her port of registry, or of the port or place to which she belongs, and also the names of the ports and places from which and to which she is bound.

If she fails to do so, and no reasonable cause for such failure is shewn, the collision is, in the absence of proof to the contrary, deemed to have been caused by his wrongful act, neglect, or default. Every master or person in charge of a British vessel who fails, without reasonable cause, to render such assistance, or give such information as aforesaid, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

APPENDIX OF NOTES.

NOTE I.

(TO ARTICLE 30.)

HARDLY any legal doctrine is less satisfactory than the one embodied in this Article. The rule has been too long settled to be disputed; but on examining the authorities in their historical order, it appears to me to have originated, like some other doctrines, in the anxiety of judges to devise means by which the excessive severity of the old criminal law might be evaded.

The doctrine as it now stands is uncertain in its extent and irrational as far as it goes. It is, besides, rendered nearly unmeaning by the rule that the presumption is liable to be rebutted by circumstances. The first authority on the subject is Bracton, in whose time the more recent doctrine appears to have been unknown. He says:—"Uxor vero furi desponsata, non tenebitur ex furto viri, quia virum accusare non debet nec detegere furtum suum nec feloniam, cum ipsa sui potestatem non habeat, sed vir. Consentire tamen non debet felonix viri sui nec coadjutrix esse, sed nequitiam et feloniam viri impedire debet quantum potest. In certis vero casibus de furto tenebitur, si furtum inveniatur sub clavibus uxoris, quas quidem claves habere debet uxor sub custodia et cura sua. Claves videlicet dispensæ suæ, archæ suæ, et scrinii sui: et si aliquando furtum sub clavibus istis inveniatur, uxor cum viro culpabilis erit. Sed quid si res furtiva in manu uxoris inveniatur, numquid tenebitur vir? Non ut videtur, nisi ei expresse consenserit, vel cum rem ei warrantizaverit cum ipsum vocaverit ad warrantum, et tunc consensisse præsumitur nisi expresse dissentiat, vel nisi de eo præsumatur quod fidelis sit eo quod societatem talis uxoris devitavit in quantum potuit. Item quid erit si uxor cum viro conjuncta fuerit, vel confessa quod viro suo consilium præstiterit et auxilium, numquid tenebuntur ambo ? Imo ut videtur, quia vir potest teneri per se cum sit malus, et uxor poterit esse bona et fidelis et liberari. Item uxor mala per se et vir fidelis. Cum ergo uterque possit esse malus per se et alter eorum bonus, ita poterit uterque eorum, simul et conjunctim, esse malus sicut bonus. Solutio. Non igitur erit in omni casu uxor deliberanda propter consensum, auxilium, et consensum, desicut sunt participes in crimine, ita erunt participes in pœna. Et licet obedire debeat viro, in atrocioribus tamen suis latrociniis ei non erit obediendum. Poterit quidem vir ligare et tenere, et uxor sponte et non coarta occidere, et ita ut videtur tenetur maleficio uterque. De concubina vero, vel familia domus, non erit sicut de uxore. Ipsi vero accusare tenentur, vel a servitio recedere alioquin videntur consentire."

The effect of this passage is that the wife is not bound to accuse her husband, nor is she to be regarded as accessory after the fact to a theft committed by him merely because she receives the stolen goods, though she may be so regarded if she so conducts herself as to shew actual consent to the theft. The passage does not contain a word about her right to steal with impunity in his presence.

The next authority is Assise (27 Edw. 3), which is in these words:—"Un feme fuit arraine de c̃ q̃ el aver feloñ emble ii s de pain ; q̃ disq̃. l le fist per commandeñt de celuy qui fuit son baron a cel temps. Et les justices ne voilent prendre pur pite a sa conis, mes pristeront l'enquest ; per q̃ fut trove que el' le fit per cohersion de son baron mangre le soë per que el' ala quite, et dit fuit q̃ p command de baron sans auter cohersion, ne serra nul manner de feloñ," &c.

In this case the jury seem to have found actual coercion by the husband. The dictum that the husband's command, he being absent, relieves the wife from guilt is clearly wrong according to more modern authorities. In Fitzherbert's Abridgment (A.D. 1565), Corone, 199, the case in the Book of Assizes is quoted in an abridged form ; and Staundforde (A.D. 1583), c. 19, quotes Fitzherbert, but adds a quære to the dictum appended to the case, on which Fitzherbert relies. He does not, however, quote the case itself.

Coke (3rd Inst. ch. xlvii. p. 108) says:—"A feme covert committed not larceny if she does it by the coercion of her husband ; but a feme covert may commit larceny if she doth it without the coercion of her husband." He quotes 27 Ass. 40, and Staundforde, but does not say that the bare presence of the husband is to be regarded as coercion, and does not notice the dictum as to the husband's command.

Bacon, upon the maxim "Necessitas inducit privilegium quoad jura privata," observes, "the second necessity is of obedience, and therefore where baron and feme commit a felony, the feme can neither be principal nor accessory, because the law intends her to have no will in regard of the subjection and obedience she owes to her husband." For this he quotes the passage in Staundforde already referred to, and Fitzherbert (Corone, 160), which states, as the effect of a case, in 2 Edw. 3, that eight men and a woman being convicted of felony, and the woman declaring that she was the wife of one of the men, and the jury saying they knew nothing of it, the judge inquired of the bishop. Lord Bacon's proposition thus goes infinitely beyond his authorities.

Dalton (Justice, ch. clvii.) says:—"A feme covert doth steal goods by the compulsion or constraint of her husband. This is no felony in her." And he quotes Fitzherbert and the case quoted by Fitzherbert. He also quotes Bracton in a very unintelligent and fragmentary way, and says that in murder and treason the husband's compulsion does not excuse the wife. As to murder, his authority is Marrow,¹ an author of the time of Henry VII. As to treason, he quotes Fitzherbert (Cor. 130). This passage refers to the case of a woman sentenced to be burnt for coining, respited on the ground of pregnancy, delivered of her child, and becoming pregnant again before she was burnt. The case does not say that she was married at all, and rather implies that she was not.

Hale (1 P. C. 45) says:—"If she (the wife) commit larceny by the coercion of the husband, she is not guilty (27 Ass. 40), and according to some, if it be by the command of her husband, which seems to be law if the husband be present, but not if her husband be absent at the time and place of the felony committed.

"But this command or coercion of the husband doth not excuse in case of treason nor of murder, or in regard of the heinousness of those crimes." He quotes for this the passage in Dalton given above and the cases of Arden and Somerville as to treason, and Lady Somerset as to murder. He goes on: "If the husband and wife together commit larceny or burglary, by the opinion of Bracton (lib. iii. ch. xxxii. s. 10), both are guilty," (Bracton says nothing of the sort), "and so it hath been practised by some judges. Vide Dalt., ubi supra, ch. civ." (Dalton does not say so.) "And possibly, in strictness of law, unless the actual coercion of the husband appears, she may be guilty in such a case; for it may many times fall out that the husband doth commit larceny by the instigation, though he cannot in law do it by the coercion, of his wife; but the latter practice hath obtained, that if the husband and wife commit burglary and larceny together, the wife shall be acquitted, and the husband only convicted; and with this agrees the old book (2 E. 3, Corone, 160). And this being the modern practice, and, in favorem vitæ, is fittest to be followed: and the rather because otherwise for the same felony the husband may be saved by the benefit of his clergy, and the wife hanged, where the case is within clergy, though I confess this reason is but of small value; for in manslaughter committed jointly by husband and wife the husband may have his clergy, and yet the wife is not on that account to be privileged by her coverture.

"And accordingly in the modern practice where the husband and wife, by the name of his wife, have been indicted for a larceny or burglary jointly, and have pleaded to the indictment, and the wife convicted, and the husband acquitted, merciful judges have used to reprieve the wife before judgment, because they have thought, or at least doubted, that the indictment was void against the wife, she appearing by the indictment to be a wife, and yet charged with felony jointly with her husband.

"But this is not agreeable to law, for the indictment stands good against the wife, inasmuch as every indictment is as well several as joint."

This extract probably gives the key to the confusion of the law upon this subject. It was thought hard that a woman should be hanged for a theft for which her husband had his clergy, and accordingly a loophole was devised for married women, similar, as far as theft was concerned, to clergy for men. Hale's remark as to manslaughter shews how incomplete and unsystematic the arrangement was.

Hawkins (1—4) says: If she . . . be guilty of treason, murder, or robbery, in company with, or by the coercion of, her husband, she is punishable as much as if she were sola." And Blackstone excepts "treason and mala in se, as murder and the like."

The recent cases on the subject are referred to in the Illustrations to the Article and in the foot-note.

Surely, as matters now stand, and have stood for a great length of time, married women ought, as regards the commission of crimes, to be on exactly the same footing as other people. But owing partly to the harshness of the law in ancient times, and partly to its uncertain and fragmentary condition, it is disfigured by a rule which is tolerable only because it is practically evaded on almost every occasion where it ought to be applied.

NOTE II.

(TO ARTICLE 47.)

In R. v. Welham (1 Cox, C. C. 193), Mr. Justice Patteson, after consulting Baron Parke, said, "We are both clearly of opinion that there can be no inciting to commit a felony unless the party incited knows that the act in which he is to engage is a felony." Upon this Mr. Greaves (1 Russ. Cr. 84, note (o)) asks, "How can the guilt of the inciter depend upon the state of mind of the incited? The inciting and the intention of the inciter constitute the offence." As I understand the facts of R. v. Welham, Welham incited Hood to carry off corn which Hood supposed Welham to have a right to carry off. If this were so, Welham's offence, if any, was an attempt to commit a felony by an innocent agent, and not an incitement to commit a felony, which view would justify the language of the two eminent judges. A. tells B. to put into C.'s tea something which B. supposed to be powdered sugar, but which is really arsenic. This is an attempt by A. to murder C., but it is not an inciting B. to commit murder.

This view is strengthened by Williams' Case (1 Den. C. C. 39), in which it was held that to instigate a person to poison another under such circumstances that the instigator would have been an accessory before the fact if the poison had been given, was not an attempt to administer poison.

NOTE III.

(TO ARTICLE 141; MAINTENANCE.)

It is not without hesitation that I have inserted these vague and practically obsolete definitions in this book. As, however, maintenance and champerty hold a place in all the text books, I have not thought it proper to omit all notice of them. A full account of the crimes themselves, of the vagueness of the manner in which they are defined, and of the reasons why they have so long since become obsolete, may be seen in the Fifth Report of the Criminal Law Commissioners, pp. 34-9. The Commissioners observe in conclusion: "Prosecutions for offences comprehended under the general head of maintenance are so rare that their very rarity has been a protection against the disapproval of judges, and those alterations which a frequent recurrence of doubt and vexation would probably have occasioned . . . But although no cases have occurred where the doctrine of maintenance has been discussed in the Courts, it is by no means true that this law has not been used as the means of great vexation. Instances of this have fallen within our own professional observation in the case of prosecutions commenced, although not persevered in." The Commissioners recommend that all these offences should be abolished. The definition of barratry in particular is so vague as to be quite absurd; and the statutory provision as to attorneys practising after a conviction would be utterly intolerable if it had not been long forgotten. I should suppose that there is no other enactment in the whole statute book which authorises any judge to sentence a man to seven years penal servitude after a summary inquiry conducted by himself in his own way.

These offences, as sufficiently appears from the preambles of the various statutes relating to them, are relics of an age when courts of justice were liable to intimidation by the rich and powerful and their dependants. As long as the verdict of a jury was, more or less, in the nature of a sworn report of local opinion, made by witnesses officially appointed to make such reports, intimidation must have been possible, and, in many cases, easy. Many statutes on this subject¹ are still in force, and the law relating to it is to be found in 1 Hawkins, 454. The exceptions to the general rule, that a man is not to assist another in a quarrel in which the maintainer has no interest, are so numerous, and, in some cases, so vague (e.g. a man may assist his neighbour from charity), that no less vague proposition than the one in the text would faithfully represent the law.

¹ 3 Edw. 1, c. 25; 13 Edw. 1, c. 49; 28 Edw. 1, c. 11; 20 Edw. 3, c. 4; 1 Ric. 2, c. 4; 7 Ric. 2, c. 5; 32 Hen. 8, c. 9.

NOTE IV.

(TO ARTICLES 156, 157.)

These offences have, at least in modern times, been made the subject of few, if of any, prosecutions. The excessive severity of the judgment for misprision of treason no doubt escaped notice when forfeitures for felony were abolished. The 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, takes no notice of misprisings.

The definition of misprision of felony is extremely vague. I have found no authority as to what amounts to a concealment. The obligation to discover treason to a judge or magistrate is mentioned by Hale. In early times, when the offence was commoner and more important, the obligation was very clearly set forth. "Si sit aliquis qui alium noverit inde" (i.e. of treason) "esse culpabilem, vel in aliquo criminosum, statim et sine intervallo aliquo accedere debet ad ipsum regem si possit, vel mittere si venire non possit ad aliquem regis familiarem et omnia ei manifestare per ordinem. Nec enim debet morari in uno loco per duas noctes vel per duos dies antequam personam regis videat, nec debet ad aliqua negotia quamvis urgentissima se convertere, quia vix permittitur ei ut retro aspiciat." Bracton, Lib. iii., fo. 118 b.

NOTE V.

(TO ARTICLE 172.)

The latter part of this Article is grounded partly upon general considerations and partly upon the case referred to in the Illustrations. Further illustrations of the same principle might easily be given. For instance, the publication of an edition of Juvenal, Aristophanes, Swift, Defoe, Bayle's Dictionary, Rabelais, Brantôme, Boccaccio, Chaucer, &c., cannot be regarded as a crime; yet each of these books contains more or less obscenity for which it is impossible to offer any excuse whatever. I know not how the publication of them could be justified except by the consideration that upon the whole it is for the public good that the works of remarkable men should be published as they are, so that we may be able to form as complete an estimate as possible of their characters and of the times in which they lived. On the other hand, a collection of indecencies might be formed from any one of the authors I have mentioned the separate publication of which would deserve severe punishment.

In scientific matters the line between obscenity and purity may be said to trace itself, as is also the case in reference to the administration of justice. It may be more difficult to draw the line in reference to works of art, because it undoubtedly is part of the aim of art to appeal to emotions connected with sexual passion. Practically I do not think any difficulty could ever arise, or has ever arisen. The difference between naked figures which pure-minded men and women could criticise without the slightest sense of impropriety, and figures for the exhibition of which ignominious punishment would be the only appropriate consequence, makes itself felt at once, though it would be difficult to define it.

NOTE VI.

(TO ARTICLES 179-184.)

There is a good deal of difficulty in bringing into a clear and systematic form the provisions of the various statutes relating to the suppression of disorderly houses, and especially gaming-houses. I think, however, that the text represents their effect with substantial accuracy.

The matter stands thus. The earliest Act upon the subject now in force is 33 Hen. 8, c. 9, "An Act for Maintenance of Artillery and Debarring of Unlawful Games." This Act was intended to compel people to practise archery by making all other amusements unlawful, and it accordingly forbids by name bowls, quoits, tennis, and various other games, cards and dice, and all other unlawful games prohibited by any of the statutes which it repealed, as well as all other unlawful games to be subsequently invented. The expression "unlawful games" is nowhere defined, unless it means every amusement except archery.

By the 10 Will. 3, c. 23, lotteries were forbidden. By the 12 Geo. 2, c. 28, "the games of ace of hearts, pharaoh, basset and hazard," were declared to be lotteries, and, as well as what we now call raffles, were forbidden under penalties. By the 13 Geo. 2, c. 19, the same course was taken as to a game called passage, "and all other games invented or to be invented with one or more die or dice," backgammon only excepted. By 18 Geo. 2, c. 34, these enactments were extended to "a certain pernicious game called roulet or roly poly," and that game and "any game at cards or dice, already prohibited by law," were prohibited afresh.

The 8 & 9 Vict. c. 109, repeals so much of the Act of Henry VIII. as relates to games of mere skill, and provides that upon any information or indictment for keeping a common gaming-house "it shall be sufficient to prove" the matter stated in Article 183.

This enactment was passed in order to dispose of doubts that apart from its provisions it would have been necessary to prove that the parties played at one of the games specifically prohibited by the Acts of Geo. II., or at one of the games of chance prohibited by the Act of Henry VIII.

NOTE VII.

(GENERAL NOTE TO PART V.)

The arrangement of this part, and in particular the composition of Chapters XXI. and XXII., has been the most difficult portion of the task of preparing this Digest. No one who has not made a special study of the subject, can have any adequate notion of the extreme confusion of the authorities, or of the difficulty of extracting anything systematic and definite from a number of scattered hints and isolated decisions upon particular cases—mostly relating to the law of homicide. Upon a full examination of the authorities on this subject it appeared to me that the law contained in them ought to be divided into four parts; namely:—1. Cases in which it is not criminal to inflict death, or bodily harm intentionally. These are the execution of legal sentences, keeping the peace, prevention of crime, self-defence, the use of lawful force, consent and accident. The expression "lawful force" is unavoidably vague. To enumerate every case in which the use of personal violence may be justified would be inconsistent with the scheme of this work. It would, for instance, be going beyond the limits of criminal law to inquire into the extent of the right of correction vested in parents, masters, captains of merchant ships, &c., or of the right of the owner of a personal chattel to take it away from a trespasser, or to try to enumerate all the cases in which civil and criminal process may be executed by the use of force, and the conditions necessary to make it legal. I have accordingly confined myself to the general principles stated in Articles 200–201.

2. Cases in which the infliction of death or bodily harm by omissions is or is not criminal. Injuries caused by the omission to do an act which the negligent person is under a legal duty to do stand on the same footing as injuries caused by unlawful acts. It is, therefore, necessary to define the commoner and more important of the legal duties which tend to the preservation of life. I have, therefore, deduced them in Chapter XXII. from the different decisions in which a violation of them has been held to occur. Of course the chapter does not contain an exhaustive list of all the duties which might tend to the preservation of life under particular circumstances, though I hope it notices the most important of them.

3. Cases relating to homicide generally and apart from the distinction between murder and manslaughter. Such are the point of time at which a child becomes a human being, the degree of connection between an act and the death caused by it necessary in order to enable us to say that the agent has killed the deceased, and the case in which the act done is not the sole cause of death. Thus, if an unborn child receives an injury of which it dies before it is fully born, the infliction of the injury cannot be either murder or manslaughter. If it dies after it is fully born the infliction of the injury may be either justifiable homicide, accidental homicide, manslaughter, or murder, according to circumstances. This makes it possible to enumerate the cases in which homicide is unlawful, and so to give a specific meaning to the expression "unlawful homicide."

4. The definition of malice aforethought. Unlawful homicide must be manslaughter at least, and may be murder if it is accompanied by malice aforethought; and, after dealing with this, the transition to the less serious bodily injuries, felonious or otherwise, is easy.

When this division of the subject is carried out it looks simple; at least, I hope so; but any one who will try the experiment of referring to the authorities will believe me when I assert that it cost me weeks of thought and labour to put the matter in this shape. I believe, however, that it is now not very incomplete.

The table on p. 361 shews, I think, that every imaginable kind of homicide has been considered, and has been classified as lawful or unlawful in some part or other of Chapters XXI., XXII., and XXIII., and if this be so the definitions of murder and manslaughter must also be complete.

This table gives seven distinct kinds of homicide, as follows:—

1. Homicide by an act accompanied by a lawful intention to kill or hurt (Chapter XXI.)
2. Homicide by an act accompanied by an unlawful intention to kill or hurt (Article 222 (a)).
3. Homicide by an act in itself lawful, and not accompanied by an intention to kill or hurt (Article 210).
4. Homicide by an act in itself unlawful, but not accompanied by an intention to kill or hurt (Article 222 (c)).
5. Homicide by an omission to discharge a legal duty amounting to culpable negligence (Chapter XXII., Article 222 (b)).
6. Homicide by an omission to discharge a legal duty not amounting to culpable negligence (Article 211).
7. Homicide by an omission to do an act not amounting to a legal duty (Article 212).

Of these Nos. 1, 3, 6, and 7 are not unlawful in the sense of being criminal. Nos. 2, 4, and 5 are unlawful. Every act falling within these definitions must be manslaughter at least, and may be murder if it is accompanied by malice aforethought, as defined in the next chapter, and is not provoked.

Unless some kind of homicide can be suggested which is not comprehended in one or other of these classes, the subject is exhausted in these chapters.

NOTE VIII.

(ARTICLE 223.)

DEFINITION OF MURDER AND MANSLAUGHTER.

This definition represents the solution at which I have arrived after much consideration of one of the most difficult problems presented by the criminal law—the problem of giving in a short compass the result of a great number of decisions and statements by authoritative writers upon the subject of murder.

I do not propose in this note to examine the history of the law on this subject, or to enter into any inquiry as to its merits and demerits. I propose simply to shew that it is stated correctly in the text. It will be sufficient for this purpose to shew, first, that the definition which I have given coincides with the theory laid down by the authorities on the subject; and secondly, that all the points decided by the various cases relating to any form of homicide are comprehended in what I have said on the subject in the different Articles contained in Chapters XXI.—XXIV. both inclusive, for the various decisions in question range over all the subjects treated of in those chapters indiscriminately. The first of these points I shall try to establish by shewing that my definition of murder and manslaughter respectively will be found upon examination to be equivalent to what is stated in Coke's 3rd Institute, Chapters VII. and VIII., 1 Hale's Pleas of the Crown, pp. 411–502 (Chapters XXXI.—XLII. both inclusive), and Foster's Discourse on Homicide (Crown Law, 255–337). The existing law on the subject is founded mainly upon these works, and the almost innumerable decisions bearing upon the subject are all applications of the theory which is there laid down. The decisions have been collected more or less fully, and arranged in a more or less satisfactory way, by various writers, but for every practical purpose the collection contained in Russell on Crimes is sufficient, though in point of arrangement it is, I think, inferior to the older work of East.¹ It fills 212 pages (640–852) of the first volume of the 5th edition, and 231 pages (667–898) of the 4th edition, to which I refer.

After establishing the correctness of the general definition in the manner already described, I will give an analysis of the collection of cases in Russell, and shew how each group of cases is accounted for in the text of the Digest. The intricacy, confusion, and uncertainty of this branch of the law may be traced to the statute 23 Hen. 8, c. 1, s. 3, which took away benefit of clergy in cases of ¹ Only two decisions on the subject of the law of murder of any great importance were given between 1865, when the 4th edition of Russell was published, and 1876, when the 5th edition was published. These decisions not having been reported in the ordinary law reports, have not been noticed in the last edition of Russell. They are the cases of R. v. Allen and Others, the Fenians, tried at Manchester for the murder of the policeman Brett, in 1867, and the case of R. v. Desmond and Others, for killing people by blowing up the wall of Clerkenwell Prison, in 1868. Neither of these cases is reported in the common reports. I have quoted what was said by Lord Chief Justice Cockburn in Desmond's Case in Art. 223, Illust. (8), and I have reprinted in the note next following from the Times, the correspondence which passed between the counsel for the prisoner and Lord (then Mr. Justice) Blackburn, in R. v. Allen and Others. Though not in form it constitutes in fact an argument and a written judgment on a very important point. The difference of ten pages between the collection of cases in the 4th and the collection in the 5th edition of Russell is owing to the circumstance that in the 4th edition a large number of cases are referred to twice over, once in order to shew what degree of provocation reduces murder to manslaughter, and again in order to shew what amount of provocation justifies a charge of manslaughter as distinguished from murder. A cat is produced twice, first to shew the difference between tigers and cats, and again to shew the resemblance between cats and tigers.

"wilful murder of malice prepensed," and which thus created the necessity of preserving the expression, "malice prepense," and at the same time explaining it away. Coke endeavoured to effect this by the doctrine of constructive or fictitious malice, of which, if not the author, he was the most conspicuous expounder, and he shewed in his exposition of it that utter incapacity for anything like correct language or consecutive thought which was one of his great characteristics. Hale amplifies Coke, Foster rationalizes Hale, and the judges have, in an unsystematic occasional way, worked out, bit by bit, the result recorded in the text.

According to Coke malice aforethought is the criterion by which murder is distinguished from manslaughter. Malice may be either express or implied.

² "Malice implied is in three cases:—

"First, in respect of the manner of the deed, as if one killeth another without any provocation of the part of him that is slain, the law implieth malice.

"Second, in respect of the person slain. As if a magistrate or known officer, or any other that hath lawful warrant, and in doing or offering to do his office or to execute his warrant, is slain, this is murder by malice implied in law, as the"³ person killed is "the minister of the king.

"Third, in respect of the person killing. If A assault B to rob him, and in resisting A killeth B (i.e. if B resists and A kills him) this is murder by malice implied, albeit he" (A) "never saw or knew him" (B) "before."

These passages, overloaded, as Coke's manner is, with a quantity of loose rambling gossip, form the essence of his account of murder.

Hale, who arranges his matter more systematically (though he also is exceedingly confused), 'adopts Coke's theory in slightly different language. "Such a malice, therefore, that makes the killing of a man to be murder is of two kinds: 1. Malice in fact, or 2, malice in law, or ex præsumptione legis."

³ The sentence here is not even grammatical.

⁴ 1 Hale, P. C. 451.

"Malice in fact is a deliberate intention of doing some corporal harm to the person of another."

"Malice in law, or presumed malice, is of several kinds, viz., 1. In respect of the manner of the homicide, when without provocation. 2. In respect of the person killed, viz., a minister of justice in the execution of his office. 3. In respect of the person killing." (As to which he¹ afterwards repeats Coke in an abridged form.)

Manslaughter, Coke² tells us (in the middle of a bewildering chapter about homicide in general) is homicide, "not of malice forethought" [but] "upon some sudden falling out."

Manslaughter is treated by Hale in a manner so meagre and yet so confused, that no notion of it can be obtained except by reading through Chapters XXXVIII.—XL., and trying to make sense of them. Hale's whole definition of the offence is in these words, "Manslaughter, or simple homicide, is the voluntary killing of another without malice express or implied."

These definitions are open to the remark that the definition of express malice includes all the three cases of implied malice.

Express malice, means the deliberate intentional infliction of bodily harm. Malice is implied if the act is done without provocation, or in resisting an officer of justice, or in committing a crime. But in each of these cases the infliction of bodily harm must be intentional, and there is no reason why in each of them it should not be deliberate.

Thus the distinction between express and implied malice is a distinction without a difference.

It has involved the whole subject in an obscurity from which it can never be rescued except by legislation, though I think the way in which it is stated in the text is correct, and may contribute to dispelling the confusion.

Coke's theory, however, and that of Hale may be exhibited in the following propositions:—

1. Unlawful killing by any sort of premeditated intentional personal violence is murder.
2. Premeditation is to be presumed if the violence is intentional and unprovoked.
3. Unlawful killing by unpremeditated intentional personal violence is murder if the violence is employed in the commission of a crime or in resistance to lawful authority.

4. Unlawful killing by unpremeditated intentional violence provoked is manslaughter.

These four propositions may be also stated thus—so as to shew their connection :

Unlawful killing by any sort of intentional personal violence is murder, unless such violence is used “upon a sudden falling out,” constituting provocation to the offender, but neither the exercise of force by an officer of justice against an offender, nor resistance to the offender by a person against whom a crime is attempted, constitutes such a provocation, and killing in such cases is murder.

That this proposition is the equivalent of the four propositions given above is thus proved :

¹ All intentional violence must be either provoked or unprovoked.

All intentional violence must be either premeditated or unpremeditated.

Killing by premeditated intentional personal violence is murder by (1).

Killing by unpremeditated, unprovoked intentional personal violence is, by (2), equivalent to killing by premeditated intentional personal violence, and is therefore murder. Therefore all killing by intentional personal violence is murder, unless such violence is both provoked and unpremeditated.

By (3) killing by intentional personal violence unpremeditated, and provoked only by the exercise of lawful force in the ways mentioned, is murder.

Therefore the four propositions are equivalent to the one last stated.

The legal character of unintentional killing was held by Coke and Hale to depend on the character of the act by which death

¹ This may be expressed thus in a tabular form :—

INTENTIONAL VIOLENCE MUST BE	PREMEDITATED. or UNPREMEDITATED.
PROVOKED or	Murder by proposition 1.	Not murder by proposition 4, except in cases under proposition 3.
UNPROVOKED ...	Murder by proposition 1.	Murder by proposition 2.

was caused. If the act was unlawful the offence was murder. If lawful the death was killing by misadventure, which, in Hale's time, seems to have covered, at all events in part, the ground now occupied by manslaughter by negligence. As to this Hale says:—¹ "Though the killing of another per infortunium be not in truth felony, nor subjects the party to a capital punishment, though it was not his crime, but his misfortune, yet, because the King hath lost his subject, and that men may be more careful, he forfeits his goods, and is not presently absolutely discharged of his imprisonment, but bailed," &c.

Upon the whole, the law as to unlawful homicide, as understood by Coke and Hale (the effect of what they say on justifiable homicide is given in Chapter XXI.) may be summed up as follows:—

(a.) by any intentional personal violence not inflicted upon a sudden falling out;

(b.) by any unintentional personal violence inflicted in an unlawful act.

Manslaughter is killing by any intentional personal violence inflicted upon a sudden falling out, provided that if a man attempting to commit a crime upon another is resisted, and kills the person resisting, or if a man resists an officer of justice in the exercise of his duty, and kills him, the offence is murder, and not manslaughter, although there is something which may be described as a sudden falling out between the parties.

The following theory was collateral to this definition, and was supposed to be its basis:—

In all murder there is malice aforethought. In murder as defined in (a.) there is express malice aforethought if the circumstances shew premeditation. There is implied malice aforethought if the act was done suddenly, and without provocation.

In murder as defined in (b.), and in the proviso to the definition of manslaughter, the malice is always implied.

In manslaughter there is no express malice aforethought, and it is not thought proper to imply it.

These explanations shew the true nature and real use of the expression "malice aforethought"—a mere popular phrase unluckily introduced into an Act of Parliament, and half explained away by the judges. It throws no light whatever on the nature of the crime of murder, and never was used in its natural sense of premeditation. On the other hand, it served as a sort of standing hint at the kind of definition which was wanted, for it was equivalent to saying that there were two degrees of homicide—homicide with premeditation, or other circumstances indicating the same sort of malignity; and homicide provoked by a sudden quarrel, or accompanied with other circumstances indicative of a less degree of malignity.

Foster's discourse on Homicide is little more than an amplification of this thesis. He goes through all the principal cases which had been decided in his time, and compares them with the theories of Hale and Coke, drawing the conclusion that malice means "that the fact has been attended with such circumstances as are the ordinary symptoms of a wicked, depraved, and magignant spirit; a heart regardless of social duty, and fatally bent upon mischief;"¹ a principle more shortly expressed by Holt, L.C.J., in the words, "He that doth a cruel act voluntarily doth it of malice prepensed."²

This principle gives its due prominence to a distinction which appears to have been quite unknown to Coke, though it had attracted the attention of Hale, and is, one would think, obvious enough in itself, the distinction, namely, between causing death unintentionally by an act likely to cause death, and causing death unintentionally by an act unlikely to cause death.

According to Coke³ and Hale,⁴ a settled design to beat a man makes killing him by such beating murder. Hale, however, seems to doubt whether, if the beating was moderate, the killing might not be manslaughter, and mentions⁵ one case in which, a soldier having killed a woman who abused him by throwing a broomstick at her, the judges were divided on the question whether the act was murder or not, and recommended a pardon. This view of the matter is developed at length by Foster, who discusses many cases in connection with it, and may be regarded as having laid the foundation of the modern doctrine on the subject, which has since his time been recognised in a vast number of cases, that the general presumption of malice which arises from the fact of killing is rebutted if it appear that the means used were not likely to cause death.

² R. v. Mawgridge, Kelyng (3rd ed.), 174. This judgment contains an admirable summary of the law of murder and manslaughter as it was understood in the beginning of the eighteenth century.

Foster to some extent mitigates the barbarous rule laid down by Coke as to unintentional personal violence, by confining it to cases in which the unintentional violence is offered in the commission of a felony. This rule has in modern times had a singular and unexpected effect. When Coke and Hale wrote, the infliction of hardly any bodily injury¹ short of a maim was a felony. Cutting with intent to disfigure was made felony by the Coventry Act; shooting was made felony by what was called the Black Act; and by later statutes it has been provided that the intentional infliction of grievous bodily harm in any way whatever shall be felony (see Article 236 (a.)). The result is that Foster's rule as to the intent to do grievous, as distinguished from minor, bodily harm being essential to malice aforethought now rests on statutory authority, for no one can intentionally inflict on another grievous bodily harm without committing a felony, and to cause death by a felonious act is murder.

The law as to homicide by omission is more modern, but closely follows the lines of the older part of the law. The authorities on it will be found in the Illustrations.

I now pass to the cases, and propose to shew, by going through the collection contained in 1 Russell, Cr. pp. 667-898, that all the points which have been decided are included in one part or another of the Digest—I hope in a more intelligible order.

These cases fill the first three chapters of the Third Book, which chapters are entitled:—

1. Of murder; pp. 667-782.
2. Of manslaughter; pp. 783-882.
3. Of excusable and justifiable homicide; pp. 883-898.

Pages 667, 668 contain extracts from the text writers as to malice; as to which see the earlier part of this note, also the rule of evidence embodied in Article 230.

The general part of Chapter I. is followed by seven sections, as follows :—

Sect.1. Provocation ; pp. 711–727.

„ 4. Killing in prosecution of an unlawful act ; pp. 739–746.

„ 5. Killing in consequence of a lawful act improperly performed ; pp. 747–752.

„ 6. Indictment and trial (under which is included the law as to concealment of birth¹) ; pp. 753–780.

„ 7. Judgment and execution ; pp. 780–782.

SECT. 1. Provocation.—Pages 711–727.

Pages 711–717. Words, &c., no provocation. Art. 224 (f.).

712. Act of killing without adequate provocation a form of malice. Art. 223.

Words of menace. Art. 224 (f.).

716–727. Intention to kill or do personal bodily harm is one test as to murder and manslaughter. Art. 223 (a.).

Much of this is to the same purpose as pp. 713–716. Art. 225.

SECT. 2. Cases of Mutual Combat.—Pages 727–732.

SECT. 3. Resisting Officers of Justice executing Legal Process.—Pages 732–738.

Art. 223 (d.).

SECT. 4. Cases where the killing takes place in the prosecution of some other criminal, unlawful, or wanton act.—Pages 739–746.

Pages 739–742. Cases in which one person was killed by injury designed for another, Art. 223 (a.) and (b.); and cases in which death was caused by an injury not intended to cause death, but inflicted in the commission of a felony. Art. 223 (c.).

742–746. Cases in which all the persons joining in a common enterprise are responsible for the act of any one, See Chapter IV. on accessories.

SECT. 5. Killing by a lawful act criminally or improperly performed.—Pages 747–752.

A “lawful act criminally performed” is a contradiction in terms. If a police officer arrests a thief who neither resists nor runs away by giving him a violent blow on the head, it is as absurd to call the blow a “lawful act criminally performed,” because the arrest might have been lawfully made, as it would be to call picking a pocket a lawful act criminally performed, because the thief had a right to walk along the street without picking pockets.

A lawful act improperly performed can mean only culpable negligence in the performance of a lawful act. The cases in this section are accordingly superfluous. All of them fall directly under the definitions of murder or manslaughter given in Articles 223, 224. Thus, for example, in R. v. Smith (p. 749), A shoots B dead for pretending to be a ghost and frightening people. This was held to be murder. It would fall under Articles 222 and 223, thus:—It was unlawful homicide, because the deed was done by an act intended to cause bodily harm not falling within any of the exceptions specified in the Article. The homicide was with malice aforethought, because the intention was (if not to kill) at least to cause grievous bodily harm.

In R. v. Hopley (p. 751) a schoolmaster was convicted of manslaughter for flogging a boy with extreme severity. Here the homicide was unlawful, because the act which caused death was intended to cause bodily harm, and was not within the exceptions (see particularly Art. 204). If the prisoner had been indicted for murder (as Mr Greaves thinks he ought to have been, and I agree with him), the question for the jury would have been whether or not his acts were such as, according to common knowledge, would cause death or grievous bodily harm.

SECT. 6. Indictment, Trial, &c.—Pages 753–774.

Pages 774–780. Concealment of the birth of children. See Article 235.

SECT. 6. Judgment and Execution.—Pages 780–782.

As to judgment, see Articles 231, 232.

Execution is part of the law of procedure; but see Art. 231, (note 2).

Chapter II. relates to manslaughter; pp. 783–882.

The rest of the page is about accessories in manslaughter (see Art. 229).

The rest of the chapter is divided into six sections:—

Sect. 1. Provocation; pp. 784–790.

„ 2. Mutual combat; pp. 790–798.

„ 3. Resistance to officers of justice, &c.; pp. 798–848.

Sect. 4. Killing by an unlawful act; pp. 849-856.

„ 6. Indictment and judgment; pp. 880-882.

The greater part of the matter of these six sections repeats what is contained in the chapter on murder.

SECT. 1. Provocation.—Pages 784-790.

This adds nothing to what is said on the same subject in pp. 711-727. See Articles 224-6.

Some cases are referred to in this section which contributed to the establishment of the general rule that to cause death by the infliction of injury intended to cause slight harm only is manslaughter, e.g., A drowns a pickpocket, meaning only to duck him (Fray's case, p. 787); A seeing his son bleed from a fight with another boy runs after the other boy and gives him a slight stroke with a stick, which happens to kill him (787; and See Foster, 294, for a careful discussion of the case).

SECT. 2. Mutual Combat.—Pages 790-798.

Repeats 727-737. See Art. 200 (d.).

Some of the cases referred to in this section relate also to the case of one person being killed by a blow intended for another. See Art. 223 (a.).

SECT. 3. Resistance to Arrest by Officers, &c.—Pages 798-848.

Nearly the whole of this section is made up of reports of cases on the authority of different persons to arrest in particular cases, on notice, &c. This seems to me to belong rather to the law of civil and criminal procedure than to the criminal law. One point of importance is, however, noticed in Art. 224 (c.).

SECT. 4. Killing in an unlawful, criminal, or wanton act.—
Pages 849-856.

849-854. Negligent acts. Chapter XXII.; and see Articles 222, 223.

855, 856. See Art. 210 (iii).

SECT. 5. Killing by a lawful act improperly performed.—

Pages 856–880.

Pages 856–864. These are cases of excess in the use of force when some force would have been lawful. See Art. 201.

864–880. These are all cases of negligence in doing acts which are or may be dangerous. Art. 216. Pages 877, 878 contain cases relating to the law as to the effect of joint negligence, Art. 220 (e.); and at 864 are cases bearing on the degree of remoteness consistent with an act being the cause of death. Art. 219.

SECT. 6. Indictment and Judgment.—Pages 880–882.

As to the punishment for manslaughter, see Art. 232. The rest is omitted as belonging to the subject of procedure.

CHAPTER III. EXCUSABLE AND JUSTIFIABLE HOMICIDE.—

Pages 883–898.

As the distinction between excusable and justifiable homicide is now unimportant (see 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, s. 7), I have not noticed it.

Page 884, Sect. 1. Excusable homicide by misadventure, pp. 884–8. See Art. 210.

885–888. Gives over again what is said in 861, &c., as to manslaughter by negligence.

888–892. Homicide in self-defence. See Art. 200.

893–898. Justifiable homicide. Chapter XXI.

All the cases referred to in Russell on Crimes are thus disposed of in the different Articles of the Digest. Nothing short of studying the contents of these 200 pages can give any one any notion, either of the amount of patient thought and sound good sense which have been employed in the decision of particular cases by many generations of judges, or of the immense amount of material which has been gradually accumulated by reporters, or of the helpless bewilderment, the utter incapacity to take general views, or to see the relation to each other of different principles, or to arrange an intricate question according to the natural distribution of the subject, which characterizes English text writers. The cases above referred to, as they stand in Russell, are like the stores at Balaklava, in the winter of 1854–5. Every thing is there, nothing is in its place, and the few feeble attempts at arrangement which have been made serve only to bring the mass of confusion to light.

NOTE IX.

(TO ARTICLES 224 (c.), 225.)

The following correspondence was published in the Times of Nov. 21, 1867. It refers to the case of R. v. Allen and Others, convicted at the Manchester Special Commission of the murder of Brett, a police officer, whom they shot in an attempt to rescue a Fenian prisoner from a police van in Manchester. There is no legal report of the case so far as I know, but, as will be seen, the letter of the prisoner's counsel, and the reply of Lord (then Mr. Justice) Blackburn are substantially an argument and a judgment on a matter of very great importance. I have, therefore, republished them from the Times with Lord Blackburn's permission.

STATEMENT submitted to Mr. JUSTICE BLACKBURN and Mr. JUSTICE MELLOR.

“REGINA v. ALLEN AND OTHERS.

“Upon the trial of Allen and Others for the murder of Serjeant Brett, two points of law arose, under the following circumstances :—

“On the morning of the 11th of September last, two men, who turned out afterwards to be Kelly and Deasy, were arrested by a Manchester policeman, as he alleged, under section 216 of the Manchester Police Act (7 & 8 Vict. c. 40), which enacts that it shall be lawful for any constable belonging to the police force of the borough to take into custody, without a warrant, all loose, idle or disorderly persons whom he may find disturbing the public peace, or in his own view committing an offence against this Act, or whom he shall have good cause to suspect of having committed, or being about to commit, any felony, misdemeanor, or breach of the peace, or to instigate or abet any such breach.

“The two men, who gave the names of White and Williams, were taken before a magistrate on the 11th, and remanded until the 18th by a warrant, which stated the charges against them to be, not for suspicion of felony, on which charge they were arrested, but for ‘felony,’ and omitted to specify what felony, or other offence they were charged with. They were brought up again on the 18th, when no evidence whatever was given upon the charge on which they were alleged to have been arrested, but an inspector of detectives from London, who stated he had a warrant against Kelly for treasonable practices, alleged to have been committed in Ireland, and a constable from Ireland, who was stated to have a similar warrant against Deasy, appeared, and on their application, without the production of either of the warrants, which, in fact, were not then backed as the statute required, the prisoners were again remanded for a week.

"No warrant for such second remand was produced upon the trial, but it was stated that a warrant had been signed, a copy of that signed on the 11th inst., and had been destroyed by the police after the escape of the prisoners.

"Kelly and Deasy were then placed in the prison van, for the purpose of being taken to prison, and on the way the van was attacked, the prisoners rescued, and Brett killed.

"The two questions were: 1st, whether or not Kelly and Deasy were in legal custody; and 2nd, if they were not in legal custody, whether the crime of killing Brett, in the act of rescuing them, amounted to murder or manslaughter.

"As to the first point, it would seem (1st) that the magistrate had no jurisdiction to commit for felony, no charge of felony having been made; and (2nd) that the magistrate had no jurisdiction to entertain the charge of treasonable practices committed in Ireland, or to remand the prisoners upon such a charge. By the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42, s. 22, justices are empowered to take the examination of witnesses against persons who are brought before them charged with an offence alleged to have been committed in any county or place within England and Wales wherein they have not jurisdiction. By sect. 2 of the same Act they are empowered to issue their warrant to apprehend any one within their jurisdiction charged with having committed any crime or offence on the high seas, or in any creek, harbour, &c., or any 'crimes or offences committed on lands beyond the seas for which an indictment may legally be preferred in any place within England or Wales.' By sect. 11, where an English warrant is backed in England, the offender, when apprehended, may be taken before the justice who issues the warrant, or, if so directed by the justice backing the warrant, before such last-mentioned justice, or any other justice of the same county or place; but by sect. 12, where an Irish warrant is backed in England, the offender must be taken before the justice who granted the warrant, and there is no power to take him before the magistrate who has backed it. It would seem, therefore, that in this case the proper course would have been, in the case of Deasy, at least, for the magistrate to have backed the Irish warrant, and for the prisoner to have been taken, under the authority of the warrant so backed, to Ireland, and that the magistrate had no jurisdiction to examine any witnesses against Deasy, or to remand him upon the charge of felony.

"Thirdly.—It is laid down in Coke's Second Institute, p. 591, when speaking of prison breaking, that a mittimus must 'contain the cause, but not so certainly as an indictment ought, and yet with such convenient certainty as it may appear judicially that the offence (prison breaking), tale judicium requirit as pro altâ proditione, viz., in personam domini regis, &c., or pro felonîâ, viz., pro morte talis, &c.,' and he lays it down that a mittimus pro felonîâ generally is bad. So again, Hale (P. C. vol. ii. p. 122), says that a mittimus 'must contain the certainty of the cause, and therefore if it be for felony, it ought not to be generally pro felonîâ, but it must contain the especial nature of the felony briefly, as for felony for the death of J. S., or for burglary in breaking the house of J. S., &c., and the reason is because it may appear to the Judges of the King's Bench upon an habeas corpus whether it be a felony or not.' Hale, however, adds, that he does not think the absence of such particularity would make the warrant void. It is worthy of notice that in the forms of remand given by Chitty in his Criminal Law, vol. iv. pp. 33, 116, and in the form given in the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 42 (Q. 1), the felony is specifically described.

"The second point, which appears to be of the greater importance, looking at the actual direction to the jury, and to the fact that they were not asked to find the existence, contents, or form of the warrant, is whether, assuming the detention of one or both of the prisoners to have been illegal, the killing of Brett amounted to murder.

"The first case on the subject is that of Sir H. Ferrers (Cro. Car. 371) who was arrested for debt, and thereupon Nightingale, his servant, in seeking to rescue him, as was pretended, killed the bailiff, 'but because the warrant to arrest him was by the name of Henry Ferrers, Knight, and he never was a knight, it was held by all the Court that it was at variance in an essential part of the name, and they had no authority by that warrant to arrest Sir Henry Ferrers, Baronet, so it is an ill warrant, and the killing of an officer in executing that warrant cannot be murder.' This case is also reported by Sir W. Jones (p. 346), where it is said to have been held not to be murder either in the servant or in the prisoner, because the warrant was not good.

"The next case is that of Hopkin Hugget, which was tried in 1666, and is best reported in Kelyng (p. 59). In that case, Hugget and three others pursued three constables who had impressed a man, and demanded to see their warrant. The constables showed a paper which the prisoner said was no warrant, and thereupon they drew their swords, and Hugget killed one of the constables. Of the twelve judges eight delivered their opinion that this was no murder, but only manslaughter, and they said that if a man be unduly arrested or restrained of his liberty by three men, although he be quiet himself, and do not endeavour any rescue, yet this is a provocation to all other men of England, not only his friends, but strangers also, for common humanity's sake, as my Lord Bridgman said, to endeavour his rescue; and if in such endeavour of rescue, they kill any one, that is no murder, but only manslaughter. The four other judges held it murder, and thought the case in question to be much the stronger, because the party himself who was impressed was quiet and made no resistance, and they who meddled were no friends of his or acquaintances, but mere strangers, and did not so much as desire them which had him in custody to let him go. Although all the Judges of the King's Bench thought it murder, they conformed to the opinion of the other eight, and gave judgment of imprisonment for eleven months.

"In Reg. v. Mawgridge, which was tried in 1707 (Kelyng, 136), the Chief Justice alludes to Hugget's Case as having settled the law upon the point.

"In Tooley's Case (2 Lord Raymond, 1296), which was tried in 1710, Ann Dakin was in custody of one Bray, when the prisoners, who were strangers to Dakin, assaulted Bray, but withdrew. They afterwards assaulted Bray again, after the woman had been locked up, and killed one Dent, whom Bray had called to his assistance. One of the prisoners gave the stroke, the two others were aiding and abetting. Seven of the twelve judges held this to be manslaughter, and five held it to be murder, one of the five thinking that the constable had authority. Those judges who held the offence to be manslaughter only, so held on the opinion that the prisoners had sufficient provocation, for if, say they, one be imprisoned upon an unlawful authority, it is a sufficient provocation to all people out of compassion, much more where it is done under a colour of justice, and where the liberty of the subject is invaded it is a provocation to all the subjects of England.

"In Reg. v. Adey (1 Leach, 206), which was tried in 1779, a somewhat similar point arose, and the presiding judge, on the authority of Tooley's Case, reserved the point for the consideration of the twelve judges. The prisoner escaped in the riots of 1780, and no judgment was given, but Leach says that it was understood the judges held it to be manslaughter only.

"Again, in Reg. v. Osmer (5 East, 304), argued in 1804, Lord Ellenborough, C.J., says, that 'if a man without authority attempt to arrest another illegally, it is a breach of the peace, and any other person may lawfully interfere to prevent it, doing no more than is necessary for that purpose.'

"In Reg. v. Phelps (Car. & M. 180), tried in 1841, a policeman attempted to apprehend a man on suspicion of having stolen growing potatoes. He resisted, and some persons came to his aid and killed one Southwood, whom the policeman had called to his assistance. Upon proof of these facts, Coltman, J., directed the jury that as the policeman had no right to apprehend the man the offence of those who killed Southwood was manslaughter only, and not murder.

"These appear to be the cases bearing most closely on the subject, but turning to the authority of text writers, and the dicta of judges, we find Hawkins, in his Pleas of the Crown (Book I. chap. xxxi. sec. 60), stating the law as it was laid down in Hugget's and Tooley's Cases, and adding that 'since in the event it appears that the persons slain were trespassers, covering their violence with a show of justice, he who kills them is indulged by the law, which in these cases judges by the event, which those who engage in such unlawful actions must abide at their peril.'

"Hale (P.C. vol. i. p. 465) also cites Hugget's Case, and apparently with approval.

"On the other hand, Foster, J., in his Discourse upon Crown Law (p. 312), while he appears to approve of the law as laid down in Hugget's Case, combats the doctrine of the majority of the judges in Tooley's Case, and appears to doubt the propriety of that decision, partly upon general principles, and partly because the second assault on the constable seemed to him rather to have been grounded upon resentment or a principle of revenge for what had before passed, than upon any hope or endeavour to assist the woman.

"It is these observations of Foster, J., which Alderson, B., appears to have had in his mind when he is reported to have said in Reg. v. Warner (1 Moo. C. C. 385), that Tooley's Case had been overruled. Tooley's Case had, in fact, no bearing upon Warner's Case, in which no attempt was made to arrest the prisoners at all, and Alderson, B., does not refer to any authority for his statement. A similar remark was made by Pollock, C.B., in Reg. v. Davis (Leigh & Cave, C. C. 71), but there again no authority is given.

"East, in his Pleas of the Crown, vol. i. p. 325, states the question with the arguments on either side, without shewing much leaning either way; and so does Russell (Criminal Law, vol. i. p. 632), although his editor, Mr. Greaves, from his note (p. 848 of the 4th edition), appears to have been convinced by the arguments adduced by Foster.

"It would thus seem that the doctrine laid down by the majority of the judges in the cases of Ferrers, Hugget, and Tooley, has been acted upon, not only in those cases, but also in R. v. Adey and Reg. v. Phelps, and recognised in R. v. Mawgridge, and R. v. Osmer, and by Hawkins and Hale.

"The opposite doctrine is supported by a minority of the Judges in Hugget and Tooley's Cases, and by Foster, J., and receives some sort of sanction from the observations of Alderson, B., and Pollock, C.B., if they can be considered to display a sufficiently accurate knowledge of the subject to entitle them to any weight. This view of the law, however, has never once been acted upon and it follows that if the prisoners convicted at Manchester be executed without any discussion of the law, they will be put to death in opposition to the decided cases on the subject, upon the authority solely of extra-judicial arguments and dicta.

"In some of these arguments a distinction has been taken between the interference of a friend or a relative, and that of a mere stranger; but this distinction does not appear to rest on any authority. Hawkins in his Pleas of the Crown (Book I. ch. xxxi. ss. 56 and 57), says, that 'if a man's servant, or friend, or even a stranger, coming suddenly and, seeing him fighting with another, side with him and kill the other—or, seeing his sword broken, send him another wherewith he kills the other—he is guilty of manslaughter only.' Yet in this very case, if the person killed were a bailiff, or other officer of justice, resisted by the master, &c., in the due execution of his duty, such friend, or servant, &c., are guilty of murder, whether they knew that the person slain were an officer or not.

"For these and other reasons, we are of opinion that the points raised in this case are of such a grave and serious character as to demand further discussion and consideration, and that they ought only to be decided after full and deliberate argument before the Court of Criminal Appeal.

REPLY OF MR. JUSTICE BLACKBURN.

"November 20, 1867.

"DEAR MR. SEYMOUR,

"Mr. Justice Mellor and I have received and carefully perused the paper signed by you, my brother O'Brien, and Mr. Cave.

"It contains nothing that is new to us, but it puts all the authorities in the light most favourable for your clients, and I need not say that it is a great satisfaction to us to think that nothing has been overlooked which could bear on so grave a question.

"The Legislature have by the 11th and 12th of Victoria, cap. 78, cast upon the presiding Judges the very disagreeable and invidious duty of determining whether their own view of the law at the trial is or is not so questionable as to justify an appeal. If they refuse to reserve any point made, it is still open to the prisoners to appeal to the equitable consideration of the Sovereign, but no appeal lies to any Court of law.

"In the present case my brother Mellor and I considered the points raised before us on the trial, and entertained no doubt that the direction which we then gave was strictly according to law. We, therefore, reserved no question for the Court of Appeal at the time, but simply postponed our final determination on the subject until we had the means of referring to the authorities and considering the case more at leisure. We have now considered the authorities, and have consulted the other Judges, not with a view of dividing our responsibility, nor in order to obtain a judicial opinion from them which they could not give on a point not regularly before them, but because, in a case so serious, we were very anxious to have the best advice and assistance that we could obtain for our guidance. I do not say, that if the result of such consultation and research had been to lead to the conclusion that there was doubt enough to justify a further appeal, it would have relieved us from a most painful responsibility. I regret to say that the result has been to satisfy us that the law is too clear to justify us in reserving any point for the consideration of the Court of Criminal Appeal.

"Entertaining that opinion, we have officially informed the Secretary of State for the Home Department, that there will be no further appeal to a Court of law, and that it is now for Her Majesty's Government alone to determine what shall be done with the convicts.

"This decision of ours is final ; but, as a satisfaction to you and the other Counsel for the prisoners, I will briefly state the reasons which have induced us to think the law too clear for argument.

"When a constable, or other person properly authorized, acts in the execution of his duty, the law casts a peculiar protection around him, and consequently if he is killed in the execution of his duty, it is in general murder, even though there be such circumstances of hot blood and want of premeditation as would in an ordinary case reduce the crime to manslaughter. But where the warrant under which the officer is acting is not sufficient to justify him in arresting or detaining prisoners, or there is no warrant at all, he is not entitled to this peculiar protection, and consequently the crime may be reduced to manslaughter when the offence is committed on the sudden, and is attended by circumstances affording reasonable provocation.

"The cases which you have cited are authorities that where the affray is sudden, and not premeditated, when, as Lord Holt says in R. v. Tooley (2 Lord Raymond, 1300), 'it is acting without any precedent malice or apparent design of doing hurt,' the mere fact that the arrest was not warranted may be a sufficient provocation.

"But in every one of these cases the affray was sudden and unpremeditated.

"In the present case the form of warrants adopted may be open to objection, and probably might, on application to the Court for a writ of habeas, have entitled the prisoners to be discharged from custody ; but we entirely agree with the opinion of Lord Hale (2 Pleas of the Crown) that, though defective in form, the gaoler or officer is bound to obey a warrant in this general form, and consequently is protected by it. This is a point which, had the affray been sudden and unpremeditated, we probably should have thought it right to reserve.

"In the present case, however, it was clearly proved that there was on the part of the convicts a deliberate, prearranged conspiracy to attack the police with firearms, and shoot them, if necessary, for the purpose of rescuing the two prisoners in their custody, and that they were all well aware that the police were acting in obedience to the commands of a justice of the peace, who had full power to remand the prisoners to gaol if he made a proper warrant for the purpose. It was further manifest that they attempted the rescue in perfect ignorance of any defect in the warrant, and that they knew well that if there was any defect in the warrant, or illegality in the custody, that the courts of law were open to an application for their release from custody. We think it would be monstrous to suppose that under such circumstances, even if the justice did make an informal warrant, it could justify the slaughter of an officer in charge of the prisoners, or reduce such slaughter to the crime of manslaughter.

"To cast any doubt upon this subject would, we think, be productive of the most serious mischief, by discouraging the police in the performance of their duties, and by encouraging the lawless in a disregard of the authority of the law.

"We feel bound, under these circumstances, to decline to take a course which might lead to the belief that we considered the matter as open to doubt.

"COLIN BLACKBURN."

(TO CHAPTER XXXII.)

LIBEL.

The statement of the law of libel contained in this chapter is, I believe, complete, though it is very short in comparison to the standard works on the subject.

Folkard's edition of Starkie on Slander and Libel consists of 775 large 8vo pages, besides an appendix of statutes. It contains much other matter besides a definition of the crime of libel; but that definition and the explanation of the offence itself, fill more than 150 pages.

The greater part of this mass of matter consists of illustrations, but something is also due to the singularly complicated manner in which the law has grown up.

The word "malicious" in reference to the offence of libel has been elaborated by the judges into a whole body of doctrine on the subject in the same sort of way as the words "malice aforethought" in the definition of murder.

The process was of this sort. Malice was first divided into malice in fact and malice in law—malice in fact being personal spite, and malice in law being defined to be "a wrongful act done intentionally, and without just cause or excuse."

Inasmuch as the publication of a libel must always be intentional, and inasmuch as the Courts held that to publish defamatory matter of another was, generally speaking, a wrongful act, the result of this was that every publication of defamatory matter was a crime, unless there was some just cause or excuse for it. What amounts to a "just cause or excuse" was decided by a multitude of cases. The phraseology employed in their decision has been as follows. Defamatory matter which it was considered lawful to publish has been described as a "privileged communication." This "privilege" has been regarded as rebutting the presumption of malice arising from the fact of publication; and it has further been divided into absolute privilege and qualified privilege—absolute if it justifies the publication, whatever may be the state of mind of the publisher; qualified if it justifies such publication only under particular circumstances, as, for instance, when the publisher in good faith believes the defamatory matter to be true, when the defamatory matter actually is true, and its publication is for the public good, &c.

The law thus falls into the singular condition of a sec-saw between two legal fictions, Implied Malice on the one hand, and privilege absolute or qualified on the other.

I will give a single instance of the intricacy to which this leads. A. writes of B. to C., "B. is a thief." Here the law implies malice from the words used. It appears that B. was a servant, who had been employed by A., and was trying to get into C.'s employment, and that A.'s letter was in answer to an inquiry from C. Here the occasion of publication raises a qualified privilege in A., viz., the privilege of saying to C. that B. is a thief qualified by the condition that A. really thinks that he is one, and the qualified privilege rebuts the implied malice presumed from the fact of publishing the defamatory matter. B., however, proves not only that he was not a thief, but that A. must have known it when he said that he was. This raises a presumption of express malice, or malice in fact in A., and proof of the existence of express malice overturns the presumption against implied malice raised by the proof of the qualified privilege.

This machinery of express and implied malice and qualified and absolute privilege is only a roundabout and intricate way of saying that as a general rule it is a crime to publish defamatory matter; that there are, however, certain exceptions to that rule by virtue of which it is not a crime to defame a man—

(a) If the defamatory matter is true, and its publication is for the public good.

(b) Although the defamatory matter is false,

(i.) if the libeller in good faith believes it to be true, and publishes it for certain specified reasons.

(ii.) Although he knows it to be false, if he publishes it in a particular character.

By working out this scheme, and stating in general terms that the publication of a libel is always malicious unless it falls within one or more of the specified exceptions, the intricate fictions about malice in law and in fact, and absolute and qualified privilege, may be dispensed with. They are merely the scaffolding behind which the house was built, and now that the house is convenient and proximately complete, the scaffold may be taken down.

NOTE XI.

(TO ARTICLE 281, ON POSSESSION IN RELATION TO THE LAW OF LARCENY).

I do not think it would be possible to assign to the expressions "possession," "actual possession," "constructive possession," "legal possession," senses which would explain and reconcile all the passages in which these phrases occur in works of authority. Some of them indeed are absolutely contradictory. Thus is it said that the taking in larceny must be a taking out of the possession of the owner. It is also said that the owner retains the legal possession notwithstanding the larceny. If both of these propositions were true, it would follow that larceny could never be committed at all. Again, we are told on the other hand that the taking in larceny must be a taking out of the possession of the owner, the inference from which would naturally be that when a thing is out of the owner's possession it cannot be stolen. We are then told, in order to avoid this conclusion, that a thing is always in its owner's possession; so that a box of plate at the bottom of the Thames, things of the existence of which the owner is not aware, as money vested in him as executor, and which without his knowledge is in the actual custody of another person,¹ or a dead rabbit in his wood, are all in the owner's possession and capable of being taken out of it. This way of stating the matter makes the assertion that the taking in larceny must be a taking out of the owner's possession insignificant. If, from the nature of the case, every taking must be a taking out of the possession of the owner, it is impossible to see how the takings which do, differ from those which do not, constitute larceny. All men, being mortal, it is useless to define an Englishman as a mortal man living in England. However, though it is impossible either to justify the manner in which the word "possession" is used, or to free it entirely from the fictions with which it has been connected, it is, I think, not impossible to define it in such a manner as to express all the distinctions which it is intended to mark in language differing very slightly, if at all, from that which has generally been used upon the subject.

As I have shewn in the articles on theft, and in the notes upon them, there are five different ways in which theft can be committed viz :—

1. By taking and carrying away goods which do not belong to the thief from any place where they happen to be.
2. By converting property entrusted by the owner to a servant.
3. By obtaining the possession of property (as distinguished from the right of property) from the owner by fraud with intent to convert it.
4. By converting property given by the owner to the thief under a mistake.
5. By converting property bailed to the thief.

¹ A. put 900 guineas in a secret drawer in a bureau and died. B., her son and executor, lent the bureau to his brother C., who took it to India, kept it there for several years, and brought it back. B. then sold it to D., who gave it to E. to repair, who found the money. This was held to be such a taking by E. out of the possession of A. as to constitute larceny. Cartwright v. Green, 8 Ves. 405.

It will be found upon consideration that the distinctions between these cases all arise out of the doctrine of possession, but it is, I think, less generally perceived that the important point is not the taking out of the possession of the owner, but the taking into the possession of the thief. The five cases in question may be thus arranged:—

In No. 1 (common larceny) the thief has neither the possession nor the custody of the stolen property at the time when the theft is committed, and it is immaterial whether the owner has it or not.

In No. 2 (larceny by a servant) the thief at the time of his offence may have either the custody or the possession. If he has the custody his offence is theft. If he has the possession his offence is embezzlement.

In No. 3. (larceny by trick) the thief obtains the possession by a mistake, caused by his own fraud.

In No. 4 (larceny by taking advantage of a mistake) the thief receives the possession by a mistake not caused by his own fraud.

In No. 5 (larceny by a bailee) the thief receives the possession under a contract of bailment.

Besides this view of the subject the doctrine of possession is important in relation to procedure, and in that case the matter to be considered is not the possession of the thief but the possession of the owner. It is necessary in indictments for theft that the ownership of the stolen property should be correctly stated, and as possession constitutes special ownership (at all events, as against a thief) it is important, with a view to this subject, to understand what possession implies.

Passing from the law upon this subject, let us examine the facts to which the law applies—the different relations which, as a fact, exist between men and things—in reference to the common use of language.

The most obvious case of possession is that of a person who holds something in his hand. But it must appear upon the slightest consideration that neither this nor any other physical act whatever can be accepted as more than an outward symbol of the state of things which the word denotes. Unless the article possessed is very small, part of it only can be held in the hand, trodden on by the foot, or so dealt with by any other part of the possessor's body as to exclude a similar dealing with it by others. It would however, I think, be felt by every one that neither actual bodily contact with an object, nor even exclusive bodily contact with it, was essential to what, in the common use of language, is meant by possession. No one would think of using different words to express the relation of a man to a coin clenched in his fist, to a pocketbook in his pocket, to a portmanteau of which he carried one end and a railway porter the other, to a carriage in which he was seated whilst his servant was driving it, to a book on the shelves of his library, and to the plate in his pantry under the charge of his butler. He would, in the common use of language, be said to be in possession of all these things, and no one would feel any difficulty in perceiving the correctness of the expression even if it were added that he was not the owner of any one of them, that some had been lent, and others let to hire to him. On the other hand, any one but a lawyer would be surprised at the assertion that a man, whether the owner or not, was in possession of a watch which he had dropped into the Thames, of sheep which had been stolen from his field and driven to a distance by the thief, of a dead grouse which, having been wounded at a distance from his moor, had managed to reach it and die there without his knowledge or that of any other person.

The common feature of all the cases to which the word "possession" would obviously be applicable is easily recognised. It is to be found in the fact, that the person called the possessor has in each instance the power to act as if he were the owner of the thing possessed, whether he actually is the owner or not. Several of the illustrations given, however, shew that though this is one of the things which the word conveys, it is not the only thing conveyed by it. The butler in charge of the plate, the porter helping to carry the portmanteau, the coachman who is driving the coach, have the physical power of acting as the owner of those things as much as their master or employer. Indeed, in two of the three cases their physical control over the object is more direct than his. The difference is that the circumstances are such as to raise a presumption that their intention is to act under the orders of their superior, and that he (at least for the present) has no definite superior whose orders he intends to obey. Take, for instance, the case of a dinner party: there is no visible difference between the master of the house and his guests; each uses the article which he requires for the moment, and they are, from time to time, removed from place to place by the servants; as, however, the master retains throughout not merely the legal right to dispose of them absolutely, but the immediate means of enforcing that right if from any strange circumstance it should become necessary to do so, the assertion that the plate is in his possession, and that his guests and servants have merely a permission to use it under his control, has a plain meaning : nor would that meaning be altered or obscured if the fact were added that the plate did not belong to the master of the house, but was hired by him for the occasion. Indeed, if he had stolen the plate, or received it knowing it to be stolen, the fact denoted by the word "possession" would remain. These illustrations, which might be multiplied to any extent, appear to me to shew clearly that possession means, in the common use of language, a power to act as the owner of a thing, coupled with a presumable intention to do so in case of need ; and that the custody of a servant, or person, in a similar position, does not exclude the possession by another, but differs from it in the presumable intention of the custodian to act under the orders of the possessor with reference to the thing possessed, and to give it up to him if he requires it. Thus far, I think, my definitions correspond with the common use of language, though of course popular language upon such a subject is not, nor is there any reason why it should be, minutely exact.¹

I will now compare it with the way in which the word is used by legal authorities. I know of no set dissertations on the subject of the use of the word "possession" in English law like those which are to be found in abundance upon the corresponding word in Roman law. It would be an endless and a useless labour to go through the cases in which the word has been used, endless on account of their great number, useless because it is the characteristic of English judges to care little for technical niceties of language in comparison with substantial clearness of statement in reference to the actual matter in hand. Upon such a matter as this accordingly, it is better to consider the different authorities in groups than individually.

Possession (in reference to the subject of theft) is usually divided into two branches—actual possession and constructive possession.

It seems to have been pretty generally assumed that the words

"actual possession" were sufficiently plain for practical purposes without further explanation; but it would be easy to shew, by a multitude of cases, that actual possession differs from possession as I have defined it only in one point. It is usual to say that a thing in the possession of a servant on account of his master is only constructively in the possession of the master. But the expression "constructive possession" has another meaning besides this. As it was considered necessary that a thing stolen should be taken out of the possession of the owner, and as in very many instances goods are stolen which are not in any natural sense in the possession of any one whatever, it has become a maxim that goods are always in the possession of the owner; if not in his actual, then in his constructive possession, or, as it is sometimes called, in his legal possession.

Thus, constructive possession means:—

1. The possession of goods in the custody of a servant on account of his master, and
2. The purely fictitious possession which the owner of goods is supposed to have, although they are in reality possessed by no one at all.

The phrase thus appears to me to be objectionable, not only because it is ambiguous, but because, in the first of its two senses, it conceals a truth, whilst in the second it needlessly conveys a false impression. The truth concealed is that a man may have, and may intend to use, the power implied in the word "possession," although he acts through a servant. The false impression conveyed is that things cannot be out of possession, or that if they are, they cannot be stolen.

I avoid this by abstaining altogether from the use of the expression "constructive possession." In "possession" I include that which has to be exercised through a servant, and my language implies, that a person may commit theft on objects which are not in the possession of any one at the time of the theft. The existing law may by these means be expressed in well-recognised and established phraseology, without any resort to legal fictions.

The point upon which the most subtle questions as to possession arise, is the distinction between theft and embezzlement—a perfectly useless distinction, no doubt, and one which the legislature has on two separate occasions vainly tried to abolish. So long, however, as it is allowed to exist, it is necessary to understand it.

I have already explained how a man may retain the possession of a thing of which he gives his servant the custody. He retains a power over the thing which is not the less real or effective because he has to exercise it through the will of another person, who has undertaken to be the instrument of his will. Suppose, however, that instead of the master's having given his horse to his groom or his plate to his butler, a horsedealer has delivered the horse to the groom, or a silversmith has delivered plate to the butler for his master: I should have thought that there was no real difference between these cases; that inasmuch as the servant in each case was acting for the master in the discharge of a duty towards him, and under an agreement to execute his orders, the master would come into possession of the horse or the plate as soon as his servant received it from the dealer or the silversmith, just as he remains in possession of the horse or the plate when he gives the custody of it to his groom or his butler. I should also have thought that the servant who appropriated his master's property to his own use, after receiving it from another on his master's account, was for all purposes in precisely the same position as the servant who did the same thing after receiving it from his master. The Courts, however, decided otherwise. They have held on many occasions that, though the master's possession continues when he gives the custody of a thing to his servant, it does not begin when the servant receives anything on account of his master; on the contrary, the servant has the possession, as distinguished from the custody, until he does some act which vests the possession in his master, though it may leave the custody in himself. If during that interval he appropriates the thing, he commits embezzlement. If afterwards, theft. The most pointed illustration of this singular doctrine which can be given occurs in the case of B. v. Reid (Dear. 257). B. sent A., his servant, with a cart to fetch coals. A. put the coals into the cart, and on the way home sold some of them and kept the money. A. was convicted of larceny, and the question was whether he ought to have been convicted of embezzlement. It was held that the conviction was right, because though A. had the custody of the cart all along, yet the possession of it and its contents was in B., and though A. had the possession of the coals whilst he was carrying them to the cart, that possession was reduced to a mere custody when they were deposited in the cart, so that A.'s offence was larceny, and not embezzlement, which it would have been if he had misappropriated the coals before they were put into the cart.

These explanations will, I hope, render the article in the Digest intelligible. In order to justify it legally, it is necessary to state the manner in which I arrived at it. I examined a large number of cases, of which I have put eleven in the form of illustrations to the article. In some of these cases it was decided that the offence was theft; in others that the offence was embezzlement. I have assumed (as I was entitled to do, as appears from the explanations given above) that whenever an offence was held to be theft the property stolen was in the possession of the owner or master, although it might be in the custody of a guest or servant; and that whenever the offence was held to be embezzlement the property embezzled was in the possession, as distinguished from the custody, of the servant. I might easily have enlarged the number of illustrations to any conceivable extent; but if those given are not enough to make the matter plain, I despair of making it plain or understanding it, and I do not wish to make it darker than it is. It is, perhaps, just worth while to add once more, that I am in this work merely stating, and not attempting to justify, the law. The technicalities on this subject appear to me to be altogether superfluous, and I think they might be easily dispensed with by re-defining the offence of theft, or even by removing the distinction between theft, embezzlement, and false pretences.
